By this method, Woods declared that he hopes to avoid "sweetheart contracts" which he defined as a "giveaway of the actors' rights." He alleged that there were several sweetheart deals negotiated by previous administrations in which the casts of the shows involved were not consulted. "No wonder, so many performers hate us," he added.

Woods also feels that by having a rank and file committee sit in on the negotiations, the performers can see how the union operates and will be cognizant of the difficulties involved in reaching an equitable contract.

Fire Guts Ga. Cafe

Atlanta, Jan. 21.

Investigators termed "suspicious" a fire that destroyed The Party, a nightclub on Peachtree Road, Sunday (12). Spot was owned and operated by "Bud" Turner, who also o&os downtown Peachtree and Anchorage Supper Club in Clermont Hotel.

Fire Investigator Lt. K. G. Davis said a witness saw two men running from the rear of the building an hour before first alarm was sounded.

Chi's Aragon Ballroom To Become Roller Rink

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Theatre owners Oscar Brotman and Leonard Sherman have purchased the Aragon Ballroom and will convert it into a roller skating rink. One of the top dancehalls in the country since it was built by the Karzas family in 1926, the Aragon was Wayne King's debut spot in 1927. King and his orch will return for a "Farewell to the Aragon" weekend Feb. 7-8-9.

Other big name bands which frequented the Aragon in the '20s and '30s included Lawrence Welk, Paul Whiteman and Guy Lombardo.

BOMB AGAIN ROCKS CHICAGO'S SAHARA INN

Chicago, Jan. 21.

The many-chaptered Sahara Inn motel was bombed for the second time in four months last Thursday (16). The explosion jarred Allan Jones, who is appearing in the hostelry's Sultan's Table, and knocked bandleader Fred Waring off a couch in Jones' suite. The motel was purchased by Gene Autry last July for $7,000,000 after it fell into receivership under the ownership of Manny Skar.

General manager Irwin Schlicht said that he was at a loss to explain the bombing, which did 10 times as much dollar damage as the Sept. 16 explosion. One prevalent theory is that mobsters were seeking to embarrass Sheriff Richard Ogilvie, who only a few days earlier had raided a batch of peel parlors and gambling joints in Cicero, Chi's neighbor on the west and a longtime centre for gang-dominated stripperies and gambling houses.

Ogilvie not only raided 17 joints, but left his deputies to patrol the streets full time.

2 A.C. Hotels Again Set 'Cruise Parties' to Hypo That Slow Off-Season Biz

Atlantic City, Jan. 21.

Two top beachfront hotels here, to perk up what might be bare off-season weekends, plan "cruise parties" during the three winter months. Chalfonte-Haddon Hall again will stage three such affairs, while Dennis again plans one.

Chalfonte-Haddon Hall will have its annual Caribbean cruise Feb. 7-9; "Paris in the Spring," Feb. 28-29, and March 1, and the Hawaiian-South Seas weekend March 20-22.

The Dennis, again changing its format, will have an Atlantic City Houseparty with a salute to a number of the seashore features the weekend of March 6-8. Last year it was a Scandinavian weekend at the Dennis.

The "cruise" events at Chalfonte-Haddon Hall have been a feature of the big hotel's winter events for the past dozen years and have increased in popularity each year.

The hotel transforms portions of its public lounges into authentic Caribbean villages, Paris' Montmartre and Left Bank sections, Hawaiian beaches and South Sea Island villages. Some 75 entertainers and musicians are used in the various nitery setups.

ly conduct. The police have been known periodically to arrest the homos camping out in the streets. It is to be admitted that the situation in this department has been improved considerably following police action.

New York's image was said to have been harmed by the recent David Susskind show on the DuPont Hour on NBC-TV, "Terror in the Subway," in which a pair of youths terrorized a subway car during the early morning hours. The Transit Authority protested this show as giving a false picture of New York. The day after the show's presentation, a New York City detective was slain by hoods in one of the city's subway cars.

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

The Orient, a $22,000,000 Oriental recreation-commercial project, is scheduled to rise on 40 acres of land across the street from Disneyland in Anaheim. It will house a broad range of amusement, entertainment and commercial offerings —all Oriental-tinged, Oriental in architecture and to be operated mainly by Oriental merchants, according to John J. Magrann, founder-developer of the project.

Welcoming visitors through a Moon Gate in a 25-foot high Great Wall of China, The Orient will include attractions ranging from magic carpet rides over a man-made Yellow Sea, to sales rooms and exhibits of export-import firms.

Preliminary plans for the development have been completed for Mangrann by Tom & Truskier, Anaheim architectural firm. "Our management team for The Orient, which will include nationally-known executives in key posts, is set," Mangrann said. "Announcement of names will be made soon."

Palmer House, Chi, Ends Fiddler's 38-Year Run

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Ralph Ginsburgh, who fronted and fiddled with a string ensemble at the Palmer House for 38 years, has been let go by the hotel. Until a recent illness, the Ginsburgh ensemble had been playing in the Empire Room for lunch and in the Town & Country lounge in the evening.

Ginsburgh, now 71, was a professional concert violinist at age 10, and a few years later was playing in the pit band for silent films. He went to the Palmer House in 1926, and had a remote broadcast over WGN from 1932 to 1946.

expenses except eat, sleep and pay taxes.

"I didn't work at all last summer and if not for friends, I couldn't get by," said Miss O'Day, here for three weeks of dates. She has three weeks slated at The Losers in Hollywood next month and after that, there's nothing on her schedule. But talks are already underway for a return tour of Japan. Miss O'Day has also played England and Sweden in recent years.

What opened the jet-stream circuit for Miss O'Day after 20 years on the road in the U.S. was her appearance in a color film documenting a portion of the 1958 Newport Jazz Festival called "Jazz on a Summer's Day," made by Bert Stern and a winner of arty acclaim.

While pleased with the opportunity to country-hop, Miss O'Day sees no bright prospects for acceleration of her career in the U.S. "Jazz is considered the lowest," she said. "Did you ever notice that people walk down to a jazz club, never up?"

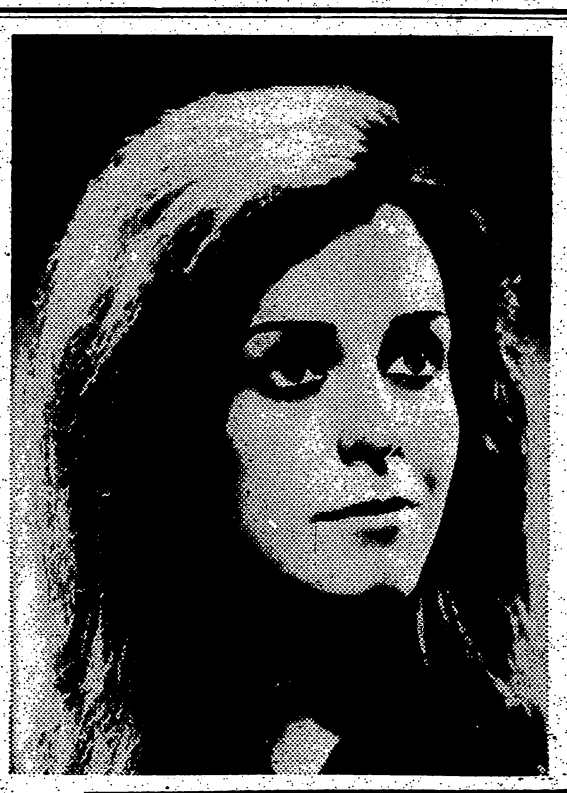
Mpls. Pancake House Batters Up Act Policy

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

Even the pancake houses here are now going in for floorshows, thus falling into line with local supper clubs and the more pretentious dining places that qualify as niteries.

At least, one of them, Uncle John's Pancake House, has announced its intention to provide entertainment along with its pancakes, starting Feb. 1. At the outset, however, the shows only will come on Saturdays and will be designed primarily for youngster audiences.

Entertainment hostess will be Patty Hicks, a onetime television child entertainer and now grown-up. Two local film exhibitors, Martin Lebedoff and Charles Rubenstein, are Uncle John's owners.



CAROLYN HESTER

"... She sings as well as she looks." SATURDAY REVIEW

EDINBURGH INTER'L FESTIVAL
"But the show was stolen by Carolyn Hester. She had the audience shouting for encores. The versatility of her voice is amazing—one moment soaring delicately, then swiftly changing to forceful low notes. For so young a singer, the maturity of her style is marvelous. Already rated one of the top folk-singers in the United States, she is making a name for herself in Britain."
EDINBURGH SCOTSMAN

TIME MAGAZINE
"... has looks and a gift for appearing as if she were delivering the Truth every time she steps up to a microphone."

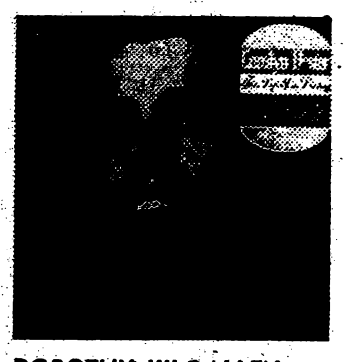
NEW YORK TIMES
"... a broad vocal range from rooftop soprano to some stunning chest tones. Miss Hester has technique to spare and a warm, believable stage manner. An impressive debut."

THE PROVINCE, VANCOUVER
"Carolyn Hester has a beautiful, extraordinarily alluring voice. It ranges from the purest bell tinkle to a strong chest tone. She is also fortunate in having a beautiful face and thoroughly professional approach to her audience. She not only compels her listeners to really listen but creates a subtle atmosphere with her singing which seems to season the lyrics. To put it more crudely, she's a gas."

ROYAL FESTIVAL HALL, LONDON
"Then the single spotlight picked out the shapely, long haired Texan, Carolyn Hester, whose haunting voice and quiet guitar brought complete peace to the hall, as many here have seen her do before."
LONDON EXPRESS

TORONTO TELEGRAM
"On the postage stamp stage at the Purple Onion, a wide-eyed stare on her fresh face, she throws back her hair which flows to the small of her back and hushes the audience with a ballad. After the first song, it's so quiet even the 'flick' of a cigarette almost resounds through the narrow, crowded club. Carolyn's husky-throated intense voice is like a soft finger pressing against the lips."

VILLAGE VOICE
"... Sliding from tremulous highs down to a sexy, effectively guttural middle range, she was no longer a little girl with long hair perched on a night-club stool. She became the New Orleans woman of the song—angry, remorseful, bitterly accepting her life."



DOROTHY KILGALLEN
". . Carolyn Hester's new Columbia LP 'This Life I'm Living' is due to hit the stores next week and is expected to zoom the hauntingly beautiful Texan right to the top."

House Review

Olympia, Paris

Paris, Jan. 9.

Colette Dereal, Leny Escudero, Alice Dona, Nicolas Remon, Cerva Scena (7), Maxwells (2), Niemens (3), Roger Comte, Suzanne Gabriello, Daniel Janin Orch (21); $3.90 top.

After practically devoting itself to rock shows, the Olympia has returned to a more straight format. Show's two headliners have been culled from among the big regular recordsellers. There's also a rock entry for the young clientele, and a series of good vaude numbers.

While the toppers may not be surefire draws it is a generally okay show and good results are probably in store for its three-week tenure.

Colette Dereal was an actress who worked her way up as a singer via operettas and disks. Her's is a pleasant voice and she has a pert presence. But the true musicianship, musical flair and right songalog elude her. She is listed under New Acts as is dramatic singer Leny Escudero.

Alice Dona is a young rocker with good rhythmic style for local use but lacks a sense of projection which could make her an export possibility. Nicolas Remon has some witty lyrics delivered in a bright manner that mark him more a boite than vaude performer.

Cerva Scena is an inventive mixed puppet and real people presentation that has originality and intelligence. It warrants U.S. vaude and cabaret attention. Group is duly noted under New Acts.

Roger Comte is a pleasant patter comic with bright material and presentation. Maxwells are two sad-sack types who manage to do excellent hand-to-hand interludes and acrobatics to stamp them a fine staple filler.

Niemens are a bounding acro act trio, also welcome for house filler needs. Suzanne Gabriello is an acidulous femcee. Daniel Janin Orch does yeoman backing work and an okay medley, quite listenable, on their own. Mosk.

Video Hall, Tokyo

Tokyo, Jan. 14.

Musashi Promotions presentation of Anita O'Day with Bob Corwin on piano, Mitsuko Miyake, Westliners (6); $3.34 top.

Off impression made at this afternoon session, Anita O'Day merits rediscovery by the major jazz rooms. The husky-voiced, attractive blond showed lotsa personality and savvy as she sang her way through more than 15 standards in the first and last segments of a three-part concert in this cozy 500-seat auditorium.

The pioneer hip girl singer takes plenty of chances to achieve off-melody effects. While some naturally don't pay off, enough click to give Miss O'Day the personal stamp that still qualifies her as a first-rate jazz stylist.

Songstress was in a playful mood for this outing. Wearing white gloves (and a suit), she used her hands for supplementary expression that wrung maximum values from the lyrics. Carrying the hand mike to each of her accompanists on many numbers, she coaxed solos from the musicians. This ad libbing of arrangements added smartly to the informal atmosphere.

Thrush received good mitting throughout. While she leaned toward such uptempo tunes as "Who Cares?", "Lady Is a Tramp" and "Honeysuckle Rose," she also won with ballads, including "Tenderly" and "Gone With the Wind." Finale was a jamming "Tea for Two" with all horns up front alongside Miss O'Day.

Much to her credit, despite a second concert the same evening, Miss O'Day didn't attempt to shortchange her audience. She performed as if its members understood every word and particularly captured the house with her amusingly friendly dealings with the Nipponese tooters—which added up to showmanship. Piano support by Bob Corwin was fittingly clubby and his accomping permitted Miss O'Day the desired freedom in her vocalistics.

In the middle segment of the show, jazz thrush Mitsuko Miyake, one of Japan's best, did three numbers. Her control and pronunciation of English has improved since last time caught. She scored most effectively with ballad, "When I Fall in Love."

The Westliners played throughout, aiding Corwin in backing Miss O'Day, working behind Miss Miyake and blowing on their own for a coupla numbers. One of Japan's top combos, the group seemed more secure in ensemble than on solo rides. Jamp.

Exits Hawaii Visitors Bureau

Honolulu, Jan. 21.

Charles G. Braden, general manager of the Hawaii Visitors Bureau since 1959, has resigned, as of April 1. He plans to join a local travel firm.

Directors accepted his resignation "with regret."

Inside Stuff—Vaude

Elected president of the Midwest Showmens Assn. at its annual meeting here last week, William Stanley, owner of the Stanley Shows, told St. Paul Pioneer Press staff writer Jackie Germann that the carnival business is probably the world's only business in which "a shoeshine boy without a penny of savings but with enough guts" can wind up the proprietor of a $500,000 entertainment enterprise, as he has done.

"While it's easy to sink between $250,000 and $500,000 in the carnival business," Stanley said, "I also found it possible to start with very little capital and grow each year, and others can do the same thing, I'm sure. A new ferris wheel costs $15,000. But in our business we trust each other, and you can buy one from another owner and pay for it when you have the cash."

Winnipeg city council has asked the health and public welfare committee to study the feasibility of requiring circus and carnival aerialists who perform more than 20 feet above ground level to wear protective belts or wires, or to be protected by nets. Move was prompted by council's concern that "eventually there is going to be a serious accident." Also pointed out in discussion was the fact that performers used safety belts in rehearsals, and could do so in actual performances without detracting from the act. If committee approves the motion it will be established by an amendment to the city's licensing bylaw.

A scheduled Chi testimonial dinner celebrating 50 years in show biz for the vaude team of Butterbeans & Susie has been changed to a memorial benefit as a result of the death of Susie Edwards last month. Memorial program has been set for Feb. 9 at the El Sid Trianon Ballroom on Chicago's south side. Proceeds from the benefit will be deposited with a bank and disbursed over a period of time to Jodie (Butterbeans) Edwards and other surviving relatives of the late Susie. Butterbeans & Susie were among the earliest of the Negro acts to play the major vaude circuits.

A number of spots suddenly came up with a gorgeous crop of waitresses, in place of the former men. Checkroom and cigarette vending gals all are wearing about as little as the law allows and leave little to the imagination as far as the femmes' figures are concerned.

One supper club, the White House, inaugurated bikini fashion shows. It's still holding them.

The 1964 addition to date is a "lingerie fashion show" five days a week at the Downtowner Motel's Davey Jones Locker. In newspaper adds it's called "a bonus hors d' oeuvre for cocktail hour enjoyment—a Davey Jones special." Patrons are promised "gorgeous models displaying the latest in fashion lingerie for all seasons."

Of course, even before the federal edict regarding income tax deductions a number of the lesser spots had striptease performers. They still do.

A new feeling in popular music.

An Open Letter to Struggling Talent—

On December 4th I opened a supper pub in the wilds of far away New Jersey.

Since that day I have gone thru hell trying to book good talent on a 5 day basis.

I have worked with three New York and two New Jersey agencies.

I have suffered the loss of good business with poor talent. The past two week-ends I have gone to over 30 clubs in the Metropolitan area and have come to the conclusion that show biz is in trouble.

Where is the talent that wouldn't mind traveling 50 miles to go to work?

Where is the talent that can work from 9:30 to 1:30 Wed. thru Sat. and from 6 to 10 on Sunday?

Where is the talent that can sing a song or play a good piano, a banjo, a guitar or a comb?

Where is the talent that's tired of waiting for that recording date, that TV commercial or that big engagement come next Spring?

Oh yes, and where is that talent that can work for a good wage with a struggling club owner?

Where are you?

Call—Wed. thru Sun. after 5 P.M.

JULIE LONDON & FOUR Songs
40 Mins.
Deauville, Miami Beach

Julie London has played a couple of nightclub dates prior to this outing—her first in this area—but is now being presented in a new act obviously staged for class hotel locations and the big niteries.

Eschewing the usual complement for this type act: a conductor-pianist and basic musicians, she instead has been given a foursome of solid songsters who on occasion come up with an instrumental bit. The accent, in the main, is on solo and harmony with the expertly blended male vocalists.

Idea is a wise one. Miss London doesn't have the big pipings to make it as a straight single in a big spot such as this inn's Casanova Room. Thanks to the smart lighting, ditto gowning and those vocal blendings she comes off in good style. Once the tightening is applied, the sultry, attractive thrush should be a good bet for the video-variety guesters as well as the cafe circuit.

Arrangement concepts are artful, adroitly balanced and highly imaginative to provide the class stamp. There are one-chorus ideas that keep the pace on the upbeat, allowing for constant change of mood to sustain interest.

Use of the male backers is also adroit, with Miss London becoming part of a quintet to hit peaks. Wheels off with "Julie, Julie" by the aides for the walk-on, then sets up "Fly Me To The Moon," "Send For Me," "Time For August," an offbeat and effective version of "Bill Bailey" and a zinging "Trolley Song" in which the group work as one.

Tongue-in-cheek work-in of that Marlboro ciggie commercial should have the sponsor paying the cafe op for a smart plug. There's a change of gown, intro of "the Julie London Four" and into "Basin Street," "Kansas City" and reprises of recording clicks "Cry Me A River" et al. Lulls in the overall presentation probably will be eliminated via tightening.

Lary.

RONNIE DAVID
Songs
25 Mins.
Rendezvous Room, L.A.

Ronnie David, Houston, Tex., boy with a good potential singing voice and adept piano accomplishments, made his Los Angeles bow with sufficient aplomb to indicate he may well build to the introductory praise of his mentor, Liberace.

The 22-year-old, at this point, works best at piano, the keyboard giving him security that provides free, smooth and pleasant vocal delivery. He has a degree of style and showmanship although obviously influenced by Liberace. Even his selection of piano stylings including "Misty," a la Erroll Garner, and "Autumn Leaves," tributing Roger Williams, has much of the rippling flair and style typical of Liberace.

As a standup singer, youngster concentrates on big, romantic belt style, hits best work in high sustained areas where his otherwise often tight, back voice tones open up and come through with clarity and strength. He needs considerable work on lower tones and softer delivery, where he lacks support.

David also should stick to pops or even big ballads, in preference to operatic delivery which also shows limitations and will not be his forte in future performances anyway. Best tune in show caught was "The Good Life," also his own piano backing. Dale.

THE ELITES
Dances, Songs
Gatineau Club, Hull, Que.

Second date in two months at Joe Saxe's modern-painting-hung Gatineau Club for the Elites, a long-and-shapely-legged pair of "gypsy" dancers (they can do all kinds) who also sing acceptably. They're breaking in a new act, greatly improved since previously caught and now ready for wider exposure. Both are lookers with personality.

English-born Pat Wray, more experienced half of the team (Montreal-born Diana D'Orsay is the newer half) has choreographed at the Moulin Rouge in Brussels; followed Mme. Komarova handling the Latin Quarterish shows at Montreal's now razed Bellevue Casino; has dittoed for Al Siegel at Barclay Hotel and O'Keefe Centre (a benefit) in Toronto; and is staff choreographer of Associated Productions, Montreal. She routined the dance-hall can-can sequences in National Film Board of Canada's "The Yukon" and has done some tv work. She's teeing a line at Chateau de Blois Hotel, Trois Rivieres, Que., Jan. 27, for a month and later taking it to Faisan Bleu club, Montreal.

The Elites open in fur-edged skirts—black for blond Miss Wray, white for brunet Miss D'Orsay—below jeweled, deep-cleft tops. Ballet steps segue into Spanish, with a zesty dash of jota. Off come the skirts and they go into offbeat, eccentric, moderne terping. Following another act they return in gold costumes with fringe skirts for a vocal workover of "December in May," "Vo-De-O-Do" and Walter Donaldson's "Yes Sir That's My Baby." Then, donning skimmers and swinging canes, they zip into Charleston, Black Bottom and Varsity Drag—nostalgic as all get out. Preceding the '20s seg, Miss D'Orsay does a nifty eccentric acro-tap solo.

The Elites are an exceptional supporting act, with plenty of class for supper clubs—where they might drop or condense the oft-done 20's stuff——and for other spots where lively offbeat terp (on which they'd be wise to concentrate) is appreciated. Gard.

MAIZE & O'CONLON
Comedy, Music
45 Mins.
Riverside, Reno

Joe Maize and Marty O'Conlon, both vets on the Nevada nitery scene, have combined talents to form a new act that shows much potential. Maize formerly headed his own group called the Cordsmen, and O'Conlon has worked with several groups familiar on the Nevada circuit.

Duo is polishing several routines with assured comedic values and sight appeal that could become trademarks. In the instrumental department (Maize on steel console and O'Conlon on accordion) two have already proved their proficiency, as evidenced on Decca labels. Maize is a master at making his steel "talk' while he himself mouths the words for unerring interpretation. On the straight instrumentals he also shows he's highly knowledgeable. O'Conlon is well schooled on the accordion and is more than capable on vocals, be it solo or in tandem with partner.

Opener (on set caught) was a spirited "Pagan Love Song," followed by "Ciribiribon," accenting Maize's skill on the steel. Boys throw out some good lines on a "Gunsmoke" snoof, make like the hootenanny set on "Gotta Travel On," and w'n good hand for a space pilot takeoff. Two play it serious on an impressive vocal duo of "Believe In Me," scripted by O'Conlon and slated for Decca release. Two can the show with Maize's riotous carbon of a stripper. Maize makes full use of his physiognomic abilities, which include an escalating Adam's apple. Two are backed by drums and bass.

Maize & O'Conlon have an act that's sure to click in many situations. Long.

PAM HYATT
Songs
35 Min.
Savarin, Toronto

Taking a sabbatical from her appearances in tv comedy roles, Pam Hyatt is breaking in a new act at the Savarin, Toronto. The statuesque redhead has special material written for her by Bernie Orenstein, lyricist, and Bill Butler, composer; with all other arrangements by Rudy Toth.

After her original opening, she segues into a comedy treatment of "They All Laughed," for change of pace, a medley leading into "You're Nobody," and a rousing begoff to "Hardhearted Hannah" and "Bill Bailey." Paradoxically, Miss Hyatt's tender "Little Girl Blue" and "Little Boy" score on charm, despite her more raucous numbers.

Songstress was clad in a green velvet coat, jet-beaded bodice and slinky green velvet skirt when caught on first of her twice-nightly appearances. Miss Hyatt, a gifted comedienne, alternately belts out the lyrics with facial expression and the necessary guttural undertones.

She is very funny in a wry manner and her conversational leadins to the following numbers are acute. Miss Hyatt is a slick comedienne and also has a voice on those sustained and disciplined notes. McStay.

MANDY RICE-DAVIES
Songs
10 Mins.
Eve, Munich

Mandy Rice-Davies, of the Christine Keeler headlines, marked a new career at the Eve, Munich's top nitery, no link with Paris' w.k. Eve in the Pigalle sector but also renowned for its epidermis display. Despite the local peelery's aura, Miss Rice-Davies if forfended from any stripping; the prime s.a. display must come from her songs, and the following titles tell the story. Paradoxically, also, the Eve management cannot display her name in ads and she is directed, per local authorities' edict, to confine her wardrobe to demure high-neck couture. Just to make things doubly sure there is a plain clothesman on the scene at every performance.

The teenager whose global headlines gave her notoriety beyond her years has a rather agreeable voice, good timing and sufficiently authoritative cafe floor presence.

She gets around locally rigid German work permit restrictions by g'v'ng out with ditties titled "Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend," "It's Nice To Have a Man Around the House," "An Englishman Needs More Time" and the like. She could use some specially written material.

There is a local implied "young Mae West" buildup in her nitery buildup but the jury will have to be out for some time on this. Her four weeks' booking at the Eve, Munich, will govern further touring. To her credit, working before the dominantly Teutonic burghers, she made good if not boffo impact. Jok.

LIEUX DRESSLER
Comedy, Songs.
40 Mins.
Tidelands, Houston

Billed as "Revue a la Lieux," this comely redhaired comedienne-thrush is to the saloon circuit what the one-man band was to vaudeville. Her pipes are good, she uses number of throwaway lines, makes several comic costume changes, does block of vocal impressions, and manages some audience participation.

Miss Dressler is a folk singer with long pigtails, a Japanese girl singing "Poor Butterfly," a calypso singer and, between, a shapely thrush in a dancing costume. Best of straight tunes is "Maria" from "Paint Your Wagon."

Freddie Noble Orch (5) cuts good show. Skip.

DAVID FISHER
Comedy
25 Mins.
Living Room, N.Y.

David Fisher seems to have been around the cafe circuits for sometime, but until now has escaped the attention of the New Act file. He is a competent operator.

Seated at the piano which he rarely plays, he spends his time with effective one-liners, an occasional story and admonitions to drink up. He has a kingsized brandy snifter from which he frequently takes a swig and reminds patrons that business is dependent upon their booze consumption.

Fisher opens with rapid delivery of one-liners to get the customers interested before settling down to a more leisurely pace. He works with more assurance as the act goes on, and by closing time he reaps his maximum effect.

Fisher seems to have a knack of complete honesty. After he took hold of the crowd on opening night, he candidly confessed that he bombed the first show. He seems to be an unusual fellow. Jose.

ROLF CAHN
Guitar, Songs
55 Mins.
Le Hibou, Ottawa

This wiry, bird-faced young Californian spent 1960 in Spain, playing flamenco in clubs and bars with a Spanish singer and dancer, as a trio. He's recorded on Folkways, World Pacific and the new label Pathways of Sound. He recently played all the soundtrack music for "Children in Shadow," a 40-minute documentary produced by Tay Sloan of San Francisco there and in L. A.

Cahn opened his mammoth stint with a pair of flamenco guitar solos—solid but not spectacular. Then he turned to voice and gave two extraordinary performances—of the beautiful Mexican "Wanderer of the Mine Country" and, when he's been on 48 minutes and the audience wouldn't let him go, of "Ain't Gonna Study War No More." In that he got the audience chanting melody while he sang sometimes wild, weird but always true counterpoint for six or seven verses and choruses.

Among earlier tunes he did "Nobody Knows When You're Down and Out," which the great Bessie Smith sang at a benefit, backed by Bix Beiderbecke, Benny Goodman and other names; and recalled the auto accident she was in a year later at Clarksdale, Miss.—"They drove her to a hospital, but she was the wrong color; then to another, but she was was still the wrong color; finally to a third. She was the right color there, but she was dead." He showed a nice blues feeling, and later effectively shouted "Columbus Stockade Blues"—for which he felt an affinity because he'd been tossed into an M.P. stockade in Columbus, Ga., "after a contretemps with the army."

Rolf Cahn is a solid, authentic and showmanly performer who can also toss in a calypso and little-known Woody Guthrie kid tunes for variety. He's a coffeehouse ace and good for many intimeries, e.g. the Playboy circuit. Gard.

FREDERICA WEBER
Songs
20 Mins.
Blue Angel, N.Y.

Frederica Weber has a familiar face. She's the pilgrim who was seeking a palatable cup of coffee with the same assiduousness that was evident in the search for Chloe. Her coffee hunt was rewarded apparently with numerous residuals. Miss Weber is also a veteran of the Upstairs at the Downstairs and Plaza 9 Room cafe revues, thus she's been around the cafe circuit, but not with her own material.

Miss Weber is personable and has the ultimate knowhow to make good in this area. Her knowledge of stage mores is evident with her ability to hush an audience even with unfamiliar material, and she knows where to prospect for laughs.

Her material, however, is another matter. She takes her auditors through unfamiliar and uncharted areas. Many find her words strange and sometimes difficult to stay with. Much of it is either esoteric melodically or lyrically. A bit of rewriting with some added concessions to the mortal seeking uncomplicated entertainment would add considerably to her turn. Jose.

LOS DE RAMON
Songs, instrumental
15 Mins.
Alameda Room, N.Y.

Los De Ramon, a man-and-wife team from Chile, excel in folk tunes of South America with particular stress on those of their native heath. The duo, dressed in the equestrian habit of their country and wearing wicked looking silver spurs and the wide brimmed hats associated with the Latin costumes, are a picturesque pair. Their song and instrumental work is nicely done.

They work in the folk idiom of South America. Most of their numbers are tuneful and have a gay air. It's a pleasant and relaxing act. The femme does a lot of incidental dancing to accompany her tunes. Both play guitars and make a tuneful impress on auditors. Jose.

DI MARIE
Songs
15 Mins.
Alameda Room, N.Y.

Di Marie is a strikingly pretty Puerto Rican girl who has an idea of her metier in niteries. She sings with subtle, sexy overtones—akin to a toned down Lena Horne and she has the knack of giving Latin lyrics a universal touch. Miss Marie also works in English, going in for a few pops to give her act variety.

One of Miss Marie's attributes is her ability to move gracefully on the floor. She carries the hand mike around the room seemingly addressing individual customers. Apparently, she doesn't have an adequate command of English to indulge in sufficient smalltalk to make a deeper personality impress on the American trade. A few more rounds in American niteries should give her the necessary experience to move up. Jose.

VAUGHN MEADER
Comedy
30 Mins.
Blue Angel, N.Y.

Vaughn Meader is now a new boy in town. Having first hit prominence in the coffee houses, later at the Blue Angel and finally with his smash Cadence label albums of "The First Family," he seemed inevitably tied to a political career and one that appeared to hinge on the late President Kennedy's popularity. However, since the tragic events of Nov. 22 such a peg was no longer possible nor feasible, and he realized he had to reorient.

In all fairness to Meader, he had been seeking to enlarge his horizons long before the assassination. His presidential press conference was the only vestige of his turn based on his remarkable vocal resemblance to the slain chief executive.

Now Meader has an entirely new act written for him. He seems to feel more comfortable in the realm of the contemporary scene. He appears to be highly aware of present day trends and his turn is flavored with references and lines that could have been born after a look at the morning paper.

His stint has a sense of immediacy. There are some bits built for longer periods, but he seems to have latched onto a turn for the high IQ set. His last two pieces about the non-productive farmer and the bit on the janitor are strong points of his act.

Meader's turn at the moment has highly literary overtones, with a written instead of an oral quality. However, its comedic values are evident at this date in the Blue Angel. It still needs to be fashioned into a structure designed for standup work. He has the base and ability to make the conversion. Jose.

BILL WILLOUGHBY
Comedy
20 Mins.
Attic, Vancouver, B.C.

Bill Willoughby, a youthful Negro giant who's been trouping some time, has not previously been New Acted in VARIETY. He's a standup comedian who gets lotsa laughs by delving beyond the commonplace situations in life and extracting the wealth of humor that lies therein.

He stands six feet eight and his height seems to provide him a special vantage from which to exploit the more outrageous and fantastic aspects of the world around him. Most of his observations are sharp topical comments but the sting is cushioned in the softness of satire and much in the way that fellow Negro comedians have been doing, he makes points effectively via laughter rather than preachiness.

But Willoughby eschews the obvious kinds of black and ofay situations to concentrate on the more universal theme of laughing at himself to evoke auditor reaction. He points out he is not really a Watusi who speaks English, just an over-sized American. His finale is a clever pantomime bit where he uses his long arms to create an embracing couple impression and he exits to generous audience applause.

A fave at Pasadena's Ice House, this is Willoughby's first venture north of the border. He appears ready for wider exposure as well as tv. Shaw.

THE FREEWHEELERS (4)
Songs
20 Mins.
Blue Angel, N.Y.

The Freewheelers are a folk quartet in the tradition of most other practitioners in this field. They have youthful exuberance, plus good rhythm with an assortment of string instruments comprising guitar, bass and banjo, all of which adds up to a good sound and a good potential for the cafes as long as the folk tune trend runs its course.

The lads work in a fairly well established groove. They seek no new fields and no new discoveries. They seem to want to make good in the accepted sense. Their smalltalk is engaging, their tunes generally familiar and arranged in a well-worn groove.

There are many places in which The Freewheelers can do well on the nitery circuit at this time. But as many turns of this kind will ultimately find, they'll have to put their skills to use in a more rounded repertoire as well. Jose.

Copacabana, N. Y.

The Copacabana has probably been one of the foremost star builders in the cafe ranks. Many acts, on their first date in the Jules Podell spot, have been pronounced worthy of headliner status and sometimes a second look here affirms an earlier opinion. In the case of Kay Stevens, playing her second Copa stand, audiences turned out to affirm the fact that she's on her way.

Miss Stevens confirms the observation that she is a gifted comedienne. She has style, authority, a zany outlook and a positive projection that put her in front immediately. She played the Copa in August and despite the quick repeat, she seems to have the potential of stirring a renewed flurry of business here.

Some of Miss Stevens' offerings are sharply satiric and poke fun at the customers who can take these jibes as long as they're amusing and entertaining. She also has the knack of involving the patrons in her numbers. Her "Sister Love," a special material epic which sharply lampoons a revivalist, has the customers handclapping, pounding tambourines, and singing—also laughing.

Miss Stevens can also dwell on a serious note as in "My Man" and "You're Nobody Till Somebody Loves You." She appears to be a complete entertainer, skilled in many departments and the type that should interest producers in many fields.

Not seen on the local front for years is comedian Eddie Schaffer, who appeared some years ago at the Latin Quarter. He has since been homebased in Florida, and apparently is a popular figure there. This is evident by his skilled use of the audience as a sounding board.

However, in his Copadebut, Schaffer seems more a preacher than an entertainer. He appears to be trying to make a point in describing the difference in rearing children in his era and today. Much of it was rather strange for a cafe floor.

The Copa production has a new gloss by producer Geroge Moro; the Copa's new choreographer, Michael O'Brien, staging the dances. He hasn't solved the difficulty of moving eight girls and a pair of production singers over its comparatively small stage, but the terps come off well and the costumes by Billy Livingston seem very opulent.

One of the sets has the girls wearing chinchilla panties, hats and trim. Podell has also gone in new directions for other production accoutrements. The music by Ivan Lane and lyrics by Jan Sarnoff have a legit musical quality. Of course, the show backing by Joseph Mele and the Frank Marti Orchs does the musical chores handsomely. Tonia Flores and Eddie Albert do nicely with the production songs.

Eden Roc, Miami Beach

Miami Beach, Jan. 16.

Lenny Kent, Sonny Kendis Orch, Escobar Orch; $3.50 minimum.

Eden Roc's prexy-booker Harry Mufson has embarked on a show policy for his lively Harry's American Bar (250-300 capacity). Initial act to play the round-room was Belle Barth during the recent holidays.

An offbeat booking for this type of hotel, Miss Barth paid off in spades, with sellouts nightly and a profit rackup. Current Lenny Kent, in what is a lull time, is drawing comfortable biz, to keep Mufson happy.

Kent hasn't been around these parts for several years. He's as fast and hip as before, with a load of topical lines and those frequent asides he's identified with. Sometimes the ad libs sail away due to the too-fast delivery. But, there's enough caught to keep chuckles and laughs coming.

Kent is adept at hitting an upbeat tune; still strong on those impreshes of a Billy Daniels or a Harry Belafonte with the blue-tinged one-liner interpolations, accepted by the show-wise attendees in this spot. He's on for a solid hour, three times nightly.

Sonny Kendis is the top-billed music man and keeps the floor filled with his new mixture of smooth-as-silk arrangements that are cleffed for every type of dance addict. He's been here since Thanksgiving and is being held through the season. Understood he'll be shifting to the big Cafe Pompeii when it reopens at endmonth.

Escobar and his unit dispense colorful, authentic Latino beats to keep the considerable contingent of hipswingers here happy.

Kent is in for three weeks.

Mister Kelly's, Chi

Chicago, Jan. 13.

Ray Hastings, Elaine McKenna, Marty Rubenstein Trio; $2.50 cover.

George Marienthal has one of his more lightweight bills in his current Mister Kelly's entry. Ray Hastings is a personable farceur with one strongly risible centrepiece sketch and several clever dialect impressions. Elaine McKenna is a diminutive Australian thrush with impressive projection for her size.

Hastings, who quit comedy writing in order to become a comic, would do well to create a few more of the stories at which he is best—a sort of tabloid one-man situation comedy. His piece de resistance concerns a romantically backward type impatiently questioning his Don Juan roommate about the latter's amorous conquest of the evening. It's a comedically insightful skit, and his turn could use more material of this nature.

His dialect sketches and blackouts are unevenly funny. One involves a sound-impression of the engines of a forlornly lost airplane as it would sound on an American plane, El Al and Air Italia. Other takeoffs include a very British retired army officer recounting his past battles, an interview with a German teenager, and several effective dialect cameos.

Miss McKenna, a petite blond, interprets her songalog faithfully if not soulfully. She's musically knowledgeable, but could do more by way of getting to the emotional meat of her selections. Her style is straightforward and unaffected, and she establishes a quick and infectious, albeit skin deep, rapport with her auditors.

Among her numbers are "Gypsy In My Soul," "Breezing Along," "Man That Got Away," and a "Goody Goody" closer involving ringsider participation in the refrain.

hungry i, S.F.

San Francisco, Jan. 10.

Glenn Yarbrough, Wes Harrison, The Folksters (4), John Price Trio (3); $3.50 admission.

This bill lines up as one of the solidest shows this winter at Frisco's main avant garde nitery. Yarbrough is well known here his numerous appearances, both at the club and, in concert, with the Limeliters and his name is top box-office.

Yarbrough's folk-balladeering is an effective closing act for the show which is in the vein the room's customers are used to by now: a singer, a folk group and a comic.

Comic is Wes Harrison who is a product of the electronic age in that the laughs are created by the use of sound effects after Harrison has verbally set the stage for the gag. The sound effects are produced by manipulation of the microphone and house sound system a la Jonathan Winters.

Winters, however, is a comic who uses occasional sound effects. Harrison on the other hand is a sound effects man who has picked up some gags and situations to incorporate the sound effects for laughs.

Best stunt is a description of how he bugged a hot rodder via a special loudspeaker in his own car which enabled Harrison to blast out the full scale sounds of an auto skidding, tires burning and finally crashing into another car. It is an effective act, the sounds are spookily real and it is fascinating to watch him do it.

The Folksters are a pleasant quartet who lay down a middle of the road series of folk songs with some mild humor and a warm personality. They are not headliners, but an effective supporting act on any bill of this kind.

The John Price Trio is a solid entre'acte and has been at the club for some time. It deserves more audience attention than it gets.

Johnny Mathis, Freddy Martin Orch (25); $3.50 cover, $3 minimum.

Johnny Mathis not only enjoys what he's doing but also knows how to be himself. After all the hoopla of the Cocoanut Grove's Thursday (16) opening night had ended and the mundane business of entertaining the "common folk" had presented itself the night after, the singer meets the challenge admirably by presenting a sparkling 55-minute dinner show to a jammed room.

With no verbiage at all, he plunges into "Tender Is The Night," "Misty," "Johnny One Note" and a few more before begging off for first break. Heavy mitt brings him bouncing back with a medley of six more — all with Mathis-Mercury Records association.

Of 16 tunes sung, it isn't till the 12th—"When My Sugar Walks Down The Street" — that the Mathis magnetism is fully felt. Here he's really loose, his delivery easy, his soft-shoe shuffle appropriate to theme; it's the high point of act, delivered with keen sense of fun and simplicity.

It's only after "Sugar" that he utters his first spoken word—intros his personal batoneer Jack Feierman and drummer Bob Pike. Also, he thanks the Freddy Martin Orch, which opens show with stirring "Salute to Cole Porter" and which supplies fine backing throughout, harp and strings playing major roles.

Mathis finales with upbeat "I'll Build A Stairway To Paradise" and reprises twice with final bars.

Show has excellent balance, with soulful tunes ("Maria") sung movingly and jumo tunes ("Jumo For Joy") warbled with lotsa zip, all of it carefully shuffled for maximum effect.

Danny Siegel's Living Room seems to be one of the livelier hospices on the east side with the current bill topped by Jack Jones. The son of film singer Allan Jones and actress Irene Hervey is one of the more rapidly rising warblers. He appears to be making tremendous headway in the cafe field and elsewhere.

Jones is a personable chap who works in a way that suggests his chirping is only part of an overall picture. He has an ingratiating manner and a pleasant projection. He came to prominence, of course, with his disking of "Roses & Lollipops" which he reprises here.

One of his assets is his ability to give standards some different and exciting rides. There are occasions when the ornamentation is too elaborate and there also are times when he loses a point because of the musical gingerbread. But generally there's entertainment and satisfaction in his floorstint.

Incidentally, the Living Room rarely has an opening as large as that of Jones' preem. The first two shows that evening (Fri.) were SRO. Jones' colleagues in this emporium comprise Emily Yancey and David Fisher. (latter New Acts).

Miss Yancey is a talented Negro singer with a multitude of approaches to a tune. She can get dramatic and she knows how to take it easy. The brightspots in her catalog are the "Carnival" number from "Black Orpheus" and virtually any ballad that comes her way.

Per usual, the Bob Ferro Trio provides strong support for the participants.

Nugget, Sparks

Sparks, Nev., Jan. 16.

For this playback at John Ascuaga's Nugget Ted Lewis has put together a show of varied talents that add up to 85 minutes of class entertainment. Albeit heavy on the nostalgic side, there's a wealth of lighter moments when the supporting acts take center stage.

Lewis, with his trademarked hat and cane, takes his bow with a vocal recount of his career on "My Clarinet and I" that immediately sets the nostalgic theme. He continues the mood with "My Hands, My Hat, My Cane and Me" and "Only a Few of Us Left." To depart the play on yesteryear, the vet showman trade quips with songstress Josie O'Donnell and subjects her to his treatment of "Oh You Beautiful Doll."

Lewis, who plays the emcee role throughout show, wins top applause for his still skillful work on the clarinet, and with shadow Eddie Chester revives his famed "Me and My Shadow."

Miss O'Donnell, petite in stature but tall on talent, essays "Smiles," "After You've Gone," a sensitive "Glocca Morra," and a rousing "Bill Bailey." She's knowledgeable in all areas, handles the lyrics with authority and assurance.

Jack Durant, after taking a pratfall while carboning a Met singer, roams the stage with a multitude of material centered around family life, wife, and mother-in-law. He hits hard and accurately in his appraisals and keeps it all on the common level.

He's also adept with lines re the medical profession. Although his subject matter is restricted to only two areas, he wrings the most from both with little resort to vintage stuff. Durant's exit is a perfected imitation of Clark Gable, both in voice and facial expression.

Maria Neglia, a violinist of concert calibre, proves her big talent on such tunes as "Lover" and "Pizzicato Waltz." Her "Lover" arrangement is impressive for variations and earns top endorsement. She includes just enough humor to bridge the straight instrumental chores.

Also spotlighted is Lewis' trombonist, Sammy Blank, who steps from the band to give his impressions of other trombone artists, including Dorsey, Morgan and Teagarden. Capably leading the Foster Edwards orch through the charts is Sol Klein.

The George Arnold Singers & Dancers raise the curtains with a production accenting the cancan and Parisian titles. It's smartly choreographed, well rehearsed. Costuming also rates good mention.

Deauville, Miami B'ch

Miami Beach, Jan. 11.

Jack Carter, Julie London & Boys (4), Inga & Rolf, Les Rhode Orch; $3.50-$7.50 minimum.

Jack Carter is one of the most durable draws on the hotel circuit here. He's sure to fill a big room such as the Casanova here, where he plays annually, with an occasional excursion to another inn's cafe.

There's good reason for Carter's continued marquee lure: he never fails to come back without a new set of material. Even the standard bits are refurbished with new biz and lines.

Using the familiar basics, he pours out a stream of new observations with hotel owners, and the Beach types as the targets; a devastating routine on bigotry, quickie impreshes, belting songs a la Jolson, lampoonings on pop music fads and again with incisive impreshes of the toppers around show biz.

Carter's delivery is as dynamic as ever, but with a noteworthy improvement; the frenetic air is gone, replaced with an assured, more deliberate pacing and timing that enhance the plentiful laugh values to wind him into a wrapup after an hour. He tops with a yock-raising tearapart of the Kildare-Casey medico series. They kept pounding for more.

Julie London (see New Acts) adds more marquee lure to the bill, greeting of the big crowd in attendance at opening show attesting to the build in rep via her Marlboro ciggie commercial exposures. Reception of her wares, in an act staged for the bigger rooms, complete to four male aides, was okay.

Inga & Rolf, held over, come up with a set of sparkling new terp patterns that weave from ballet-adagio, to European themed and finally, a "West Side Story" angled aud-pleaser. Les Rhode and his orch are expert on a difficult show, music-wise.

Harrah's, Lake Tahoe

Lake Tahoe, Jan. 13.

Mickey Rooney, Bobby Van, Alcettys (2), Moro-Landis Dancers (13), Leighton Noble Orch (13); presented by Bob Vincent, produced for Harrah's by Art Barkow.

Mickey Rooney's act for this Harrah's reprise lacks the sock and drive he displayed in previous outing in this swankery, but nonetheless it adds up to a pleasing bit of entertainment. There's obvious need for sharper writing but the diminutive performer manages to score with the material at hand, albeit sometimes vintage and choppy in spots.

Bobby Van takes a vocal spot before introducing partner, who make his intro from audience after being introduced as a ski instructor. Properly clad for the ski role, Rooney makes with the Swedish accent (not too effectively) on the snowy material before hitting closer home with personal lines re his marital excursions and alimony problems.

The comic wins best endorsement on a carbon of a losing gambler talking to himself and with his trademarked candid camera routine, where he's perfection as a drunk in a sporting goods store. A takeoff on "Lawrence of Arabia" fails to make the grade for inadequacy in scripting. Van proves a good line thrower for the headliner, shows okay vocaling, "Shooting High," and rates top league as a soft shoe artist.

Detlef Alcetty, with an assist from his wife Brune, is highly proficient at spinning plates atop flexible pole, and balancing a pane of glass, loaded with four wine glasses and a large lighted table lamp, on two disjointed long poles. Audience reaction from his intended near misses is as expected: tablers are on the edge of their seats. One plate spinning routine is executed from among tablers.

The Moro-Landis Dancers show precision and excellent timing in opening production accenting the gals' tap ability on stairway. Leighton Noble's Orch, as per usual, provides the flawless musical backstopping.

Riverside, Reno

Reno, Jan. 10.

Russ Morgan Orch (10) with Sandi Summers; no cover, no minimum.

The Riverside, continuing its policy of booking name bands, has come up with another sure winner in Russ Morgan, who has played Reno before but marks this as his Riverside debut.

A vet of almost 30 years as a bandleader, Morgan still retains that distinctive "Music in the Morgan Manner" style, accented by his wah-wah muted trombone and sometimes fluid arrangements. For this stint he's using three brass, three reeds, drums, bass and piano, with the leader doubling on trombone and piano. Sandi Summers, a petite dark-haired looker, handles the femme vocal chores with eclat.

Morgan's infectious stage personality and frequent asides add to the troupe's overall appeal.

As expected, the orch's one-hour session includes many of the tunes scripted by the maestro: "You're Nobody 'Til Somebody Loves You," "Somebody Else Is Taking My Place," "Sweet Eloise," "Please Think of Me" and "So Long." But it's not all nostalgia. During the session Diz Mullins departs his band chair to vocal "C'est Si Bon," and ditto for Mert Curtis on "Dream."

Morgan's son Jack (on trombone) also makes with a vocal to "Left My Heart in San Francisco" and others. Three male instrumentalists also go it tandem for a couple of vocal numbers.

Albeit many of the band's titles are from the evergreens, the Morganmen prove their talents on some of the newies, as evidenced on "Alley Cat." Miss Summers, skillful in turning a phrase and cognizant of the lyrics, wins good rewards for her interpretations of "Bewitched" and "It's All Right With Me." Her turn at the mike (on show caught) was much too infrequent. Sign-off is Morgan's trademarked "Does Your Heart Beat for Me." A full dance floor for each set attributes to the continued popularity of the Morgan stylings.

Lou Walters "'Oui Oui Paree" with Barry Sisters, Lynda Gloria, Arnaut Bros., Steve Danik, Les Stevens Line (16); choreography and staging, Ronal & Fields; special music, Jacques Donnet, costumes Bill Campbell & Lee Carol; Jacques Donnet Orch. $3.50-$5 minimum.

Lou Walters has outdone himself in this new edition of the longest running show in the area (entering its fifth year). What makes his series of revues the more tradeworthy is fact that he's set up splendidly costumed and lit productions on a comparatively small budget compared to other attempts around town, and as competition for cafes using names. Cost is figured at not much over a $10-$12,000 figure depending on the topline attractions he adds for boxoffice buttressing.

In this outing Walters has the Barry Sisters to spark off first segment of the season. And per every showing here, they pull a healthy additional amount of patronage. The handsome duo, always dressed haute couture that raises buzz among distaffers, comes up with a solid book of new arrangements, skillfully blended with their familiars.

The staging misses nary a detail in shrewd pacing, harmonic nuances and continuingl build. These are a pair of classy pros who keep the palming pulsing throughout their stint, with high riding arrangements, bluesy inserts for mood-change, and a wham version of "Fly Me To the Moon" plus artful lighting for eye-appeal. Encore segment had "For The First Time" and "I Wanna Be Around" to wind them into a pounding bowoff.

The staging in this Walters color romp is a big plus. Opener has the company on for a Parisian street scene that displays imagination and inventiveness. Eschewing the all-as-one costuming ideas, it's a mixture of French types in varied outfits working out a Mardi Gras pattern to set the revue off in zesty manner.

Another standout is the "Magic Toy Shop," a tasty confection that adds an all-for-the-family aura to the proceedings. It's the mechanical dolls basic worked into a sparkling, richly dressed number. Still another highlight is the next-to-closing scene, a gay version of "Roumanian Rhapsody."

Lynda Gloria, an import from the "Folies Bergere," is a wily songstress-comedienne. Her familiar French lyrics are projected forcefully to get the message across. She's well versed in English tunes, too, and belts "I Like Men" with eleven special lyrics. Tops in her routine is a trip around ringside to lure four males onstage for a funny bit in which they don Tyrolean mountain outfits to "dance" to a sock audience reaction. She ofied to hearty reception.

Steve Danik is the flesh-exposer in the revue, a lithe, leggy looker who also is a well versed terper, working with two male aides to apply the takeoff-moments in clever, good-taste-fashion. It's all worked out in inventive choreography that adds spark to the routine.

The Arnaut Bros. purvey their standard bird-chirpings, preceded by their zany duo-violinings. Per always, they raise continued giggles to perk up forepart of the Walters frolic.

Line is a set of 16 eyefuls, with a core of pert and lively ponies to contrast the showgal tallies. Overall, the Walters package could be shifted without much trouble to a New York location during the World's Fair. It's the sort of show the tourist and conventioneers dig.

Jacques Donnet and his orch rate kudos for their showbackings. Ditto Ron Field for his fine choreographic ideas. Revue is in for at least three months before undergoing edition-change. Until then the only shifts will be in tooliners, with Johnny Puleo and his harmonica gang due around mid-February. Lary.

Alameda Room, N.Y.

Tun Tun, Los De Ramon (2), Di Marie, Panchito Riset and Eduardo Lagrue Orchs; $5 minimum.

The Alameda Room is one of the Latin niteries getting a renewed degree of interest from the Latin entertainers. This room, like many of its Castilian counterparts, is finding that it has to resort to recognized performers in order to entice a larger share of the growing Latin colony in New York.

For its current bill the Alameda has the dimunitive Tun Tun, an extremely accomplished singer and dancer, who cuts quite a figure flailing his abbreviated arms and legs about in abandon. A Mexican native, he has been appearing in other New York spots and this is his first try here. He makes out nicely with the audience.

His act hasn't changed to any degree since his last visit in New York a few years ago, but it's still serviceable and highly entertaining.

The Alameda Room's talent lineup is completed by the Los De Ramon and Di Marie, both New Acts. The music by the Panchito Riset and Eduardo Lagrue Orchs continues to provide excellent dance incentives. Jose.

Cave, Vancouver

Vancouver, Jan. 16.

Andrews Sisters (3), Bobby Winters, Dancing Debs (5), Chris Gage Orch (9); $2.50 admission.

The Andrews Sisters are in at the Cave with what must be one of the more durable singing sister acts in show business history. And if the turn itself seems impervious to time, give or take a few added pounds here and there, the nostalgic songs they reprise in this outing are equally durable. Maxine, Patti and La Verne were last here 12 years ago and the lengthy absence hasn't changed the impact.

The three Minneapolis chirpers ramble generously through their evergreens and come up with the likes of "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen," "Don't Fence Me In," "Apple Blossom Time" and "South America, Take It Away." They also do a few new songs such as "Heart In San Francisco" and "I've Got A Lot of Living To Do," to prove they can still embellish the winners with their brand of vocal magic.

And Patti's burlesque takeoff to David Rose's "The Stripper," seguing out of their oldie "Strip Polka," plus her neat twist routine with audience enthusiasts, is both great fun and expert terping. Turn goes 50 lively minutes and is tops in entertainment value.

Bobby Winters, in the warmup slot, comes through with a comedy juggling routine that is equally funny and slick. A young-looking old pro, he's extremely adept with tambourines and Indian clubs. But it is his offbeat one-liners, deadpan sight gags and the casual manner that makes this such a hilarious turn. He has auditors roaring and bows off to heavy palm appreciation.

Bob Calder's Dancing Debs offer a holdover Charleston as the curtain raiser and return for a new Swinging Shepherd Blues number that features Chris Gage sideman Fr[illegible] McPherson in the accompanying flute spot. The Gage orch backstops the entire show with the Andrews Sisters' Lloyd Morales in at drums for their portion.

Pat Boone opens Thursday (23). Shaw.

Royal York, Toronto

Toronto, Jan. 14.

Lanny Ross is currently holding down the Imperial Room of the Royal York Hotel and is packing the nostalgia into a 450-capacity room. He makes his entrance in dinner jacket while warbling the theme song from the old Franco-American Spaghetti radio intro, then follows with "Moon River" for change to modern styling.

Reverting to type, he sings a French medley, including "Pigalle" and "Mon Amour," latter which he wrote. His most notable contribution is "This Is All I Ask,' a tender love-lament he balladeered.

Ross, who stayed on 50 minutes when caught, has the apparent resonant pipes and appearance of his younger days of success. One of the great pros, he adapted himself in later years to the singing of grand and light opera, pops and classics, from the old radio days when he was known as "The Troubadour of the Moon."

Moxie Whitney gives excellent topicality to Ross' lyrics on the subject of Toronto localisms to the tune of "Pigalle." His 14-man orch provides top backing throughout, and also plays for the dance sessions. McStay.

Hotel Roosevelt, N.O.

New Orleans, Jan. 17.

Jane Russell, Connie Haines & Beryl Davis (with Matty Malneck as musical director); Leon Kelner Orch; $2.50 weeknight minimum; $4 Sats.

New layout in Seymour Weiss' plush Blue Room, spotlighting Jane Russell, Connie Haines and Beryl Davis, is a polished and slick show which establishes a warm rapport between performers and customers.

Gals, endowed generously with good looks, nifty figures and nice vocal equipment, opened to a capacity audience Thursday night (16). Judging from advance reservations, the velvet rope will be up nightly for the next two weeks.

Introed by a tape-recorded voice of Bob Hope, threesome come on clad in clinging black and white fur, and immediately win the tableholders with top voice blending. Each solos with well-chosen material for maximum returns.

Miss Haines, the tiniest of the three and obviously the vocal anchor girl, has the largest voice and most outstanding style. She puts over her tunes with skill, warmth and easy handling to hefty palm-pounding. Tops is her "I Believe," which projects her versatility and pro artistry.

Blond and British Beryl Davis, whose style is initimate and appealing, clicks solidly with "A Foggy Day In London Town" and Make Someone Happy." Miss Russell, svelter and more attractive than her screen image, sings "Mack The Knife" and "The Saints Go Marchin' In" to boffo results. Her husky contralto pipes match her nifty chassis.

The shapely and glamorous threesome demonstrate charming stage demeanor and let their tunes speak for themselves. Trio finales with a group of tunes with an oldtime gospel meeting flavor to garner added plaudits.

Matty Malneck, the threesome's musical director, and the girls team up for a medley of some of his hits and drew bravos. Included in the songalog are "Stairway To The Stars," "I'm Through With Love," "You Or No One" and "Goody Goody."

Malneck ably guides the Misses Haines, Davis and Russell with the slick backing of Leon Kelner's musical crew. Kelner's outfit also keeps the floor crowded during the customer terp sessions.

Show runs until Jan. 26. Liuz.

Eddys', K. C.

Kansas City, Jan. 16.

There's a different flavor to the floor show for the fortnight at Eddys' with accordionist Dick Contino in his first bow in this spot. Since his last stand in town about six years ago, he's teamed with Lee Raymond, and the two put on 50 minutes of moving and colorful music.

Basically their work is instrumental with the Contino artistry on the accordion the piece de resistance, although young Raymond proves his own skill on the trumpet and valve trombone. Two team the instruments to the fine points and can move together in any direction to heighten the mood, or rhythm. Few musicians can match Contino on the accordion mastery, his thrilling bellows or keyboard shadings, and the horn work by Raymond accentuates it all.

The tune list is replete with faves from "Bye, Bye Blues" and "Sorrento" to "Tico Tico" and "Sabre Dance" up to midway. Both do surprisingly well on vocals, Contino with a heavy baritone and Raymond with fine phrasings on "Tonight" and "Maria." They bowed off to a rousing hand.

Pair stays through Jan. 29. Quin.

Troubadour, L.A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 15.

Chico Hamilton Quartet, Brook Peters; $1.50 admission weekdays, $2 adm weekend; one-drink minimum.

Chico Hamilton's drum wizardry in this theatre-cafe never ceases to fracture. During "Island Blues" (the Hamilton theme song and closing number in set caught), Hamilton beats out a nine-minute solo during which he mixes light-touch with driving power, changing from one to the other with the ease of a gazelle.

Standup guitarist, Garbor Szabo, is colorful to ear and eye. He goes into a deep crouch during tough passages, then, once cut, he bobs up a bit, only to bend again while biting into another riff. During the torrid "A Voice In The Night," Szabo is particularly bright, backed by excellent bass work of Albert Stinson. Stinson's solo during number had great clarity and range, with some masterful slurring, waxing totally uninhibited.

However, tenor saxist Jimmy Woods is for the most part uncommunicative. Too often he's dissonant, recklessly abandoning chords for sake of effect. Fact that Woods joined group just last Friday (10), when foursome opened here, may account for some of the straw-grasping.

In spite of sparse week-night draw, set caught went 55 minutes. Quartet's in through Feb. 2.

Inter-set act, folk-calypso singer Brook Peters, has a fine baritone voice but failed to exhibit much of it. After warbling four quick numbers, he called a halt and walked, scorning the warm mitt. Peters, incidentally, is one of those rare folk-type singers who doesn't accompany himself; he uses guitarist Paul Palmer. Joex.

Shamrock, Houston

Houston, Jan. 17.

Earl Wrightson & Lois Hunt, Paul Neighbors Orch (11); no cover or minimum.

Earl Wrightson and Lois Hunt lean heavily on Broadway show tunes, and they are excellent props indeed for pair's excellent pipes. Wrightson has fine baritone voice, and thrush has ability to do many things with her lyric soprano. They are a handsome couple with lotsa charm.

They by no means exclude other than show tunes, as Miss Hunt, formerly with the Metropolitan Opera, does "Musetta's Waltz," and duo does couple of comedy turns with "I Remember It Well" and "Adelaide's Lament."

Yet it is with such top tunes as "Camelot," "If Ever I Would Leave You," "The Sweetest Sounds," "I've Grown Accustomed To Her Face" and a Richard Rodgers medley of 19 tunes that Wrightson & Hunt really glitter.

They had intended to beg off with "Wunderbar," but the auditors won't have it and they have to return for "All The Things You Are." It isn't easy to fault these two fine talents, but femme does seem just a bit too girlish with some of her patter.

Performers' musical director, Fred Woolston, directs Paul Neighbors' band, which was never better.

Show plays two frames, with Johnny Desmond and Bud & Cece Robinson in next. Skip.

Galaxie, S.F.

San Francisco, Jan. 11.

Nooney Rickett V, with Joni Lyman; two-drink mimimum.

Two "youngsters" are currently in residence at the corner of Broadway and Kearny in the North Beach heart of San Francisco night life.

One, the more permanent of the two, is The Galaxie—a new club owned by Moulin Rouge boss Dave Rapkin. It's a plush and comfortable layout featuring four separate levels for viewing and roomily-spaced tables.

The second youthful entry is the Nooney Rickett V. Leader Rickett plays guitar and augmented by tenor sax, electric bass, drums and the picturesque Joni Lyman, who contributes a healthy set of pipes.

The Five are unabashed rock 'n' rollers and, while showing several strong points, are going to require several tactical adjustments before they can honestly be called a sharp act, even for a club that can attract an audience attuned to this sort of presentation.

They were handicapped on opening night by the temporary loss of their drummer and a subsequent hearing was considerably more satisfactory.

Their repertory of instruments and vocals includes such standards as a rocking "What'd I Say?," "Tequila," "Kansas City," and Miss Lyman's enthusiastic "Bill Bailey" and "Summertime." Most of the numbers are hard swingers and more frequent ballads would be a welcome addition.

Both Rickett and, particularly, tenor sax player Mel Kunkle are accomplished musicians. But the group's real problem lies in finding a personality and communicating with the audience.

Such things as introducing the group, mentioning song titles and an occasional non-musical word or two into the microphone is surely not too much to ask.

With some work on the aforementioned and more judicious programming, the Five will be a smart act. Joaq.

Conrad Hilton, Chi

Chicago, Jan. 16.

"Ladies First" with George Carl & Arlene, Gus Augspurg & His Jungle Wonders, Manuel Del Toro, Marei Langenbein, Ernie McLean & Caroline Paul, Boulevar-Dears (5), Boulevar-Dons (3), Jimmy Palmer Orch; produced by Merriel Abbott, directed by Bob Frellson; score and lyrics, Hessie Smith; orchestration, Norman Krone; $2.50 cover.

Merriel Abbott has been producing these ice shows for the Boulevard Room every six months since 1948. At the very least they have been highly proficiently done, and occasionally rise a couple of notches above the limiting strictures of the tabloid ice show format.

"Ladies First" is one of the more engaging of these bi-annual sherbet-show-biz entries, and much of the credit goes to two wisely-chosen acts used to provide a break in the skating part of the show. They are both sight acts and succeed handily where talking "entr'actes" have failed to score in this essentially visual presentation.

George Carl is a polished and experienced panto comic, and, with his daughter, Arlene, has a turn that is a surefire yockgetter. Carl's sole expression is a fixed quizzical smile, but he spells out his act with an acro-trained body-english that is as articulate as any other language.

It's a standard turn by vaude definitions—flipping his derby on his head in different ways and a mock-acro twist—but Carl endows it with an expert sight artist's comic charm.

Gus Augspurg and his two monkeys are also in the long line of vaude tradition. However, he has fashioned a clever act that eschews the silly clothes and bicycle riding usually part of monkey shows. His two charges are finely-trained to closely imitate human characteristics, and his successful premise is that monkeys make funny people.

Manuel Del Toro, who has been the lead skater for the past few shows, is as flashly, fast and facile as ever, and Marei Langenbein is one of the more attractive prima skateuses to have played the show in recent years. Bob Frellson's choreography is fresh, and is executed with verve by the skate choristers.

Ernie McClean & Caroline Paul are firstrate production singers, and interpret Hessie Smith's lyrics faithfully. Jimmy Palmer's orch backs the show flawlessly. Mor.

Drake Hotel, Chi

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Pat Suzuki, Jimmy Blade Orch; $2.50-$3 cover.

Customers who remember Pat Suzuki from a time when her chief legituner and nitery characteristics were a winsome Oriental piquancy, non-stop vitality, projection out of proportion to her petite size, and a pigtail are in for a pleasurable surprise in re her current cafe turn.

All the above but the pigtail are present in her present act, but she has added to them an impressive vocal maturity and a much more sophisticated and many-dimensioned singing style. She opened to one of the more crowded houses in many months in this swankery and received one of the most enthusiastic receptions in a like time.

A sizeable share of the credits for the musical validity of Miss Suzuki's turn go to arranger-musical-director-accompanist Warren Meyers, who has fashioned charts that explore the musical nuances of the tunes and provide her with stylistic challenges that she meets handily. Among those numbers where these ingredients jelled best were a languid summer-evoking rendition of "Lazy Afternoon," a tender handling of "Sleep Warm" and a poignant version of "Wee Small Hours of the Morning."

Miss Suzuki has not lost any of her trademark bounce, and the show jumps when she swings into such uptunes as "Put On A Happy Face," "Don't Look At Me That Way" and "Shadrack." Among her other numbers are a medley from "Flower Drum Song," and a whimsically updated medley of Stephen Foster tunes.

Miss Suzuki should re-appraise her costuming for this room. The sequined sleeveless blouse and evening slacks would be more appropriate in a less posh room. Jimmy Blade's fine house orch interprets the arrangements faithfully, and provides its usual top-notch terp beat between shows. Mor.

OBITUARIES

JACK TEAGARDEN

Jack Teagarden, 58, one of the towering figures in the jazz firmament for several decades, died of pneumonia Jan. 15 in a New Orleans motel. He had been ailing for sometime and had been advised by medics to return to his Pompano Beach (Fla.) home.

Teagarden was one of the foremost trombonists of the day. He learned the instrument when only seven and by the time he was 15 he was already working on the jazz circuits. During those formative years, he worked in the Peck Kelley band and Kelley's styling were an enormous influence on Teagarden's horn work.

Following his stint with Kelley, he formed his own outfit and played with several other bands before coming to New York in 1927. There he worked with Red Nichols and chorused "After You've Gone" which brought to its peak a jazzy-bluesy style that became his trademark, not only vocally but instrumentally. Teagarden added to his lustre with his collaboration with Glenn Miller on the lyries for "Basin St. Blues."

Teagarden joined the noted roster of the Ben Pollack band in 1928. His colleagues included Benny Goodman, Jimmy McPartland, Charlie Spivak, Matty Matlock, Ray Bauduc and Irving Fazzola, among others.

His next important stint was with Paul Whiteman's band. Together with his brother Charlie and Frankie Trumbauer, they consituted a trio called the Three T's.

He organized his own band in 1938. Despite the presence of top musicians, the coming of the war years spelled the doom of many large outfits and Teagarden filed for bankruptcy in 1940 citing $45,863 in liabilities and $160 assets.

He continued to head his own bands afterward, but they were smaller combos. In 1958, Teagarden toured the world under U.S. States Dept. auspices.

Surviving are his wife, three sons, two of which are by a previous marriage; his mother, two sisters and two brothers.

JACK DIAMOND

Jack Diamond, 54, Universal Studio publicity director since 1955, died of a heart attack Jan. 15 while at work at Universal City. Born in Chicago, he started his newspaper career on the Daily News there in 1927 while still a student at U. of Chicago, and left sheet in 1934 to join the N. Y. bureau of United Press as a feature columnist and staff correspondent.

He was a co-founder and publicity director of Monte Proser's Copacabana from 1938 to 1942, and a year later joined Warner Bros. studio publicity dept. in Hollywood. Following six years with WB, he shifted to Universal. During his say with U he was made assistant studio pub director in 1953 before moving up to pub director post.

At the time of his death Diamond was chairman of the public relations board of Hollywood Museum and a past member of board of governors of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences. He also was chairman of Studio Publicity Directors Committee.

Surviving are his wife, two daughters and a brother.

TERENCE H. WHITE

Terence H. White, 57, novelist whose book, "The Once and Future King," provided the material for Alan Jay Lerner's and Frederick Loewe's Broadway musical, "Camelot," died of a heart ailment Jan. 17 aboard ship at Piraeus, Greece. He was en route to his home in Britain after a series of lecture engagements in the U.S.

White, who specialized in yarns that stemmed from medieval history, authored 19 books. He made his debut as a novelist in 1933 with "The Sword in the Stone." It concerned the boyhood of King Arthur and was a Book-of-the-Month Club selection.

A native of Bombay, India, he was educated in England and for a time was a schoolteacher before turning to a lifetime study of medieval history. His research in this field also inspired such other of his works as "The Witch in the Wood," "The Ill-Made Knight" and "The Candle in the Wind."

JULE ALLEN

Jule Allen, 75, dean of the Canadian motion picture industry and prexy of Premier Operating Corp., died Jan. 15 while holidaying in Miami Beach, Fla. His body was shipped back to Toronto.

Born in Bradford, Pa., Allen came to Canada with his late father (Barney Allen) and late brother (Jay J.) and opened a film house in Brantford, Ont., in 1906 when this Theatorium was the first in eastern Canada outside of Toronto and Montreal.

Envisaging the winning of the Canadian west, the brothers built a chain of 50 houses which were sold in 1922 to Famous Players Corp. That same year, the Allens and Louis Rosenfeld formed Premier Operating Corp. and built it up to the present 60 theatres in Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba.

Survived by wife, son, daughter; and two brothers, Herb and Sol Allen, both Premier executives.

OTTO K. OLESEN

Otto K. Olesen, 72, pioneer studio and theatrical lighting equipment developer and for nine years postmaster of Los Angeles, died Jan. 5 in Hollywood after a long illness. A native of Denmark, he became a U.S. citizen in 1919. The same year he started his lighting equipment business which pioneered techniques leading to indoor lighting. He sold his biz in 1953.

Olesen had been prexy of Hollywood Bowl Theatre Assn., of which he was a director, a charter member and past prexy of Hollywood Chamber of Commerce. At the time of his death he was Hollywood Museum Leasing Corp. prexy.

Daughter survives.

NORO MORALES

Noro Morales, 51, one of Puerto Rico's first musician-composers to achieve national fame for his Latin music, died of uremia Jan. 14 in Santurce, P.R. For over three years he suffered from glaucoma wich caused him to become blind.

Morales, who was "born" a musician, fronted his orchestra at San Juan's Club La Concha for the last time on his 51st birthday Jan. 2. There is a possibility that Noro's brother, Humberto, who played drums for Noro for 14 years, may take over the band in the near future. It would continue to be called the Noro Morales Orchestra if Humberto can make contractual arrangements with Hotel La Concha.

Morales was one of nine children (five boys, four girls) raised as musicians. His parents were musicians and music teachers. During the 1920s when Noro was in his early teens, he played in a Morales family combo that provided background music for silent films in Old San Juan.

In the early 1930s, the family band toured South America. When the family returned to Puerto Rico in 1933, the Morales Bros. Orchestra was formed. It performed in the island's top nitery, Hotel Escambron, which was demolished last year.

In 1935, Morales went to New York where he organized his first combo. The going was rough. But in 1939 he clicked with one of his original tunes, "La Rueda" (The Wheel), which was instrumental in popularizing the Conga dance craze in the U.S.

What followed was a series of dates that established him as one of the top exponents of "authentic" Latin music. His band played at El Morocco, La Conga, Glen Island Casino, the Stork Club, the Embassy Club and the Havana Madrid.

Morales' band later toured the U.S. He went to Germany, France and Austria in 1957 in a State Dept. troupe. The following year he toured the Far East. He returned to Puerto Rico in 1960 and opened his band at Club La Concha there.

Surviving are his wife, and four children from two previous marriages. Of the first union there were two sons while a son and daughter were born of the second marriage.

LEWIS SEILER

Lewis Seiler, 73, pioneer film director who went to Hollywood in 1919 and during silent era helmed numerous two reel comedies and later Tom Mix westerns, died in Hollywood Jan. 8.

Later credits included such films as "Guadalcanal Diary," "Dust Be My Destiny," "Something For the Boys," "Molly And Me." Widow, son, daughter survive.

ELMORE WHITE

Elmore White, 75, vaude performer, songwriter and music biz exec, died in Brooklyn Jan. 15. At the time of his death, he was a member of the writer and publisher division of Broadcast Music Inc.

White played many of the country's leading vaude circuits as a pianist and singer. He was a members of Burkhardt & White, "Home Run Hitters In The Singers League."

He left vaude in 1927 to join the New York publishing firm of Shapiro, Bernstein. During the past 35 years, he was general professional manager of many other well-known music firms.

Surviving are a niece and a nephew.

SAM LEWIS

Sam Lewis, of the vet vaude team of Lewis & Dody, died of a heart attack Jan. 11 in New York. He partnered with the late Sam Dody in a comedy act which played most of the top houses in the U.S. Their "chiribumchik" doggerel was a key highlight of their topical gag routine, a la "Gallagher & Shean."

For the past few years, Lewis was a treasurer at the Roosevelt Raceway, Yonkers.

JACOB D. GORTATOWSKY

Jacob Dewey Gortatowsky, 78, board chairman of Hearst Consolidated Publications and the Hearst Publishing Co., died Jan. 13 in New York after a long illness. A top exec in the Hearst hierarchy for 30 years, he also was a familiar figure to show bizites.

Gortatowsky, who started his career as a reporter, wrote a variety of copy for the Heast organizations before he was named assistant general manager of Hearst Newspapers in 1934. A man of exceptional executive ability, he became general manager in 1939.

He retained the g.m. post for 16 years which was considered a feat in itself in view of the complex nature of the post. Gorty, as he was familiarly known, often found William Randolph Hearst's business techniques a bit too informal but both had a high regard for one another.

A native of Albany, Ga., he joined the Atlanta Constitution as a reporter at the age of 18. Later he worked in similar capacity for the Albany Herald and the Macon Telegraph, among other papers. While with the Hearst organization, at various times he also was president of King Features and held the same post with International News Service.

Surviving are his wife, brother and two sisters.

JOHNNIE G. GETZ

Johnnie G. Getz, 84, longtime entertainer, died Jan. 7 in his native Cincinnati. His 36-year pro career terminated in 1930 after nine seasons as a principal in George Wintz road show editions of "George White's Scandals" and other Broadway hit musicals, for which his wife, Mayme, was music director and pianist.

When 15, Getz ran away from home to join Vaske's Theatrical Co. He served as an assistant to Great Lafayette, the magician in vaude, was a comic and dancer with min-

Bellamy Rules Out Another Term; Equity Committee to Name Slate Of Officer and Council Candidates

By JESSE GROSS

For members of Actors Equity, there's more than one presidential race to be considered this year. Not only will they—along with the rest of the nation—be concerned with the election of the country's chief executive, but on a more restricted basis they will, for the first time in 12 years, have no alternative but to put a new face into office as the union's president.

Ralph Bellamy, who completes his fourth consecutive three-year term as Equity prez next May, says he will not run again. The actor, whose activities have been centered on the Coast the last two years, ran for re-election in 1958 and 1961 in response to a draft.

He explains that he would not consider running again even if another campaign to draft him were launched. It's his feeling that he's served his time and, moreover, he believes the president of Equity should be based in Manhattan and not on the Coast as he is. Bellamy, who's busy there headlining in "The Eleventh Hour" television series, has purchased a home in the L.A. area.

Equity is headquartered in N. Y. and Bellamy argues that an absentee president has to handle too much union business by telephone and letter and isn't as effective as if he were on the scene. The president's job, he explains, is concerned with such matters as union policy, philosophy and concepts, as well as committee work, and that it's easier to get one's point of view across on a subject if present when it's being discussed.

Bellamy says feelers have been put out by members of the union regarding the possibility of his

Chi Critics 'Save' Show; Their Followup Notices Boost Biz for 'Nativity'

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Local drama critics, normally blamed by producers for killing shows, are being credited with prolonging the life of one. "Black Nativity" had started poorly at the Civic last December, despite favorable notices, and after two weeks of grosses at the $7,000 level, producer Martin Tahse had posted a tentative closing notice. What made him decide to keep it going was a sudden indication of mounting interest, apparently generated by three of the critics who gave the show unusual followup attention.

So the gospel presentation stayed a total of six weeks instead of two and probably even turned a small profit when it closed on Jan. 12. Not since the Tribune's Claudia Cassidy personally built an audience for the ailing "Long Day's Journey Into the Night" several seasons back—when she wrote a column reproaching her readers for their lack of patronage—have the local aisle-sitters made such an overt effort to keep a show going here.

Roger Dettmer, of the American, was by far its most vocal advocate, and he alone of the critics literally urged the purchase of tickets. One of his several followup pieces was headlined "Go Go Go See Nativity." Like Dettmer, Glenna Syse, of the Sun-Times, saw the show a second time and let her readers know that it was worth it. She also pitched in with feature stories.

Miss Cassidy devoted a full column a week after her review to an account of how enthusiastically "Nativity" was received in Europe, which had the effect of a second review, and was otherwise generous with theatre notes and Sunday space.

Three of the local gossip columnists also contributed to what took shape as a campaign, and the Chicago Defender, a Negro daily, publicized it heavily with even a frontpage editorial.

The boxoffice built steadily. The third week gross was nearly $12,000, the fourth $17,469, the fifth $21,206 and the sixth $21,855. The first two weeks together totalled only $14,291, but the last four averaged better than $18,000 each.

Stevens-Schenker Drop 'Madly in Love' Project

Roger L. Stevens and Joel Schenker have cancelled plans to bring "Madly in Love" to Broadway. They closed their production of the comedy last Saturday (18) following a four-week tryout in Florida. A New York opening, had been tentatively scheduled for next Wednesday (29) at an undesignated theatre. Celeste Holm, Jean Pierre Aumont and Macdonald Carey costarred in the show.

The Ruth Goetz adaptation of Andre Roussin's "L'Amour Fou" put in three weeks Dec. 26-Jan. 12 at the Coconut Grove Playhouse, Miami, and last week it was at the Royal Poinciana Playhouse, Palm Beach. Miss Holm appeared in a prior tryout of the comedy last summer at the Playhouse in the Park, Philadelphia.

'Dolly' Season's 1st Tuner Smash

Broadway got its first smash musical of the season last week with the unveiling Thursday night (16) of "Hello, Dolly" at the St. James Theatre. Favorable reviews turned in by the critics of the six dailies included three raves and the boxoffice has since been jumping with a steady stream of ticket-buyers and a flood of mail orders.

Mail dropped off at the St. James Monday (20) and yesterday (Tues.) contained a reported total of 14,135 orders. That's believed to be an unprecedented two-day figure. An estimated $25,000 was taken in at the St. James boxoffice Friday (17), when as many as 400 persons were on line at one time to purchase tickets. The theatre has also installed four extra phones to handle the inquiries.

Prior to the opening of the Carol Channing-starrer, David Merrick, who's presenting the show, disclosed that he was withholding the usual advance ticket allotments to brokers. It's figured such allotments for "Dolly" would come to 250-300 tickets for each evening performance.

Orders from brokers are being filled at the boxoffice, but Merrick has said, they won't get tickets on a consignment basis until the initial public demand subsides. It's his intention to take care of mail orders first and then the window sale, a practice he claims to have employed on other shows where advances have been large.

Although the musical is billed as a Merrick presentation, it's a co-production venture in which he's partnered with Champion-Five Inc., a firm formed by Gower Champion, who staged and choreographed it. The published limited partnership agreement lists Merrick as sole general partner, but a closing explanatory note reveals that Champion Five is a co-producer with a share of production rights and responsibilities. The co-production setup is also listed among the credits for the show in the Playbill, the official program for Broadway productions.

Besides co-producing, Champion Five is one of the backers of the $350,000 venture with a 5% interest ($35,000). Consequently, Champion is in for a hefty three-way payoff, sharing in profits as an investor and co-producer and sharing in the gross on a royalty basis for his contribution as director-choreographer. For Merrick, the production represents a successful parlay of one of his former straight play hits into a musical click.

"Dolly" is an adaptation of Thornton Wilder's "The Matchmaker," which Merrick co-produced with the Theatre Guild in 1955. The material has an earlier history, as outlined in the review elsewhere in this issue. The book for "Dolly" is by Michael Stewart and the music and lyrics are by Jerry Herman.

BOSTON'S THEATRE CO. OPENS WINTER SERIES

Boston, Jan. 21.

The Theatre Co. of Boston is resuming productions at a 99-seat playhouse in the Hotel Bostonian. Its first winter production, "Endgame," opens tonight, (Tues.).

Frank Cassidy steps out of his usual role as company manager to play the lead, and the others in the cast will be Dustin Hoffman, Naomi Thornton and Ed Finnegan. David Wheeler directs.

"Endgame" runs three weeks of a five-play special subscription series, three weeks each. Others on the schedule are "The Quare Fellow," by Brendan Behan; "In The Jungle of Cities," by Bertolt Brecht; "A Country Scandal," by Chekhov, and "The Room," by Harold Pinter.

3 Original Leads Will Tour 'Little'

"Little Me," which was in the hole for nearly 40% of its $400,000 investment at the end of a 33-week Broadway run last summer, has been re-activated for a tour which gets underway Jan. 30 at the Auditorium, Rochester. Repeating the lead assignments they originated on Broadway will be Sid Caesar, Virginia Martin and Nancy Andrews.

The musical closed on Broadway last June 29 and a July 23 audit, covering the final weeks of operation, as well as closing expenses, revealed unrecovered costs of $154,576. The production tab on the Cy Feuer-Ernest H. Martin presentation was $353,515, which was hiked to $355,765 by a write-off of $2,250 in deferred copying and orchestration costs. A total operating profit of $206,849 was reduced to $201,189 by $5,660 closing expenses.

The scenery and equipment at that time were packed, ready for travel, and stored in the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre, N.Y., where the tuner had been berthed. Feuer & Martin operate the Lunt-Fontanne. The July 23 audit also disclosed that the show's backers had been repaid $160,000 of their investment, leaving a capital balance of $85,424.

"Little Me," with book by Neil Simon, lyrics by Carolyn Leigh and music by Cy Coleman, is based on the Patrick Dennis novel of the same title.

Repeal of Tix Tax Gets One-Vote Endorsement; Treasury Not Cordial

Washington, Jan. 21.

By 9 to 8 vote, the Senate Finance Committee Monday (20) repealed the 10% admission tax on legitimate theatre performances and orchestra concerts. Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) sponsored the successful amendment to the tax reduction bill pending before the committee.

Repeal still must pass the Senate and survive a later House-Senate conference committee if it is to go into law. A conference will be held after Senate adoption of the bill to iron out Senate-House differences and draft a final congressional version of the bill.

The House has already passed the bill without changing any admission tabs. The Treasury Dept. opposes admissions reductions.

Shorten Met Visit

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

The 19th annual Metropolitan Opera engagement is scheduled for May 21-24. It's four days and five operas, down from six-day visit and seven operas last two previous seasons here.

Curtailment of out-of-town engagements this spring is due to special World's Fair added performances, handled via American Express.

While no contract has been signed yet for 1965 here, present plans call for a return then to six nights and seven operas. The 1963 engagement left local sponsors in the red for the first time. Before 1962 the highly successful Minneapolis engagements were shorter.

This spring's operas will be "La Boheme," "Manon," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Falstaff" and "Don Giovanni."

Introduce 3 Bills in Legislature To Curb Abuses in B'way Theatre; Would Give Atty. Gen'l Wide Powers

Three bills proposed by N. Y. Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz to deal with abuses uncovered by his office in an 11-month probe of legit operations on and off-Broadway were introduced last Monday (20) in the N. Y. State Legislature. In his proposals, Lefkowitz is seeking authority for his office to exercise stringent control over the business aspects of legit activities, from the inception of a show to the distribution and sale of tickets.

The bills, introduced in the Legislature by Sen. Samuel L. Greenberg, Brooklyn Democrat, and Assemblyman Anthony P. Savarese Jr., Queens, Republican, were drafted by Lefkowitz, Samuel A. Hirshowitz, First Asst. Attorney General, and David Clurman, Asst. Attorney General who, as head of the Real Estate Bureau for Syndications & Cooperatives in Lefkowitz's office, was in charge of the legit investigation.

Clurman would head the watchdog setup, and funds for its operation would be provided by producers and theatre owners, each paying one-eighth of 1% of gross receipts each week to the Attorney General's Dept. of Law. Such payment, to be made every Monday, would provide an estimated $100,000 annually to cover the cost of administration and enforcement of the legit regulations.

Under the laws proposed by Lefkowitz, failure by anyone connected with the management of a production to comply with prescribed financial practices and the involvement of any production personnel in kickbacks, rebates and other such deals for personal gain would constitute a misdemeanor, as would the taking of "ice" by a theatre owner, treasurer or anyone else in the employ of a theatre. Conviction on a misdemeanor charge would carry a maximum penalty of a $500 fine or a year in jail, or both.

The three bills, which would become effective next Sept. 1, comprise two that amend the general business law in relation to the regulation of legit financing and accounting procedures, as well as the regulating of theatre owners and operators, treasurers and others in the employ of a theatre. The third bill amends the penal law at it pertains to unlawful charges for theatre tickets.

The first of the three measures (Article 26-A) supersedes Article 23-A of the general business law and applies to the raising of investment coin and accounting procedures. In this area, the At-

Sylvia Succeeds Miriam In Off-B'way Dual Bill

Sylvia Sidney has succeeded Miriam Hopkins in "Riverside Drive," the collective title of a double-bill scheduled to open Feb. 4 at the Theatre de Lys, N.Y. Miss Hopkins withdrew from the presentation following a disagreement with Stan Raiff, who's producing the bill comprising John Donavan's "Damn You Scarlet O'Hara" and 'All My Pretty Little Ones."

The Feb. 4 opening is the latest in a series of postponements for the $20,000 offering. Jan. 20 was the originally preem date, but the debut was subsequently pushed back to Jan. 22, then Jan. 28. Donald Woods has the costarring spot opposite Miss Sidney, and Douglas Seale is director.

'Funny Girl' Gets New Second Act

Boston, Jan. 21.

"Funny Girl," the Ray Stark-Seven Arts musical based on early years of the late Fanny Brice, trying out at the Shubert here, got a brand new second act last Thursday and two truckloads of scenery, edited out, were shipped to the warehouse.

The company is rehearsing practically 'round the clock and many changes are being made.

Barbra Streisand, playing Fanny Brice, and Sidney Chaplin, playing Nicky Arnstein, have been unavailable for radio tv interviews because of the researsals, but will make their first tv interview on the Elliot Norton, Boston Record American drama critic, on tape tonight (Tues.) over WGBH-TV, Channel 2 educational station.

All local critics gave Miss Streisand favorable reviews, but were divided on the show, with the majority finding fault with the second act, which in its opening night version was a melodramatic, schmaltzy, slow moving account of the Brice-Arnstein marriage breakup. The musical is sold out for its three-week run. It continues the tryout in Philadelphia.

Opening night (Jan. 13), dancer Diane Coupe, playing "Jenny," broke her metatarsal bone in an adagio number in the first act. She had a big specialty number in the second act, and hasty changes had to be made by director Garson Kanin in the first two scenes which got the second half off to a limping start.

It's indicated that before the show leaves Boston, it will be considerably changed, especially in the book. Hub crix will probably reevaluate the show in the third week. Reprising "Funny Girl" in his Sunday Advertiser column, Norton said in part, "The faults of 'Funny Girl' are nearly all in the libretto, which is spineless. Reporting the love affair of funny Fanny Brice and gambler Nicky Arnstein, playwright Isobel Lennart has tried so hard to make it idyllic she has succeeded in making it dull.

"'Funny Girl' will surely prosper here. For it has Barbra Streisand, it has lively songs and dances and, most significant, it leaves the cortex, the sensitive part of the brain, unstirred and untouched. What more can a playgoer want?"

Rehearsal Club Anni

Rehearsal Club, the West 53d Street home for young actresses, marked its 50th anniversary Monday night (20). For the occasion a one-hour intimate revue was staged at the New York Hilton Hotel by the 42 girls now resident at the club.

Marge Greene staged the "Showcase Revue" with help from Equity Theatre Library personages. The idea was to "draw attention" of the performing media to the talents.

Dottie Lamour Planning Whoop-de-doo as Finale Of Ford's Theatre, Balto

Baltimore, Jan. 21.

Mayor Theodore McKeldin, with an assist from Dorothy Lamour, is planning a last performance sendoff for Ford's Theatre, which is to be torn down after "Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" is done for the last time there Feb. 1. The 93-year-old theatre, the city's only legitimate house, is to be razed to make way for a parking garage to be built by the Hecht Co. department store chain.

Miss Lamour, a resident of the suburban area, is chairman of the Mayor's special "Farewell to Ford's Committee." She hopes to decorate the lobby in Gay '90s style for the evening, with a red carpet out front, roped passageways for dignitaries and a footman at the entrance. She is also aiming for national coverage, and intends to invite some of the great names who have performed on Ford's stage through the years.

She wants "Auld Lang Syne" played when the curtain finally descends, has arranged for Governor Tawes to speak briefly during intermission. The former picture star has also suggested bleachers be erected across the street, in front of the Town Theatre.

Miss Lamour was appointed to the Civic Center Commission last fall by the Mayor.

(reprise), Finale.

Thanks to Gower Champion's inspired, expert staging and Carol Channing's economy-size talent and personality, "Hello, Dolly!" which opened at the St. James Theatre last Thursday night (16), is the first major musical smash of the Broadway season. The David Merrick production is a powerhouse show that should be a potent touring item with a suitable star, besides having the makings of a click picture and a being likely vehicle for musical stock.

The Thornton Wilder comedy of 1955-56, "The Matchmaker," as stylishly directed by Tyrone Guthrie, is the basis for this song and dance rumpus about an uproarious but canny marriage broker who decides to keep her most lucrative client, a crotchety but romantic and therefore malleable Yonkers "half-millionaire," for herself.

Michael Stewart's book remains admirably close to the source, and Jerry Herman has written what seem on first hearing to be reasonably melodic tunes and agreeably uncomplicated lyrics. What turns good material into galvanizing entertainment, however, is Champion's virtuoso staging and choreography, plus the spectacular Channing presence.

One number about half-way in the second act typifies this contagious blending of elements. It's the title song, and although the music and lyrics are considerably less than sensational, Champion's elaborately varied dance routine for the male ensemble and Miss Channing's overpowering personality transforms it into an audience stampede. It's an electrifying example of triumphant theatrical concept and execution.

There are other big numbers in "Hello, Dolly," however. Miss Channing has a way of taking over the proceedings, notably in the opening song, "I Put My Hand In," as well as with the slapstick "Motherhood" and the situation tunes, "Before the Parade Passes By" and "So Long Dearie." There's also a resounding reaction to "It Takes a Woman," as sung by David Burns and the male chorus, and to some extent to "Ribbons Down My Back," by Eileen Brennan, and "It Only Takes a Moment," by Charles Nelson Reilly.

Although it is plainly designed all the way as Miss Channing's show and she dominates it throughout, "Dolly" provides rewarding opportunities for the featured performers, notably Burns as the reluctant but helpless Yonkers skinflint, Miss Brennan and Reilly as the romantic milliner and her adventurous swain, and Sondra Lee and Jerry Dodge as their respective apprentices and the subsidiary love interest.

In the case of Miss Brennan and Reilly, they would be more effective if they were more restrained, in contrast to the exaggeration of some of the other performances. Underplaying a bit would also tend to give increased value to their romance, notably in Reilly's singing of the straight "It Only Takes a Moment." Among the lesser principals, Alice Playten, Igors Gavon and Mary Jo Cattlett are particularly good, and the male chorus is a greater asset than in most musicals.

Oliver Smith's imaginative and flexible scenic design is a valuable factor, particularly in the use of the curving runway in front of the orchestra pit. Freddy Wittop's amusing costumes are a help, as are the orchestrations by Philip J. Lang and the musical direction by Shepard Coleman. But the explosive impact of "Hello, Dolly" is still primarily due to the combination of Gower Champion and Carol Channing as interpreters and exploiters of the Thornton Wilder play and Jerry Herman's songs.

Incidentally, there's an extensive history to the material. It was originally a play, "A Day Well Spent," by John Oxenford, produced in London in 1835. A German language version by Johann Nestroy, titled "Einen Jux Will er Sich Machen" (literally, "He Will Be the Devil of a Fellow"), was done in Vienna in 1842.

Wilder's initial adaptation, "The Merchant of Yonkers," was produced by the Theatre Guild in 1938-39, with Herman Shumlin staging and a cast including Jane Cowl, Percy Waram, Tom Ewell, June Walker, Nydia Westman, John Call and Joseph Sweency. The same play was done in London in 1951-52 with Sophie Stewart as the femme lead.

Wilder's revised edition, "The Matchmaker," was first done at the Edinburgh Festival, next in London and then by Merrick and the Theatre Guild as a Broadway hit, and finally on tour (and as a picture). Guthrie staged it as a stylized romp, with a cast including Ruth Gordon, Sam Levene (Loring Smith on Broadway), Eileen Herlie, Arthur Hill, Rosamund Greenwood, and Alec McCowen (Robert Morse on Broadway).

Now "Hello, Dolly" will add plenty more mileage to the much-developed Oxenford yarn.

Hobe.

Now Broadway has a distinguished drama to match the new musical click, "Hello, Dolly" which arrived two nights earlier. With the arrival last Saturday night (18) of "Dylan" at the Plymouth Theatre, the season gets a notable play and the best male character portrayal in recent years.

"Dylan," by Sidney Michaels, is a biographical and therefore somewhat episodic drama about the final period in the career of the late tormented, gifted Welsh poet, Dylan Thomas. It should do potent business, at least as long as Alec Guinness remains in the cast. After that, attendance may be questionable, depending on the boxoffice draw and performance of a successor. There's probably a picture in the piece, at least with Guinness as star, and its road and stock prospects would be largely a matter of casting.

Geniuses, particularly artistic geniuses, are apt to be booby traps as stage characters. Actors portraying famous figures, especially writers, painters and musicians, almost invariably look all too obviously like actors. Anyway, an artist's creative expression is nearly always much more dramatic than anything a playwright may think of to say about him or put into his mouth, even if the words may actually be the artist's own.

But Michaels has brought off the almost impossible in this painfully plausible portrait of an eloquent lyric writer with a wild zest for living and an uncontrollable compulsion to self-destruction. Guinness gives a virtually miraculous performance as the fascinating, tragedy-fated hero, and under Peter Glenville's artful direction there are credible and moving portrayals by Kate Reid as the loving jealous, bitter Mrs. Thomas, Barbara Berjer as the American girl who seems about to save the poet from himself, James Ray as the conscientious lecture agent, Martin Garner as the author's American publisher, and several other members of the large cast.

"Dylan" opens with the poet and his wife in one of their almost incessant, raging quarrels in their Welsh seaside village home as he is about to leave on his first American lecture tour. Virtually all the other scenes take place in the U. S., starting at Idlewild Airport, where the hero shows the gift of witty, flippant and colorful gab with which he handled reporters and was to use with lecture chairmen, hostesses, barroom acquaintances and floozies of assorted social strata.

His drunkenness, addiction to and way with women, his irresponsibility and progressive ill-health, his underlying self-knowledge and carefully dissembled shyness and modesty, his pride in his poetry, even his talent, is somehow made believable and important to a previously uncommitted audience. The character and personality of this exasperating but curiously charming man come to life and he becomes someone to care about.

Guinness gives a brilliant performance that seems a cinch to run away with the balloting as the best straight play portrayal by an actor in VARIETY's annual poll of the New York drama critics. Although the other players are dwarfed by comparison, there are genuinely excellent performances by the featured actors, plus a number of skillful portrayals in vignette roles.

Oliver Smith's scenery involves an ingenious, revolving arrangement of stairways to represent various locales and provide ample playing area, but tends to be distracting at times. Ruth Morley's costumes, Laurence Rosenthal's incidental music and Jack Brown's lighting are helpfully moody.

A program note says that the producers obtained the rights to two books about the poet, and presumably the play is at least partly based on material from them. One is "Dylan Thomas in America," by John Malcolm Brinnin, his lecture agent, and the other is "Leftover Life to Kill," by Caitlin Thomas, his widow.

In any case, "Dylan" is a credit to the theatre and provides a lift in quality to the season. Hobe.

Musical numbers: "Tirra Lirra," "The Game of Morra," "Rugantino in the Stocks," "A House Is Not the Same Without a Woman," "Nothing to Do," "Just Look!" "The Saltarello," "Tirra Lirra" (reprise), "The Headsman and I," "Nothing to Do" (reprise), "Ciumachella," "Lantern Night," "Roma," "Roma" (reprise), "I'm Happy," "Just Stay Alive," "San Pasquale," "Passatella," "It's Quick and Easy," "Dance of the Candle Killers," "Boy and Man," Finale.

"Rugantino" is a visual delight, with its some score of scenes in two acts circulated on a revolving stage, its acting and tuneful melodies. It is done in Italian by the original Roman cast, and there are subtitles, a la foreign films. This is one of the novelties of the legit presentation.

Projected on two panels in three-inch levels above the actors' heads, the "Rugantino" punchlines need clarification, better synchronization, and perhaps some device eliminating the required eye-switches from facial expressions to reading the overhead titles. However this undoubtedly will be corrected by Alexander Cohen, the producer of the Broadway-bound musicomedy after its two-and-a-half-week tryout at the 3,211-seat O'Keefe Centre before Feb. 8 to the 1,551-seat Mark Hellinger, N. Y.

Acted in the Italian language—and the many Italians in the opening night audience were getting the dialog ahead of the flashed overhead English translation. This is a major part of the necessary improvement if "Rugantino" is to succeed on Broadway, irrespective of the acting of the stars and principals.

Apart from the overtitles, "Rugantino" has all the postcard scenes of Rome, thanks to the manipulations of a revolving stage in its 24 scenes. Set in the Eternal City of 1830, when everyone carried a knife and love was violent and amusements, sadistic, the pageantry of the Roman Catholic Church and national holidays were paramount. Scenes include the city square on Lantern Night, the Paratelli Palace and a corner of the Forum, all of these beautiful with their fountains and statues, coupled with colorful costumes.

In the musicomedy of "Rugantino," the arrogant and charming but illiterate hero who is introduced to the audience as under the Papal law for counterfeiting and under sentence to the stocks. He sees a beatuiful girl (married) passing and brags to his pals that he will have her by next Lantern Night. There are comedy-interpolations of Rugantino's misadventures, and his final reaching of manhood when he faces the guillotine.

Nino Manfredi plays the title role, Ornella Vanoni portrays the girl, and Aldo Fabrizi acts the role of the chief executioner, all starring and all excellent. Other as a Roman stalwart, Franca Tamantini as the Princess and Frenzo Palmer as the heroine's husband.

"Without a Woman"; "Ciumachella, Tender Flower" and "Lights of Roma" are the top hit tunes.

B'way Legit's Crisis

principals include Bice Valori as a two-timing mistress, Toni Ucci Jerome Kidder, who heads the Frauds Bureau in the office of N. Y. District Attorney Frank S. Hogan.

In addition, the State Tax Commission and the Internal Revenue Service have joined in the investigation to ascertain whether any monies accruing to individuals through such practices as kickbacks and rebates or through the payment of "ice" in the black market disposition of theatre tickets were reported as taxable income.

Aside from these investigatory actions and the proposed legislation, Broadway has been experiencing a drastic decline in business. This season has thus far produced only two entries with powerhouse markings, one having just opened on the Main Stem last week. That's the musical, "Dolly," in which Carol Channing is starring at the St. James Theatre. The other is the comedy "Barefoot in the Park," now in its 14th week at the Biltmore Theatre, N. Y.

The biggest dramatic click of the current Broadway season has been "Luther," but that's a nonprofit venture. Of the other shows, a few have been doing well, but a large number have been racking up playing time on generally modest business with weekly receipts just about covering operational expenses, providing little, if anything, towards recovery of productions costs. As an aside to this bleak picture, a story in the N. Y. Times last Friday (17) pointed out an apparent drop this season in theatregoing by out-of-town buyers who, heretofore, constituted an important segment of the legit audience.

The proposals for legislative action, covered in greater detail elsewhere in this isssue, give the Attorney General widespread policing power in the business area of legit operations from the initial solicitation by producers for backing to the distribution and sale of tickets. Highlights of the bills, which provide the Attorney General with authorization to prosecute producers and their managerial personnel, as well as theatre owners and their personnel for violations of the regulations to be instituted by him, are:

A provision whereby producers and others connected with a production in a managerial position are required to turn over to the presentation income from "ice," kickbacks, rebates, etc. Such revenue cannot be retained for personal use, except where provision for such retention was made in an offering circular. However, even though a producer or one of his employees turns "ice" income over to the production the individual could still be liable for prosecution on the grounds of conspiracy for involvement in such black-market dealings.

A requirement that in order for theatre owners and those in their employ to sell tickets they will have to register their names and other data with the Attorney General, who would have the authority to suspend them from such registration for charging more for a ticket than the established price. A separate measure provides for criminal action against those connected with a theatre who sell tickets at more than the established price.

Offering circulars for the financing of a legit production cannot be sent out without the issuer having received a letter of permission from the Attorney General that full disclosure of facts pertinent to the venture have been made.

The institution of rigid practices in the maintenance by producers of financial records and by theatre owners and personnel of records and accounts of ticket distribution.

B'way Uneven; 'Dolly' $46,985 for 6, 'Albatross' $28,837, 'Fringe' $21,092, 'Ear' 19G, 'Ballad' 15G, 'Chips' 14½G

The big news on Broadway last week was the emergence of a new smash musical, "Dolly," which opened Thursday night (16) at the St. James Theatre. Otherwise, the boxoffice picture was spotty, increases running from $429 to $5,842 and drops ranging from $239 to $3,942 on an eight-performance per week comparison with the previous session.

The Monday (13) snowstorm is figured to have hurt business the early part of the frame, except in the case of the sellout "Barefoot in the Park." Receipts were still meagre for a number of entries, two of which have thus far set closing dates. They're "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," which shutters next Saturday (25), and "Stop the World—I Want to Get Off," exiting to tour a week later.

Set Czech Opera Group For Edinburgh Festival

Edinburgh, Jan. 21.

The Narodni Divadlo, or National Theatre of Prague, will perform for three weeks with a repertory of five operas, all sung in Czech, at the 1964 International Edinburgh Festival. Three of the works have not been professionally performed in the United Kingdom.

The engagement will open Aug. 17 at the King's Theatre with Smetana's "Dalibor." This has not yet been performed in Britain, although it is regularly revived in German-speaking countries.

Two operas by Leos Janack, "Katya Kabanova" and "The House of the Dead," will also be produced. The latter, based on the Dostoevsky novel, is Janacek's last opera. Both these works will be newly staged in Prague in the weeks immeidately preceding the Festival.

Modern Czech opera will be represented by Jan Cikker's "Resurrection," based on Tolstoy's novel. The company will be led by Jaroslav Krombholc, its musical director, with Vaclas Kaslik, as the chief stager.

patrons, paying between $2.50 and $6 per ticket.

Three days before opening night news reached Tel Aviv that Berioska couldn't come "at the set date and the tour is postponed until further notice."

After scores of cables, the performances were cancelled and people were advised that their money would be refunded. Then 24 hours later, a cable confirmed arrival of the group, stating that "there have been technical troubles only, and maybe the first performance only would have to be postponed for one day."

Zaven Taromov, manager of the Berioska, arrived ahead of the company and seemed disturbed at all the excitement. It seems as if the real cause for shifting of sked and hesitation hadn't been due to change-of-heart but rather illness from food in Athens where many of the dancers suffered from indigestion. Since the company has a tight schedule, they feared recovery might be a long aair. When damages and possible international complications had been made clear to them, they promised to appear. The first performance hence was postponed for only 24 hours.

'Funny Girl' Record $66,154, Bost.; 'Rugantino' $37,791 in 5, Toronto; 'Sammy' $45,737, 'Forum' 41G, Philly

Business on the road was generally good last week. The Broadway-bound "Funny Girl" established a house record in its preem week in Boston and the Italian import, "Rugantino," got off to an okay start in its pre-Broadway tune-up in Toronto.

The frame's top-grosser in the tuner division was "Sound of Music," in Seattle, and in the straight play category "A Man for All Seasons," in Boston. "Seidman and Son," currently in Los Angeles, closes Feb. 8 in San Francisco. "What Makes Sammy Run?" which extended its tryout in Philadelphia, has again pushed back its Broadway opening at the 54th St. Theatre, this time to Feb. 15.

Estimates for Last Week

Parenthetic designations for out-of-town shows are the same as for Broadway, except that hyphenated T with show classification indicates tryout, RS indicates road show and BT indicates bus-and-truck production. Also, prices on touring shows include 10% Federal tax and local tax, if any, but as on Broadway grosses are net; i.e., exclusive of taxes. Engagements are for single week unless otherwise noted.

Where subscription is mentioned, the gross is the net after the deductions of commissions. Grosses for split weeks are projected when shows play guaranteed dates.

Brit. National Theatre Sets Sked for 1964-65

London, Jan. 21.

Of 10 productions set by the National Theatre for the 1964-65 season, starting next autumn, five are British and five foreign. These are additional to the three presentations at the Chichester festival theatre already announced, including a new play by Peter Shaffer, "The Royal Hunt of the Sun."

The five British plays which will be presented at the Old Vic are Noel Coward's "Hay Fever," William Congreve's "Love for Love," William Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing" and "King Lear," and a new Charles Wood play, "I Don't Hold with Heroes."

The imports include two plays by the Spanish playwright Lope de Vega, "Fuente Ovejuna," adapted by Alan Sillitoe, and "La Fianza Satisfecha," adapted by John Osborne. The repertoire will also include Bertolt Brecht's "Mother Courage," Anton Chekhov's "Three Sisters" and August Strindberg's "The Dance of Death."

Professionals on Campus; Stage 'Child Buyer' Novel

Ann Arbor, Jan. 21.

U. of Michigan, an academic producer of professional theatrical works, will mount on March 2 a new stage version of the John Hersey novel, "The Child Buyer." Paul Shyre's adaptation will be staged here by Marcella Cisney, wife of Robert C. Schnitzer, who heads the project.

Pair were in Manhattan last week to complete casting. Lined up are Edith Meiser, Michael O'Sullivan, Eugenia Rawls, John Becher, Don McHenry, Wallace Rooney, William Traylor, Keith Taylor, Betty Henritze.

Will play Trueblood Theatre on campus.

Longhair Reviews

Ernani

(Teatro Regio, Parma)

Parma, Jan. 5.

It is in the smaller Italian cities where the true opera buffs flourish. None is more stringently critical than the audience here at the Teatro Regio where the new season was recently launched with Verdi's "Ernani." They turn out to a man for any opera, any singer, any special conductor providing it's a work by Giuseppe Verdi. The gallery of this house is especially olympian in that they forgive nothing and know everything Even a faultless first act could not warm them up. They were waiting.

Later enthusiasm rose. Everyone was finally moved. At the end the house broke into endless applause for interpreters in and above the pit. Francesco Molinari-Pradelli was the conductor who created a perfect union between pit and stage. The lead was sung by tenor Gastone Limarilli whose voice has none of the brilliance, size or quality of the great tenors but it is well placed and dependable. Margherita Roberti's Elvira was precise and correct in each detail.

The triumph of the evening was the American baritone Cornel MacNeil with a big, sonorous voice and an unfailing sense of dramatic interpretation. He passed with flying colors his "Parma-debut" after having sung in every major theatre of two continents.

Smaller parts were complementing the cast in every way and the chorus master, Maestro Tagini, deserves special mention. Goth.

Quatour

(N. Y. City Ballet)

Utilizing "a piece of music for four parties," the French definition for the title, Jacques d'Amboise has placed four of the City Center musicians behind a scrim upstage and himself, plus Mimi Paul, Robert Maiorano and Roland Vasquez, downstage to dance to Shostakovitzh's Quartet No. 1. Until the choreographer-star and Miss Paul got into their adagio, the dancing followed the Mozartian music so slavishly that the dancers and strings could have exchanged places behind the scrim to better advantage.

The 15-minute piece appeared to extol a "Green Bay Tree" theme. There was a physically touching relationship between the three different-aged men in the exposition. Then d'Amboise, the one in the middle, age-wise, danced the adagio highlight with Miss Paul, subbing for Suzanne Farrell, only to abandon her when Vasquez, as the older man, crossed, leaving the girl to dance another love duet, this time with the youngest man, Maiorano. For some reason that angered d'Amboise when he returned and he chased Maiorano off and a badly-executed flash of red shadow indicated bodily harm to one or the other. Enter older man, exit older man in opposite direction with girl on arm. So much for the constancy of woman. In fact, it was a bad night all around for the girls. In the other modern pieces, on either side of "Quatour," the men in their white sweat-shirts and black tights looked slim below and muscular above, while the femmes looked scrawny above in black and big-thighed below in white tights. In "Quatour," however, Miss Paul had an attractive gown and the men, for a change, wore trousers.

This company appears to be coming to the end of the line in both theme and movement in modern, no-costume, no-set, no-melody pieces. Leve

Inside Stuff—Legit

Galina Samtsova, star of "Cinderella" in its current Paris production, was described in a VARIETY review (Jan. 1) as a former member of the Kiev Ballet. Most Paris newspapers, and the show's p.a., describe her as a former star of the Leningrad Kirov Ballet. Actually, she was in Kiev, studied with the Kirov and did a bit of dancing with them, but not importantly. Several years ago she left the Kirov without encountering any of the difficulties that another member of the company, Rudy Nureyev, was to encounter a few months later. Russians explain this by saying Miss Samtsova asked for release in simple, normal fashion and this was granted, whereas Nureyev made a flashy public "political escape" without previous notice while his company was performing in Paris. Miss Samtsova went to Toronto and joined the Canadian National Ballet for solo work. Last year she was promoted there and, for the first time, became a ballerina. Canadians are furious that Samtsova, in her Paris publicity, is never (or rarely) referred to as a "Canadian ballerina" since, they point out she was not a ballerina while in Russia. Incidentally, in Paris, she is billed without the t, as Samsova.

Walter Felsenstein, stage director from East Berlin, has been offered a teaching position with Vienna's Music Academy as well as several productions to be staged at the State Opera. Felsenstein declined for the time being as he did not want to sacrifice his main interest in staging. But he will do an occasional new production outside his own (East Berlin) opera house. Hamburg baited him to a year's contract at $18,000 for each production. Nevertheless he has accepted Vienna's invitation to stage Carl Maria von Weber's "Freischuetz" under condition of a six-week rehearsal time (to be held at the Theatre an der Wien), two final weeks at the State Opera House itself.

"The Community," a new two-act play by Rev. Malcolm Boyd, Episcopal chaplain to Wayne State U. in Detroit, tried out in a downtown Detroit coffeehouse and will soon be produced in a Montreal cathedral. Meanwhile, 1,000 copies of the play will be printed by the National Council of the Episcopal Church to meet demands from university, civil rights and church groups throughout the U.S. which plan local presentations of "The Community."

Downtown Preem for Uptown Rep

Lincoln Center's Washington Square Pre-Beaumont Project a V.I.P. Rally—First Lady Attends

By LEONARD LEVINSON

ANTA Washington Square Theatre, downtown stand-in for the next two years of the prospective uptown Vivian Beaumont Repertory Theatre, was christened Monday evening (20). Opening gala brought the First Lady from Washington to join 1,100 top localites.

A handsome three-quarters arena house, installed in a Greenwich Village hole-in-the-ground at a cost of $400,000, was setting for Arthur Miller's first play in nine years. Invitees thereafter imbibed champagne at a supper dance which netted the production fund of the Repertory Theatre an estimated $40,000. Following total of nine paid previews, "After the Fall" will have a second, official opening tomorrow night (Thurs.) for the critics.

The special performance and the supper-dance, held at nearby Loeb Student Center, were handled with smooth coordination and nary a bobble, despite sporadic rain, a new theatre and the potential snafus of a one-time catered shindig. Committee for the gala was headed by Bennet H. Korn, president of Metromedia, and Mrs. Lowell P. Weicker. There were even five coaches to transport ticket-holders at $50 and $100) from theatre to reception.

Washington Square house, at 40 West Fourth Street, represents shrewd planning and building, with excellent acoustics despite no elaborate scientific preparations. It is a tasteful bowl with perfect sight from every seat. But only skimpy leg room at seats and inadequate lobby space are on the minus side.

The basic setting, in the Gordon Craig-Norman Bel Geddes style, will be utilized with interchangeable platforms for "Marco Millions" and "But For Whom Charlie," as well as "Fall." An innovation is the stage manager's booth, behind loge section, a la projection room with intercom communication to backstage, and the two follow spots operated from there by remote control on a stick console. Said to be the first N. Y. legit house so equipped. Between 320 and 340 lighting instruments are hung, most from the beam which serves as the center span of the building.

House, being of the same general layout, is serving as a pilot for the much more expensive Vivian Beaumont Theatre now building at Lincoln Center. Latter will have a more elaborate rear booth for stage manager, plus switchboards and sound control. Also, either 1,101 or 1,069 seats, depending on use of apron, against 1,158 in current building. A number of other advances are being tried out here for eventual use in the permanent structure.

Repertory company plans to use Washington Square theatre for two seasons. It was built and is being operated by ANTA and Robert W. Dowling. Following the move to Lincoln Center, the structure reverts to New York University, which owns the land and is charging $1 a year rental. Structure, which is 21½ feet above ground and digs down 15 feet below, is 130 by 120 feet, and was built on the Butler system of construction, with a series of steel piers and steel frames which screw in and can be unbolted, so that building can be taken apart like an erector set, leaving a concrete bowl as foundation for a tenatively planned science bldg.

ANTA Washington Square can gross $50,700 a week at present single - ticket boxoffice scale: Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday matinee and Sunday at $6 for first 15 rows; $4.50, $4. and $3. for each pair of last six loge rows; Friday and Saturday nights at $6.50, $5., $4.50 and $3; and Sunday matinee (a sell-out far in advance) at $5, $4, $3 and $2.50. Potential gross will fluctuate between this $50,700 and $44,000 which house would hit on all-subscription scale. Subscribers buy tix for three shows at a clip, with the discount wavering between fifty cents and a buck a ticket.

As of the present, combined sub and single seat sales amount to a healthy $725,000 and the assigned subscription capacity is 85% sold out. No theatre parties have been slated so far, although Macy and Stubs clubbers attended paid previews and some such deals may be signed after subscription period ends and ducat brokers must send down to make whatever buys they need.

John Gold, of London Evening News, attended first preview and filed story of "After the Fall" which Repertory officials regarded as breach of journalistic ethics. They then cancelled privilege of English press to attend further previews.

Newspaper man claimed that since the previews were open to the public and there was great news interest in author Miller's stage treatment of the character resembling his late wife, Marilyn Monroe, he was justified in commenting in print at once.

Mrs. Johnson was quoted the following morning on her enthusiasm for the play.

The American Playwrights Forum began a spring series of Monday night presentations at the Sheridan Square Playhouse, N.Y. last Monday (20).

Shubert Alley Shorts

Anita Gillette, who returned last week from a starring appearance in London in a musical, "Princess Pocahontas," has been booked for an appearance on the "Telephone Hour" on tv. She's due to have another baby in mid-June. She and her medical research-husband are already the parents of a three-year-old son.

Legit pressagent Martha Dreiblatt is the author of "Knitting for Everyone," published last week by Doubleday (paperback, at $1.25). She previous wrote "A Handy Knitting Library". Ironies of show business: Daniel Melnick, a boxoffice man for nearly 40 years, is currently assistant to Al Dugen, treasurer of the Lyceum Theatre, N.Y., where "Nobody Loves an Albatross' is running. Dugen is a fairly recent entrant to the boxoffice union. Melnick will give up his assistant status soon, however, as he's due to become treasurer of the 54th Street Theatre, where "What Makes Sammy Run?" is booked.

Add what's-wrong-with-legit notes. Barry Hyams, pressagent for the Lincoln Center repertory company, in an article, "How Press Agents Keep Busy" in the New York mag section of the N.Y. Herald Tribune, tosses off the following presumptive phrase, "Since the fate of Broadway plays is sealed on opening nights

If so, why employ pressagents? . . . Peter Bridge, the London producer, made a quick trip to New York the first week in January.

Introduce 3 Bills in Legislature

torney General seeks to correct such abuses as:

Improper and undisclosed profiteering by producers and production managers in the form of rebates, collusion and kickbacks involving suppliers and others; inadequate accounting to investors and other participants for profits and expenses; the use of misleading, insufficient and improvident offering literature and contracts in soliciting investments.

Requirements are to be established by the Attorney General, under the provisions of the bill, for producers to furnish periodically to investors and the Dept. of Law verified reports, accountings and auditings, prepared by an independent public accountant. It allows for the exemption from such regulation, however, upon certain conditions, of offerings of less than $50,000 or those made to less than 12 persons in or from the state of N. Y.

The measure gives the Attorney General authority to issue rules and regulations as to what should be contained in offering circulars to prospective investors. To issue such literature, a producer will have to get a letter from the Attorney General stating that filing of the offering has been permitted. If the solicitation is not approved, the Attorney General is to notify the producer in writing within 15 days after the submission of the material of its deficiencies.

Moreover, the bill makes the employment of any misleading or deceptive practices in connection with the securing of backing for shows a misdemeanor. It gives the Attorney General wide investigative power to determine whether provisions of the amendment have been violated, or to enforce the provisions. He or any officer designated by him is empowered to subpoena witnesses, compel their attendance, examine them under oath and require the production of any books or papers deemed relevant or material to an inquiry.

Regulations concerning the maintenance of financial records by managerial personnel of a production are to be formulated by the Attorney General and the bill also prohibits the use of investment coin for any purpose other than pre-production expenses. It does not permit waiver of this provision even by special permission of the investor.

Furthermore, the proposal gives the Attorney General authority to institute injunctive action in N.Y. Supreme Court against any person violating any of the article's provisions. When necessary, as might be the case if a producer were involved, a receiver could be appointed by the Attorney General to handle the production's affairs.

The bill allows for the Attorney General to prosecute those charged with a criminal offense in violation of the new article and regulations or any violation of any other law of the state applicable to or in respect to fraudulent practices in connection with the offer, sale, negotiation or advertising of syndication interests in theatrical productions. The Attorney General may have his deputy handle the prosecution or he may turn the matter over to the proper district attorney.

Such matters as "ice," kickbacks and rebates as they involve managerial personnel of a production are dealt with under a section of the bill covering "Unlawful retention of payments." Coin so obtained has to be turned over to the production within a period of 72 hours unless personal retention of the revenue was specified in offering literature. However, where no such provision was made retention of such funds will constitute a misdemeanor. However, even though a producer or one of his employees turns "ice" income over to the production the individual could still be liable for prosecution on the grounds of conspiracy for involvement in such black-market dealings.

The subject of "ice" from the standpoint of the theatre owner and operator, treasurer and others in the employ of the theatre is treated by the attorney general in a companion bill to the preceding measure. This is the bill to amend the general business law as it pertains to those who control the sale and distribution of tickets, usually the theatre owners and his employees.

The measure makes it illegal for a theatre owner and his personnel to sell tickets directly or indirectly unless a "Ticket Distributor Registration" listing all such individuals has been filed with the Attorney General. This registration would contain the names, backgrounds and the connection with the distribution of tickets of the theatre personnel.

The Attorney General would also have the power to suspend any person from such registration, including theatre owners, treasurers or other boxoffice personnel if it is determined that such person has exacted more than the established price for a theatre ticket in selling to the public, or theatre brokers or agents.

There is, at present, no statute applicable to overcharges by theatre personnel. The situation, as now covered by Article 10-B of the general business law, applies only to such activities by brokers. Besides the overcharging provision of the bill, it also requires that records and accounts pertaining to ticket distribution be kept by those in control of such distribution in accordance with regulations to be prescribed by the Attorney General. Another provision calls for financial reports, accountings and auditing on the sale and inventory of theatre tickets for legit presentations to be furnished periodically by the theatre to the producers of the offerings and to the Dept. of Law.

The act to amend the penal law in relation to unlawful charges for theatre tickets makes it a misdemeanor for theatre personnel to sell a ticket at more than the established price, plus tax, to the public or brokers. The bill applies to "all types of theatres and specifically the sale of tickets to persons licensed to resell such tickets for the direct purpose of curbing currently existing 'ice' practices in the sale by theatre treasurers to brokers of theatre tickets at premium prices."

The two bills amending the general business law each seek an appropriation of $35,000 in state funds.

Adelphi Univ. Theatre Will Offer Prize Script

The Adelphi Univ. Summer Theatre, Garden City, L.I., is conducting a playwriting contest limited to unproduced scripts by current members of the New Dramatists Committee. There'll be a first prize of $750 and a second prize of $500 for the winning full-length entries.

The winning script will be produced at the college theatre, with Equity actors. A campus production of the second-place selection is also a possibility. Stanley Gould, producer of the Adelphi shows, launched the contest on a suggestion by Stanley Young, executive director of the American National Theatre & Academy. The deadline on the submission of scripts is next April 1.

The New Dramatists Committee has 36 working playwrights as active members. They include Joe Masteroff, currently represented on Broadway by "She Loves Me"; Sidney Michaels," who's got two Main Stem offerings upcoming, "Dylan" and then "Ben Franklin In Paris," and Loften Mitchell, Lewis John Carloin and Roger O. Hirson, currently represented off-Broadway, respectively, by "Ballad for Bimshire," "Telemachus Clay" and "Journey to the Day."

Set Demolition Of Shubert, Det.

Detroit, Jan. 21.

The 2,000-seat Shubert Theatre in downtown Detroit wil be demolished beginning the end of next month. The house has been dark most of the time for the last three years, replaced by the new Fisher Theatre as the city's main legit theatre. The Shubert and the Fisher both are managed by the Nederlander family.

Legit in Detroit used to be centered on either end of Lafayette Blvd., at the Shubert and the Cass, the latter built by E. D. Stair and now owned by Beacon Enterprises, which announced several months ago it would become a film house. The Cass remains dark, however.

Scot Fest Production Company Goes Bankrupt

Glasgow, Jan. 21.

Robin Alexander Ltd., a local legit production-management firm, has gone into bankruptcy. At a meeting of creditors, Alexander himself explained that anticipated new financing from a U.S. source had not materialized. He also laid the company's difficulties to several other factors, including the "notorious fickleness" of Edinburgh Festival "fringe" audiences.

The company began business last February with the preparation of two productions for the festival. Its declared policy was to present new plays by Scot dramatists.

The pieces staged at the Edinburgh Festival, "The Comeback," by Tom Wright, and "Toccata for Cats," by George Bell Barker, both comparatively unknown authors, enthusiastic reaction from crix and customers, but business was meagre.

The company also presented a late-night revue featuring Dominic Behan. It did better business than the dramas but the b.o. receipts covered only its own immediate costs.

Censorship Charge Snarls Start Of Minn. Univ. Playwright Project

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

The project to help young playwrights by freeing them from Broadway pressures got off on the wrong foot at the Univ. of Minnesota, where it's being initiated with a $74,000 Rockefeller Foundation grant. However, the state university's Office of Advanced Drama Research, to which the project has been entrusted, will continue administering it, according to Dr. D. K. Smith, vice-president for academic administration and a speech and dramatic arts professor, chairman of the committee in charge.

Smith and Dr. Arthur Ballet, the latter head of the university's Advanced Drama Research Office, were in New York last week conferring with Rockefeller Foundation officials and trying to get matters straightened out. The project's bad start was due to the fact that the first two young dramatists, who had come here from New York to bring their plays alive under the project's provisions, became disgruntled when they found that their brain children wouldn't have public productions at the local Tyrone Guthrie Theatre.

That's what the two playwrights angrily charged was "censorship in its most insidious form." One of the two, Arthur L. Kopit, immediately withdrew and returned with his plays to New York. While remaining here to continue working on one of his plays, the other, Terrence McNally, called the university's refusal to permit the public performances "cowardice, immorality and boorishness."

Smith asserted, "In the nature of the project, public performance of the plays figuring in the project never was contemplated. Our project has been initiated precisely to avoid the pressure of public performance and the strains suffered by playwrights from Broadway deadlines and out-of-town tryouts," he explained.

"However," he added, "We did agree that if Kopit and McNally desired an audience, we'd select one to include our faculty members, students, local critics and others whom the playwrights themselves might like to have invited."

Smith said that the fact that the title of one of Kopit's plays is "The Day the Whores Came Out to Play Tennis" had nothing to do with the public performance ban. Relative to the charge of censorship, he asserted none of the plays had been read by any committee member.

For his play "And Things That Go Bump In the Night," now in rehearsal, McNally brought Lawrence Kornfeld along from New York to direct. "This refusal to permit the public performances of our plays is an insult to Kopit and me, my director, my cast and the people of Minnesota," McNally told Dan Sullivan, critic of the Minneapolis Morning Tribune.

"I had understood that the selection of an audience was to be in firm control of the playwrights," the author declared. "If I had realized otherwise I wouldn't have participated in this project. But now that I'm here, I'll stay anyway.

"I do not write for a select audience, such as it's proposed to assemble. I want the Minneapolis audience to see my play because during a visit to the Guthrie Theatre last summer I became convinced that there's a different audience here from the Broadway professional crowd. As it is, my play will go on at the Guthrie Theatre Feb. 3-6, with no one in the audience excepting director Kornfeld and me."

Kornfeld also had a few things to say about the development to Gary Gilson, a staff writer for the Minneapolis Star. "We came out here to work on the play because we had heard about the extraordinary Minneapolis audience," he said. "But when we arrived here we were told: 'Clam up. Go underground.' We're not interested in getting into a squabble. We just want to work. If we had known what's what, would we have come out here?"

Kornfeld said there was nothing else for Kopit to do but leave because the latter's two plays are farces, the second one titled "Mhil 'Daiim." "Can you see a farce being presented with 12 people in the audience, all of them handpicked professors?", asked Kornfeld. "I've done shows that were played to as few people as a dozen —it's part of the game. But here the committee wanted to control things and we resent that."

Smith emphasized that the university and project's committee do not care what plays are rehearsed and performed, but are concerned as to who sees them. "The only issue was our insistence upon being solely responsible for selecting and inviting appropriate viewers in case the playwrights wanted audiences," he pointed out. "As part of the project we don't intend to become an out-of-town tryout centre here. But we felt that was the direction this playwrights' push would have taken us."

Both Kopit and McNally had cherished the hope that their plays' public reception here might have led eventually to Broadway or off-Broadway production. Accompanying them to Minneapolis and remaining were New York professional actors Leueen McGrath, Robert Drivas, Joseph Chaiken, Lois Unger and Ferdi Hoffman. They'll have the principal roles in McNally's play when it's presented at the Guthrie Theatre sans audience.

In addition to Smith and Ballet, the project's committee includes Oliver Rea and Peter Zeisler, Guthrie Theatre executives. Disagreeing with Smith's assertion that no committee members had read the plays' scripts, Rea said he had and found nothing objectionable in them.

Upon his return from New York after the consultations with the Rockefeller Foundation officials regarding the squabble, Smith said the officials gave the green light for the project to proceed in the planned way. "We have the Rockefeller Foundation approval for the methods we've adopted to afford young playwrights the opportunity to work on their plays at the university without having the plays publicly performed after their completion," he asserted.

There's a chance that even Kopit may return here later with a different play to have it rehearsed and presented in the project's manner, Smith says.

Despite Some Decline, Americans Still Big In European Opera

Berlin, Jan. 21.

Deutsche Oper Berlin currently has 72 soloist singers on its roster. Of these singer, nearly half of them are of foreign nationality. And just about half of the foreign singers are American. More precisely, six of the 13 female foreign singers and eight of the 16 foreign male singers are Americans. The substantial American percentage is one of the most noteworthy aspects about this West Berlin opera house.

For the record, here are the names of the American opera singers: The women (in alphabetical order) Annabelle Bernard, Gloria Davy, Catherine Gayer, Gladys Kuchta, Evelyn Lear, Vera Little and the Franz Crass, Barry McDaniel, William Dooley, Loren Driscoll, Donald Grobe, James King, Thomas Stewart, and Jess Thomas. The list of male American singers could be upped to nine: Swedish Rolf Bjoerling, son of the late Jussi Bjoerling, is in the possession of a U. S. passport too.

Opera-conscious Germany teems with American singers. There was a time when about 700 American singers were working in the German opera. This number has dwindled within the past three or four years but it's still big.

War years explain the failure of Europe to have trained the necessary numbers of new opera singers. America, having escaped bombings, starvation and dislocation, came up, in contrast, with much new talent which had to migrate to Europe for career since U. S. opera companies are few — Met. N. Y. City, Boston, Lyric in Chicago, Dallas, Houston, San Francisco, Sante Fe. Such is the usual logic behind the Yanks in European opera houses.

William Ball will direct "The White House."

Off-B'way Reviews

Play and The Lover

Theatre 1964 (Richard Barr, Clinton Wilder, Edward Albee) presentation of a dual-bill comprising "Play," by Samuel Beckett, and "The Lover," by Harold Pinter, the latter presented by arrangement with Michael Codron in association with David Hall. Staged by Alan Schneider; scenery, William Ritman; costumes, Fred Coelpel. Opened Jan. 4, '64, at the Cherry Lane Theatre, N.Y.C., $4.50 top weeknights, $4.90 weekends.
Cast: Frances Sternhagen, Marian Reardon, Michael Lipton, Hilda Brawner, Charles Kindl.

The new double-bill at the Cherry Lane is disappointing, with neither Samuel Beckett nor Harold Pinter at top playwrighting form. The entire presentation, including intermission, lasts only an hour and a half, and is unlikely to satisfy anyone but the most ardent devotees of the two authors.

"Play," the Beckett entry, features three actors in urns, with only their heads visible. There are two women and a man, evidently dead, and they recount their versions of a romantic triangle, using short sentences and fragments of sentences, delivered in flat and monotonous fashion. It's all too brief to be boring, but despite its title, it's just a stunt that doesn't work.

The Pinter play, "The Lover," is more successful. It concerns an upper-class married couple, each with an extracurricular lover. Turns out, however, that lover and spouse are one and the same: the husband and wife rendezvous each afternoon and pretend to be having an illicit romance, acting out their fantasies. In the end, the man becomes jealous of his wife's boy friend, i.e. himself.

The piece has some of the wit and edged dialog that distinguished Pinter's "Caretaker" and "Collection," but it isn't in the same class with them. Written originally for British tv, it is annoyingly divided into many short scenes, with blackouts in between. Although it often sparks, the piece never catches fire.

There are good performances, however, by Michael Lipton and Hilda Brawner, the latter reminiscent in face and mannerisms of Lili Palmer. The William Ritman set is excellent. Kenn.

Pimpernel!

Gerald Krone & Dorothy Olim presentation of a musical comedy with book and lyrics by William Kaye, music by Mimi Stone, based on the novel, "The Scarlet Pimpernel," by Baroness Emmuska Orczy. Staged by Malcolm Black; musical direction, Robert Rogers; musical staging, Sandra Devlin; sets and lighting, Lloyd Burlingame; costumes, Sonia Lowenstein; arrangements, Julian Stein. Opened Jan. 7, '64, at the Gramercy Arts Theatre, N. Y., $4.95 top weeknights, $5.95 weekends.
Cast: David Daniels, Leila Martin, William Larsen, Buff Shurr, John Cunningham, Jane Lillig, Richard Marr, Stephen Pearlman, John Canemaker, Jeanne Devine, Geila Heinemann, Joan Kenley, Budd Mann, Dick Latessa, Francis Dux, Carl Lippy.

The only forceful thing about "Pimpernel!" is the exclamation point after the title. The show itself is a dull, amateurish version of the old Baroness Emmuska Orczy novel about a British nobleman who pretends to be a flop, but is actually the rescuer of French aristocrats sentenced to the guillotine.

The music and lyrics are, to put it generously, undistinguished, and the book is totally lacking in imagination and finesse. Worst of all is the staging, which leans on ineffective pantomime and mugging.

David Daniels, in the title role, has a good voice, and Leila Martin has a certain charm as his wife. William Larsen and John Cunningham also perform capably. Sonia Lowenstein has designed some attractive costumes for Miss Martin. Otherwise, "Pimpernel!" is a lifeless mistake. Kenn.

Bellamy Nixes Another Term

running for re-election. He claims he's made his position clear. Thus, it seems certain that the Equity nominating committee, formed recently to select a slate of candidates for all officer posts, as well as 15 councillor seats in the union's forthcoming election, will have to come up with someone else for president.

Bellamy was the committee's candidate in the last election after he agreed to accept the renomination. But in 1958, when he initially declined to run for a third term, the nominating committee chose Frederick O'Neal, then the union's third vice-president, for the post of prexy. It was the first time a Negro had been nominated for that position.

However, Bellamy subsequently reconsidered his decision not to run for re-election to a third term after being petitioned to do so by a large segment of the membership. He accepted the nomination on an independent ticket and O'Neal then withdrew from the race in support of him. It was understood at that time that if Bellamy had not agreed to accept the presidential nomination, another candidate, whose identity was not revealed, was being considered to run against O'Neal on an independent ticket.

Materialization of that situation, it was felt at the time, could have led to a nasty union election battle, which was avoided by Bellamy's decision to run for re-election. His prestige and popularity eliminated the possibility of such a conflict arising. O'Neal is now completing a three-year term as Equity first vice-president. Whether he'll now once again be a candidate for prexy either on the nominating committee's slate or by petition, isn't indicated.

The nominating committee comprises five councillors and 10 others from the membership ranks elected at the union's Jan. 10 meeting at the Americana Hotel, N. Y. The council reps on the committee are Bill Ross, Ruth Gillette, Robert Flavelle, Joan DuBrow and Michael Tolan. Miss DuBrow and Flavelle represent chorus. The others are principals. Tolan is committee chairman.

The 10 chosen at the membership meeting were Charles Blackwell, Marjorie Gateson, Hilda Haynes, Viveca Lindfors, Chetser Morris, Patrick O'Neal and William Prince representing principal performers, and Elna Laun, Nancy Lynch and Stan Page representing chorus.

The committee must report its slate of candidates no later than Feb. 18—45 days before the association's annual meeting April 3. Members are asked to submit the names of senior resident members in good standing for consideration as candidates. Nominating petitions, listing senior members in good standing other than those proposed by the nominating committee, are also permitted, with Feb. 28 the deadline on the submission of such petitions, which must be signed by at least senior members.

Officers and councillors will be elected by mail referendum of the Equity membership. Ballots, to be mailed out after the annual meeting, must be returned by 10 a.m. May 4, with the results to be declared between May 4 and 8. Incumbent officers, besides Bellamy and O'Neil, are Eddie Weston, second vice-president; Frank Maxwell, third veepee; Lois Wilson, fourth v.p., Royal Beal, treasurer, and Carl Harms, recording secretary.

The 15 councillors whose terms are expiring are Jeanne Belkin, Alan Bunce, John Emery, Tom Ewell, Margaret Hamilton, Helen Hayes, Bob Howard, Bob McClure, Bibi Osterwald, Robert Preston, Martha Scott, Frederic Tozere, Rowan Tudor, Iggie Wolfington and Peggy Wood. Preston and Wolfington were recently appointed to the council, on which they previously served, to fill posts vacated by Jeff Warren and Ralph Lowe.

Peter Bogdanovich, producer-director of the off-Broadway revival of "Once In a Lifetime" which opens Tuesday (28) at the York Playhouse, is publicizing the presentation with a film trailer at the New Yorker Theatre, a picture house on upper Broadway. Sets for the revival have been designed by Ed Wittstein.

'Times' Drops Coast Edition

N.Y. Times has decided to scuttle its western edition, circulated from Los Angeles. Effective end of this week (24) the venture is kaput as too costly in present inflation.

It's thought Times is $1,000,000 down the drain on the trial run. One result, as reckoned here, is that the New Yorkers prodded the Los Angeles Times, topdog here for decades, into improving its product.

Paris-produced version of Times continues.

Satevepost Judgment Excessive

United States District Court Judge Lewis Morgan ruled in Atlanta Tuesday (14) that $3,060,000 libel award given former University of Georgia football Coach Wally Butts in suit against Saturday Evening Post was excessive. Judge told Butts he would have to accept $460,000 (the $60,000 represents actual damage as determined by jury, the rest was punitive) or go back into court for retrial.

Judge Morgan ruled that Post article, which accused Butts of "rigging" the 1962 Georgia-Alabama football game, was "clearly defamatory," but, on the other hand, the $3,000,000 punitive judgment was "excessive." He ordered the latter figure cut to $400,000.

Attorneys for Butts advised their client to accept court's decision, which he did, but Post said it would appeal anyway.

Meanwhile, attorneys for Alabama coach Paul ("Bear") Bryant, who also filed a $10,000,000 suit against Post for same article, charging he was falsely accused of "conspiring" with Butts, said they would go ahead with their suit despite Judge Morgan's ruling. Trial is set in Birmingham for Feb. 10.

ACLU Will Aid Ginzburg

Severity of the sentence (five years) and the fine ($28,000) imposed by a Federal court jury in Philadelphia upon Ralph Ginzburg, publisher of the $10 quarterly, Eros is adversely commented upon by the American Civil Liberties Union. This it states "threatens publishers of material dealing with love and sex with long jail sentences and heavy fines if they should miscalculate as to whether a particular book is obscene . . . the result of which is to stifle free expression everywhere."

ACLU will support Ginzburg's appeal, "though not passing judgment on the merits of 'Eros' and the 'Housewives Handbook of Selective Promiscuity'" declared the organization.

Called Red, Pub Sues Birchers

Two libel suits seeking damages totaling $3,600,000 were filed by a New Mexico newspaper publisher against the John Birch Society Inc. and one of its alleged agents. Suits were filed by William C. McGaw of Columbus, N. M., and his saddlebag Press Publishing Co. The firm publishes a monthly newspaper there, known as The Southwesterner.

McGaw is a writer-historian and promoter. His writing speciality is in Old West history and the newspaper, The Southwesterner, which he writes, edits and publishes is liberally sprinkled with old historical accounts.

One of the two libel suits, seeking damages totaling $1,800,000 was filed in Federal Court here against the John Birch Society.

The other suit, seeking an identical amount, was filed in the Otero County District Court at Alamogordo, N. M., against A. A. Webster Jr.—alias Patrick J. Hale—identified in the suit as a resident of that county, and as "an agent or employee" of the Birch Society.

Both suits allege that Webster, on July 19, 1963, mailed copies of a letter from Alamogordo containing libelous statements about the newspaper and its aditor, McGaw, to the advertising managers of business firms which had purchased commercial space in The South-westerner.

The suits allege that the letters "maliciously intended to lead such business firms to believe that the Southwesterner newspaper was un-American, pro-Communist, or an organ of fellow-travelers, dupes or party-line-faithfuls."

The suits also allege that the letters intended to lead the advertisers to believe that McGaw's publication followed the Commie party line, and that its editorial policy supported Communist objectives.

The suits allege that the Birch society and its agent knew that the "allegations and innuendo therein contained were untrue" and that the letters were published maliciously and for the purpose of damaging the reputation of the newspaper and McGaw.

Newspaper claims it has lost business and potential business, as a result.

Lima (O.) Newspaper Feud

The seven-year battle between two afternoon newspapers in Lima, O., (population 51,000) ended recently with the sale of the Lima Citizen to Freedom Newspapers Inc., publisher of its competitor, the Lima News, for a figure rumored to be between $2 and $2½ million. A $7,000,000 suit charging unfair business practices was filed recently against the News by the Citizen.

The action will be continued, according to Wayne C. Current, general manager. He said if the suit is successful, the settlement will be distributed among the stockholders. Sam Kamin, president of Neon Products Inc., Lima, plastic sign firm, and James Howenstein, retired executive of the same firm, were principal stockholders, though some 900 citizens participated.

Publication of the Citizen was started in 1957, one year after the Lima News was purchased from the Galvin family by R. C. Hoiles, owner of the Freedom Newspaper chain of Santa Ana, Calif.

The purchase agreement called for payment of a $25 a share price plus 6% interest to the holders of the Citizens 14,000 shares of stock, which originally sold for $25 a share but since increased its original $500,000 capital structure; severance pay costing the buyer about $180,000 for 163 employes; payment of outstanding debts of the Citizens, and purchase of a $300,000 full-color press and other mechanical equipment. The agreement bans the Citizen's board of directors from establishing a daily paper within a 60-mile radius of Lima.

Many of the Citizens employees had worked up to 30 years with the News before it was sold to Freedom chain. Kamin said the paper lost $58,000 between July 1 and Christmas. He said the demise was because the paper "could not compete with the 11 other papers in the Hoiles chain and the profits from those other papers that were fed into Lima."

Sale does not affect radio station WCIT, which Kamin and Howenstein formed last summer, which will continue to operate as the "Voice of the Citizen."

Re Obscenity Prosecutions

Prosecutor Paul R. Young of Montgomery County, (Dayton), Ohio, said that he refuses to be put in the position of a censor, and that any allegedly smutty publications should go to the grand jury. "I can determine if there is enough supporting evidence to sustain a case, but I can't determine if a particular publication is obscene," he said.

The question of proof, he said, is one of the main problems. Late last year Ohio Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe distributed a compilation of Ohio's obscenity laws to nearly 700 law enforcement officials in the state. The distribution is required by law, and Saxbe's compilation contains comments on the present status of obscenity laws, a number of which have come under attack through court action.

Saxbe pointed out that municipalities attempting to interfere with the sale of allegedly obscene literature under the state's "vicious literature" statute may be in for a rebuff from the courts. The statute gives a community the right to "restrain and prohibit the distribution, sale, and exposure for sale of books, papers, pictures and periodicals or advertising matter of an obscene or immoral nature." While the courts have upheld this statute on several occasions, Saxbe noted "the attempts of municipal authorities to rely upon this statute or similar statutes has been impeded by the court's desire to prevent law enforcement officials from intimidating book distributors.

"An Ohio case . . . demonstrates the court's fear that threats of criminal prosecution by police officers . . . will limit the spread of information. This belief that police intimidation of suppliers of books violates the due process clause of the 14th Amendment, was upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court."

Nix on 'Girlie' Mags

Michigan's Lt. Gov. T. John Lesinski suddenly discovered "girlie" magazines were on sale in the State Capitol at a lunch counter manned by a blind person. Lesinski, who has been in Lansing for many, many years as a public servant, immediately ordered a ban on all such mags at all State buildings saying that many schoolchildren came there to watch "government in action."

It just so happened that Lesinski's action came when he was acting governor, while George Romney was out of the state, and Big T. John picked up quite a bit of ink as a result.

Tichmann for Prez

German newspaper magazine and radio commentator Karl Tichmann was named president of Madrid's International Press Club, succeeding Associated Press bureau chief Harold Milks.

Press Club building is a two-story chalet made available by incoming Minister of Information Fraga Iribarne over a year ago to provide a press conference center. Executive board includes reps from the Spanish Press Association, the Foreign Press Association, the Spanish-American Press Association, the Ministry of Information and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

'Orgy Boys' At Issue

A new test of Illinois' obscenity statute will be made by defense attorneys for the owner of a book store found guilty by a jury of possession of obscene books and fined $4,000 by a Criminal Court judge. Nine paperback novels were involved in the indictment, and two Asst. State's Attorney's took turns reading the entire text of one of the books—"The Orgy Boys."

A defense request for a new trial was denied and the lawyers said that they would appeal directly to the Illinois Supreme Court. Several other obscenity cases are pending before the state high court, and are believed to be held in abeyance in anticipation of new rulings on the subject by the U. S. Supreme Court.

New Copy Act Nearly Ready

tine, with the ads proclaiming that question. Needless to say this would dim the prospects of Congressional enactment of a copyright act to overhaul the 1909 law.

The Copyright Office has told panel members it will be forced to write its own reversion clause in the draft bill unless an agreement is reached privately within the next month or so.

With the panel meetings out of the way, legal draftsmen from the Copyright Office in the Library of Congress will begin hammering the final form of the revision bill into shape. Copies of the bill will be sent to industry reps who will respond with written comments. Then the measure will go to the Capitol where no action can be expected until January 1965.

Caught In Campaign?

This Congress, facing President Johnson's hefty election year legislative package and anxious to get on the campaign trail by June, has much more on its mind than copyright revision.

The only likely formal get together by panel reps on the revision bill will come in August when the American Bar Assn. holds its New York convention in conjunction with the Worlds Fair.

As for controversay, the panel handled a hot issue at its meet here last week. Up for discussion was the "manufacturing" clause which now rules that works in the English language can't receive full-term copyright protection in the U.S. unless manufactured in this country.

As presently worded, the law is a bane to authors and publishers and a boon to manufacturers and allied unions.

The Copyright Office suggested two alternatives to the present law. First, just drop the clause altogether—a proposal greeted most enthusiastically by the publishers seeking to cut manufacturing costs in this country.

The second alternative offered would retain the importation on foreign-manufactured works but eliminate the copyright penalty which irks authors.

Composition Fees

Under this alternative a ban on any type of reproduction devices would be added to the present embargo on finished works. This provision is favored by manufacturers and unions which point out that publishers can get manuscripts printed overseas and then reproduced here skirting the high composing room wages paid in this country.

Reps from the manufacturing industry and unions opposed elimination of the manufacturing clause saying it would destroy their businesses.

Their stand came under varying degrees of fire from Horace Manges of the American Book Publishers Council, Irwin Karp of the Authors League; Harry Olson of ABC and lawyers Stanley Rothenberg, Harriet Pilpel and John Schulman.

The three objected to putting protectionist tariff legislation into a copyright law to the detriment of authors.

ASCAP General Counsel Herman Finkelstein and Schulman both warned that the draft suggestions could be read to include a ban on records and documentary films made overseas.

Barbara Ringer of the Copyright Office said this was not intended, but implied the language could use some clarification.

Also discussed were Copyright Office suggestions for cracking down on imports of infringed works.

One alternative would give the Bureau of Customs the right to forbid entry of such material while both suggestions would authorize the Bureau to notify copyright owners that infringing copies of their works were being imported. Copyright owners could then go into court and get an injunction against the material.

But as Manges and Karp pointed out it might be hard to find the importer and even if he could be found who would be subject to the injunction—the jobber, distributor or seller?

Doubts were raised about the enthusiasm with which Customs officers would serve as sleuths against pirated imports although Copyright Office topper Abraham Kaminstein assured the panel that his office and Customs have a good working relationship.

After further haggling over such questions as whether the Customs could stop pirated imports, Kaminstein concluded the proposals needed "further study."

The meet concluded with an appeal for protection from Harry Rosenfield, representing 25 educational organizations.

Averring education "must have a maximum availability of sources," Rosenfield hit out at the proposed elimination of the for profit limitation, "dilutation" of the fair use provisions, the proposed extension of the copyright duration term and the requirement for extra copies of works to be deposited at the Library of Congress.

He was rebutted by Karp and Bella Linden, repping Encyclopedia publishers, who in essence replied, "We're all in this together."

Miss Linden said educators are authors as well as users and they shouldn't cut off incentives for themselves.

Karp warned if copyright protection were diluted too far the purpose of education would be obstructed.

Mandy & Jack Ruby

she appeared last year for $800 weekly at Ruby's Carousel bar in Dallas. Interviews are stressing her connections to Ruby and her previous work at his club.

Second, 19-year-old play-for-pay-girl Mandy Rice-Davies, who worked as an "entertainer" in the Christine Keeler affair in London, was hired for her first appearance in a nightclub—in Munich. She is scheduled to appear for 30 days at the Eve Bar, at a salary of $200 nightly—the kind of fee, incidentally, that is paid to international stars like Hildegard Knef and Paul Hubschmid when they tour with plays.

Pulling SRO Biz

Max Mayr, owner of the bar, engaged Miss Rice-Davies after hearing a tape of her singing, and the club has been sold out ever since her Jan. 7 opening. Admission is $1.25 per person, and drinks like bourbon and Scotch cost about $1 each. Miss Rice-Davies is also selling autographed copies of her 40-page publication called "The Mandy Report," which is her retaliation to the Demming Report.

Miss Rice-Davies, who is reviewed under New Acts, admits that she has never sung before. The bar where she is appearing is coincidentally the former residence of the mistress of King Ludwig II, the dancer Lola Montez.

Some folks are wondering, is this really show business?

Meanwhile, the year opened with other scandals and an alleged forgery of a contract calling for Maurice Chevalier to appear as part of an "all-star show, 1964."

Throughout West Germany ads were taken by the Neue Fernsehkunst (New Television Art) of Duesseldorf for an all-star show including Chevalier and Italian record star Vico Torriani, with appearances slated in Hamburg, Hannover, Frankfurt and Stuttgart, at eight major German and Swiss cities.

At the Hamburg opening 2,000 people were disappointed, and similarly 1,500 ticket-buyers at Hannover were told that Chevalier had never signed to appear and a French agent allegedly had forged his signature. Torriani, learning that the costar was not coming, also cancelled.

In Frankfurt, the show was cancelled and the ticket fees were returned to 600 buyers who had paid from $1 to $3.75 for the show, which was booked at the giant Messehalle here.

And in nearby Wiesbaden, a show scheduled for a large theatre to feature French singer Charles Aznavour and a six-piece orchestra also collapsed as another attempted swindle. A promoter had sold advertising on the back of tickets, and had tickets printed priced between $2.50 and $9. Following the sale of a few ducats, he disappeared. Police are investigating.

Meanwhile, police are also cracking down on some German night spots which have been employing under-age girls as entertainers. Three Frankfurt clubs have had their closing hours restricted for violations of the city regulations, and in one, police arrested a 14-year-old girl working as a drink-pusher.

It seems that tighter controls must be established here to give show business a better name.

Motel and the Marriott Motor Hotel, now under construction.

A meeting on the public accommodations issues prior to the announcement brought together not only 35 hotel and motel officials but also about 100 restaurant owners and operators.

Allen said: "The Restaurant Assn. has urged its members to consider the facts that were brought out and to search their hearts, minds and consciences and make their own decisions as to what their future course will be."

Meanwhile, Ku Klux Klansmen, many of them robed and carrying signs, picketed a number of restaurants and hotels in the Atlanta area.

Vegas Revisited: Stable Community With Glamor & Casino Background

By ABEL GREEN

Las Vegas recently revisited—the shows and, per Milton Berle's crack, "my money"—sees about 50% of the key showplaces featuring musical revues or productions (three French imports and Monte Proser's "Anything Goes" at the Thunderbird); a less frenetic turnover of shows and clientele; and a renewed stability about the community which has its sights more on sound business practices, conventions, industrial conclaves, with of course the glamor and the gaming as background obligatos.

But there is low-key emphasis on the casinos and the shows as the bonifaces continue a scientifically designed pitch to attract big business, especially during the off-seasons.

The fifth season of the Lido de Paris revue at the Stardust (still the tops of the Gallic specs) vies with the third semester of the still glamorous Folies Bergere revue at the Tropicana, and the just opened Casino de Paris revue at The Dunes. Among them it looks as if Las Vegas has cornered the feathers market. What these shows would do without the boas, the spangles, the staircases—and nudes, of course—is conjectural. In truth, however, all are fortified with top-flight talent and, as for the nudity, that's now so SOP as to be regarded just as part of the scenery. (Lily St. Cyr makes more impact

Fair Corporation Members Resent Second Class Rank Compared to Directors

Members of the N. Y. Fair Corp. at a meeting Jan. 22 in Top O' The Fair raised the question of courtesy to corporate members on a basis of parity with directors. Latter are to receive automobile emblems to facilitate approach to and parking at the grounds. No question of free admission is involved. What is involved is status. Theoretically, corporate members come first, senior to the directors.

Motion for equality of courtesy was made at the meeting by Col. Gabriel Kirschenbaum, M.D., and seconded by Mrs. Denny Griswold, William A. Shea and Col. Lloyd W. Stearns of Metropolitan Life. Resolution was worded:

"It is moved that the Fair Corporation provide all corporate members, including the directors who are elected by and from the membership per article seven of the bylaws, with an appropriate personal identity card and an automobile identification emblem or shield which will expedite personal movement and parking at the Fair site."

In presenting the motion, Dr. Kirschenbaum congratulated the

Ex-VOA's Russ Expert Now USIA's USSR Advisor

Washington, Jan. 28.

Alexander Barmine, chief of the Russian Service of the Voice of America, was named head of Soviet affairs in the U.S. Information Agency.

As assistant director for the Soviet and Eastern European area, Barmine will supervise and coordinate all agency programs for the USSR.

A former Soviet diplomat who defected in 1937, Barmine worked with NBC from 1941 until World War II opened.

Succeeding him at the Voice will be Terrence Catherman who is completing assignment as Cultural Attache in Moscow.

Antitrust Law As FCC Wedge on TV Program Control?

Washington, Jan. 28.

Antitrust laws may be the Federal Communications Commission wedge to split up sources of television network control, it was disclosed.

This hint was dropped in the Commission's annual report, reviewing last year's activities.

Commission said its staff is summarizing recommendations in the Ashbrook Bryant network study and among the reports being readied is "a detailed memorandum which considers the application of the antitrust laws to the facts disclosed by the program inquiry."

One of the principal points hammered home by Bryant in last year's report was that sources of programming should be far more diverse than they are now.

Also upcoming from the network report will be suggested legislation

ABC-TV MAKING MOST CHANGES

By GEORGE ROSEN

Save for a few loose ends and indecisions, the three television networks, after some frantic weekend homework, have pretty much established their program blueprints for the '64-'65 season. And on the basis of the shapeup, the three webs will enter the competitive audience wars in the fall with a composite schedule which will be 48% new, 52% old.

Here's the pattern the rival networks are pursuing for next season: ABC putting stress on situation comedies and remakes of old (20th-Fox) features; NBC is going for the extended 90-minute and two-hour (movies) attractions, with only two shows occupying all prime time on Monday and Wednesday nights; CBS is going for hour live variety; half-hour comedies and hour film dramas.

Of the 70 prime time weekly hours to be programmed by all three webs combined, NBC will supply 24.5, CBS 24.0 and ABC—which is cutting down on its inventory by returning 10:30 to 11 p.m. to the stations five and perhaps six nights a week—21.5.

CBS schedule, with the dumping of "East Side West Side" and the axing of Garry Moore, Phil Silvers, the new Allen Funt entry, Judy Garland, Hitchcock, is to all intents

$20 Per Carload For Boxing Card Fed to Drive-In

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Pacific Drive-in circuit, for the first time, is getting into the closed-circuit telecasting of a title fight. Two of the chain's ozoners, the Van Nuys drive-in and the Orange (county) ditto will carry the Liston-Clay go from Florida Feb. 26.

The usual number of hardtop houses in and around L.A. also will be in on the beaming, via TNT-Eidophor.

The drive-in chain, unlike hardtops, will not price admish per person, but will tap fightgoers $20 per car. Ads will stress that "trucks, buses, campers and all high vehicles" do not constitute "a car." Roughly, the $20 will cover about six occupants tops.

For some years drive-ins in eastern areas have beamed title fights, but in instance of last several title tiffs daylight time has been the rule and drive-ins found that they could not operate as it was not yet dark here when the bout, in east, reached here, around 7 p.m.

'Bonanza' Stars' Refusal to Play Segregated Arena Cues a Rhubarb

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

A rhubarb involving southern segregation and three "Bonanza" stars developed over the weekend after the trio had cancelled out on a Jackson, Miss. p.a. date with various interpretations of the term "segregation," but the likelihood the three will reverse their position and keep their commitment was dim. This despite a statement from Michael Landon that he, Dan Blocker and Lorne Greene would perform if they receive assurances there will be no segregation.

AGVA, to which the Jackson Industrial Fair planned Feb. 1-2 had appealed, said such assurances had been promised and were being forwarded to Landon, so they expected the stars to honor their contracts.

However, the promoter of the event, Lou Heibroner, manager of WJQS in Jackson, told VARIETY Friday that there evidently was a misunderstanding regarding the interpretation of the word segregation. He explained that Mississippi state laws would not permit them to have the event with no segregation whatsoever. He further explained that boxes, loges and balcony seats are provided in sections in the arena, that one section has been set aside for Negroes. Standing room area near display booths is also open to people of both races, he said. The southerner said AGVA must have misunderstood because legally it would be impossible to ban segregation for the event.

Previously, Landon said that as of Friday he had received no word from AGVA, but that if it did

Senators Will Eye Income Tax Ideas Re 'Entertainment'

Washington, Jan. 28.

Senate tax writers plan to look at Treasury regulation of expense accounting.

Chairman Harry Byrd of the Senate Finance Committee said his group would hold hearings on the unpopular Internal Revenue Service chit crackdown later this year.

The Virginia Democart was not specific on his plans, but said expense account action would not be tied to the pending tax cut bill.

Byrd's hearing hints followed rejection by the Committee last week of a proposal to soften the regulations.

On an 8-7 vote the Committee declined to attach a rider to the Administration tax bill eliminating the IRS provision that hosts and guests must discuss business before or after entertainment to qualify for a deduction.

'It's Exciting,' 'It Goes Too Far' But N.Y. OKs Danes' 'Stranger Knocks'

By JAMES L. CONNERS

Albany, Jan. 28.

Court of Appeals here sustained the decision by the Appellate Division which held that the Danish film, "A Stranger Knocks," is not obscene and a license for its exhibition should be issued by Regents "forthwith."

Regents had fought against the picture, which is released by Trans-Lux Corp., because of two sexual intercourse scenes. In overruling the appeal by Regents, the higher tribunal said the "sexual acts which are implied rather than demonstrated are an integral part of the play."

Appeals Court decision was four-to-one, the lone dissenter being J. Clarence Herlihy who offered a memorandum saying he would affirm Regents' desire to delete certain scenes. He said: "These portrayals go substantially beyond the accepted customary limits. They forthrightly depict the fulfillment

'Her' & 'His Version' of Wedlock; An Oddity of Parisian Pix Booking, Makes 2 Films B.O. Competitors

Paris, Jan. 28.

Andre Cayette's "his and hers" pix, "La Vie Conjugal," which tells the story of the breakup of the same marriage in two separate features, one from the husband's point of view and the other from the wife's, are presenting French distribution and exhibition with some unusual problems.

The two features—"Jean Marc or Conjugal Life" and "Francoise or Conjugal Life"—bow here this week in an unprecedented preem and firstrun arrangement. "Jean-Marc" goes into three houses and "Francoise" into five, with total seating capacity about the same. For the opening night, Friday (31), the 400 couples who are invitees will be split according to sex, with the men seeing one feature together, the women the other, then switching theatres at midpoint, and coming together to argue the pluses or minuses at a midnight dinner at the Lido.

One possible problem foreseen centers around the possibility that the public may prefer one of the pix over the other. In that case, should one be dropped in favor of the other, or should they both be held in hopes the more popular one will eventually carry the other?

Those involved have also thought

'Money In Switzerland' Con-fidence Come-On For a Film Promoter

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

A "big" Hollywood epic entitled, "Break the Marble Spell," was broken when the Sheriff's Department arrested Carl Woods on bunco charges, alleging he tried to con actors and writers into becoming involved in a nonexistent venture.

Sheriff's Detective Sgt. Pat Shields said Woods, posing as a kindly, eccentric millionaire, has confessed and will be arraigned this week.

Using the name, Eric Ballard, and alleging he had $7,000,000 stashed away in a Swiss bank, Woods told gullibles he was going to produce "Spell," and advertised for actors and writers to work in his film, police said. Ballard, or Woods, used White House correspondence, also from stars, to prove he was "in," but these documents turned out to be forged, according to the Sheriff's Dept. He also claimed to be prexy of Four Star Artists Guild, something which is nonexistent, Screen Actors Guild said yesterday.

SAG also said that "Ballard" had taken one of his victims to the Screen Writers Guild office, wrote some words on a sheet of paper, and "registered" it with the Guild as a "script," thus convincing the victim he was going to produce a film.

Sammy Davis Jr. May Be Spending All of 1964 In Britain for Pix, TV, Disks

London, Jan. 28.

Sammy Davis Jr's scheduled trip to Britain in March could be the forerunner of a long stay on this side of the pond. For if all plans materialize, it will be "all happening" for the performer in Britain in 1964.

Main purpose of Davis' spring visit is the film the Anglo-Embassy pic "The Major And The Private," in which he stars with Peter Lawford. But, at the same time, Davis is expected to bring to a head negotiations with Bernard Delfont re the staging of "Golden Boy" in London.

The singer is pacted to make at least two more vidspecials for BBC as followups to the initial hour solo show he made last trip. So producer Denis Main Wilson is readying at least one special for Davis this time around which he may do soon after his arrival.

Pye Records, which distribute Davis' Reprise label in these parts, is also "waiting in the wings" to catch the singer for a recording session.

Yma Sumac Back; TV and Concerts

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Yma Sumac, the Inca thrush who trilled her five-octave voice to fame some years ago, returns after seven-year hiatus to American showbiz Feb. 1 with a tv appearance in "Hollywood Palace" show. Date, according to her manager and composer-conductor, Moises Vivanco, will tee off a series of appearances in this country, including a Hollywood Bowl concert and national concertour under tab, "Yma Sumac Sings the Songs of the World." Tour will finale with a stand at the N.Y. World's Fair.

Over the holidays Miss Sumac completed 10 concerts in Czechoslovakia for the Ministry of Culture, appearing before a total of 300,000 people, Vivanco reported. Singer has toured internationally within the past two years, including a seven-month, 186-concert tour of Russia for the Soviet Ministry of Culture, 40 concerts in Poland, 55 in Rumania and 30 in West Germany. Singer also appeared for 70 days as star of the Mikado Theatre show in Tokyo, where she also did two concerts for victims that still remain of the atomic bomb.

HONOR EDDIE CANTOR

Jessel Joins California Governor At Comic's Home

After George Jessel got through toastmastering the Friars' luncheon on Monday afternnon (27) to Nat King Cole at N.Y. Hilton Hotel, he flew to the Coast to meet Gov. Edmund (Pat) Brown at Eddie Cantor's Beverly Hills home the same evening. Jointly they presented the comedian with a Congressional citation signed by Senator George Smathers (Florida) honoring Cantor for his humanities, with special emphasis on the March of Dimes. This is the phrase which Cantor coined when President Roovevelt first enlisted show buisnesss' aid in the campaign against polio.

The presentation was made on occasion of Cantor's 72d birthday this week.

Jessel with Senator Smathers have been sparking a move for a Congressional medal to the ailing comedian.

No Laughing Matter

Minneapolis, Jan. 28.

Following the Government's blast at cigaret smoking, Nate Wexler, comedian appearing at the local Gay 90s nightclub, started aiming jokes in that area. But he didn't keep the quips in his standup one-liner act long.

Explaining why that sort of patter went out after a couple of nights, Wexler said that his sallies garnered only tepid laughter. But, worse still, he added, the material apparently provoked resentment among some of the guests, judging by the verbal brickbats hurled at him.

Dailies No Longer Training Cubs; Good Men, Despite Firings, Scarce

By KAY CAMPBELL

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

A good (newspaper) man is hard to find. Despite recent foldos and combos of metropolitan papers in this area, this is the consensus of opinion of top publishers and editors. And they not only give lip service to the theory, they raid, snatch, lure with raised rates and long contracts, frost the cake with "friendly persuasion," in the attempt to upgrade editorial copy.

The Los Angeles Times probably heads the list with the greatest number of top echelon staff changes during the last year, with an expanded overseas personnel and Washington bureau. Latest edition was Gene Sherman dispatched to London to head up bureau there. Sherman, under the byline of Dick Kidson, has been writing the Farmer's Market ad column which runs daily in the Times, in addition to a radio news commentator program, and to covering top feature stories on a freelance basis for the Times. Although no comment on salary was available from Nick Williams, editor, it is obvious that the bait must have been substantial.

"We are shifting all the time," David Heyler, publisher of the Hollywood Citizen News and Beverly Hills Citizen, commented. "And we are constantly on the

Godfrey's 30th AM Anni Gets a Climactic Zing In Coast-to-Coast Airing

The weeklong observance of Arthur Godfrey's 30th anni in broadcasting was climaxed Saturday night (25) with an a.m. clambake of guest talents on both Coasts that ran from 11:15 to 5 in the morning.

Show not only featured an incredible roster of performing and well-wishing show biz nabobs, but also a full lineup of sponsors, whose blurbs received a lot of unmerciful kidding in this most casual of celebrations.

During the New York live broadcast, the visitations continued through the night and included the Four Lads; Lyn Duddy; Johnny Carson, Meredith Willson and wife, Rini; banjoist Joe Schirmer; the Geezinslaw Bros.; the Buffalo Bills, Carol Sloane, Bill Lawrence, Dennis Regor; Eddy Arnold, Betty Furness, Phil Foster; Al Lewis, Bill Slocum; Bill DuPree, Nipsey Russell, Allen Ludden and wife, Betty White; Richard Hayes; Rufus Jarman; Hal Kanter; Johnny Parker and the "Godfrey Time" orch; and June Havoc and a couple of friends, a boa constrictor and his belly-dancer mistress.

Pat Buttram co-hosted Coast cutins that featured such guests as Bob Hope, Jack Warner, Ralph Story, Edith Head and Bob Crane. Sammy Davis Jr., doing a date in Camden, N. J., phoned in his congrats after finishing the midnight show.

There were tape segs, including a feature compiled from the weeklong observance titled, "This Was Your Week That Was, Arthur Godfrey."

N.O. Mardi Gras Cues A Prosperous Fling For Niteries, Hotels, Eateries

By BED LIUZZA

New Orleans, Jan. 28.

Mardi Gras gaiety, a major civic asset of this old city of dixieland jazz, sazeracs and iron-laced balconies, is gathering traditionally for the whoopdedo starting Saturday (1). The lengthy season, called Carnival, began officially Jan. 6, Twelfth Night, and will be climaxed by that single day of insanity called Mardi Gras on Tuesday (11).

Facing Lent, which starts the following day, is no sacrifice after going through Mardi Gras. In fact, it comes as a welcome relief at a time when one cheerfully sets aside the sazerac, gin fiz and absinthe jugs and uncorks the headache remedies.

All indications point to a record influx of visitors. Harry England, president of the Greater New Orleans Tourist Commission, said last week that major inns such as the Roosevelt, Monteleone, Sheraton Charles, Royal Orleans, Jung and Fontainbleau, as well as motels and guest houses, report heavy reservations. Several are already booked solid from Feb. 2 to Feb. 11, the big Mardi Gras day.

IN TWO UNIONS THERE IS STRAIN

Black Cloud No Bigger Than A Nude

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Hollywood last week drew a boost for its product and an expression of understanding for the problems confronting its beleagured Production Code from an unexpected source, its frequent antagonist—the Catholic Legion of Decency.

Here on one of his periodic visits, the Legion's exec secretary the Monsignor Thomas F. Little, notes that of 13 films tacked with condemned rating last year by organization, only two were Hollywood product ("The Balcony," "Too Young, Too Immoral") and neither from a major. He adds that more than 85% of films were recommended for "some segments of the public," bulk of the balance falling into "B" (objectionable in part) category.

Little does, however, see one potentially sticky problem on the Hollywood horizon—nudity. But he sees its emergence as instigated not by the majors but by indie producers who use it in an attempt to "hypo their films for foreign consumption."

Importers' N. Y. Banquet as Dullsville

Attendance Large, and Yawns, Too—None of the Stars Bother to Show Up—Affair Poorly Managed

By VINCENT CANBY

To state the affirmative fact first: In terms of attendance, and of receipts realized by the ad sales in the dinner program, last Tuesday (21) night's third annual international film awards dinner-dance was a pronounced success. More than 750 persons—most in black tie and evening dress—turned up at New York's Americana Hotel for the affair which is sponsored by the Independent Film Importers & Distributors of America and which is the highlight of the foreign film season in the U.S. Or, at least, it should be, if it isn't (and there are more than a few indications that the latter is true).

One of the ironies of Tuesday night's function was that although it is designed to call attention to some of the most exciting films and filmmakers in the world today, there was little or no representation by the filmmakers themselves. And distributors, to be perfectly candid, are not always as interesting as the films which they handle. Given a well-filled ballroom with a raised dais and a mike at one end, the ordinary, healthy, red-blooded American distributor simply cannot resist mouthing cliches with all the sincerity and pride of the man who first thought them up.

Actually, the speeches at this year's shindig were comparatively brief (as previously reported, Walter Reade Jr.'s was the evening's main event), and they, in turn, led to the presentation of the awards themselves. The inevitable lack of excitement here, arising from the fact that all the awards had been reported in the press earlier, was compounded by the fact that not one of the main winners—Federico Felini, Tony Richardson, Albert Finney, etc., or even a reasonable facsimile—was on hand to accept.

The result was dutiful and dull coverage by the trade press and a couple of ho-hum paragraphs in the regular dailies. (The fact that this year's press table, as last year's, was in a corner of Siberia at the opposite end of the ball room from the dais, will also do nothing to bring back next year such reporters as Cue's Jesse Zunser, the Saturday Review's Hollis Alpert, the San Francisco Examiner's Stanley Eichelbaum, et al. Additionally, not only was the press table a rough, tough quarter-mile from the dais, but it was smack up against the bandstand, which made some scintillating conversation next to impossible, at regular, bunny-hug intervals.)

It was evident, at the conclusion of this year's ball, that IFIDA has to do some soul-searching if it hopes to maintain trade interest in the annual affair, to say nothing of stirring lay attention. To this end, the org might do well to see that it has at least one major film creator on hand for next year's event—whether or not he is an IFIDA prize-winner is not ultimately important. Also, the org might do well to explore the possibility of timing the dinner to coincide with the annual Lincoln Center Film fest, which looks to be dated each year in September.

That affair, at least if it keeps the momentum created in its debut last year, provides a focal point for both public and trade interest and looks likely to attract the continuing interest of filmmakers themselves. IFIDA's awards could quite easily be put on a Sept. 1-Aug. 31 fiscal (which jibes more closely to the real cinema season than does the calendar year), so as to have timeliness at a September gala.

Whatever is decided by the IFIDA execs, it's clear that some measures will have to be taken in order that the ball reflect the real excitement of the art it celebrates. Otherwise, the black tie event will degenerate into a blackmail event, one of those annual soup-and-fish grinds which industry members are more or less coerced into attending on pain of offending a business relationship.

'Texas,' 'Charade' Pace Italo B.O.

Rome, Jan. 28.

"Four for Texas" (WB) and "Charade" (U) plus the new Italo sensation, "Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow" (Ponti-Levine) are making for lively boxoffice figures in their leadoff 1964 playdates in the Italo keys.

Figures for first three weeks showed "Yesterday" well in the lead with $635,200 gross followed by Robert Aldrich's "Texas" at some $444,800 and "Charade" only a step behind with $432,000.

City-wise, positions of frontrunners as of Jan. 15 were "Charade" pacing "Yesterday" and "Texas" in that order in Milan (but with "Texas" holding average-per-day lead); and "Yesterday" pacing Rome, followed closely by "Texas" and "Charade."

On a seasonal basis, it's still "Lawrence of Arabia" (Col) ahead for the local key situations, closely followed by "Cleopatra" (20th), "55 Days at Peking" (AA) and "How West Was Won" (MGM). Also seasonally, Yank pix continues to lead with 48.6% of the primary b.o. totals vs. Italy's 41.2%.

NO SEAL; A PROBLEM OF UNDRAPED KIM NOVAK

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Execs will meet this week with Seven Arts to "decide what we will do about the seal," Metro studio topper Robert Weitman said, in confirming that an MPAA production code seal has been denied "Of Human Bondage." Seal was denied due to nude scene involving Kim Novak in picture.

Lensed in England, SA production to be released through Metro. Metro prexy O'Brien some time ago stated studio would not release a picture sans seal.

FOR EAST-WEST PIC DIRECTORS

In a long and emotional meeting which lasted over eight hours and saw one group of participants walk out near the end claiming that the whole thing was handled illegally in the first place, the Screen Directors International Guild membership voted last Saturday (25) to hold a referendum to decide whether or not to accept a merger with the Directors Guild of America on terms as presently proposed by latter.

This was a victory for the minority faction within the SDIG board of directors, which had been defeated at a recent board meeting by a vote of 11-5 on the same matter of whether or not to accept DGA's merger terms as they stand now. The majority had favored a merger but not on the DGA terms. The Coast body had broken off negotiations a few weeks ago, charging that there were those in the SDIG who were working against instead of for the merger under negotiation.

The exact vote on Saturday isn't available as yet because it was a head count of standing members. But the vote for refendum was clear, an estimated 80 or so in favor, 33 or so opposed and about 14 abstaining. Meeting, held at the Henry Hudson Hotel, began at 10 a.m. and lasted until 6:15 p.m., with a break for lunch.

The referendum will most likely occur within a month's time, providing there are no charges brought or an injunction sought to halt it. These are possibilities because of the open dissatisfaction of the midwest representatives who, toward the end of the session, walked out claiming that the proceedure was illegal throughout. This group feels that it is being wronged by the DGA merger terms because, it charges, the provisos violate certain charter provisions it now has with the SDIG and would also force its members to pay an additional $1,650 two years after the merger if they want to work in the east. There is also the feeling among some members that the vote was strongly influenced by dual card holders, many of whom were present.

Nonetheless, if the referendum is held according to the meeting's adopted motion and the vote is "yes," then merger with DGA on its present terms is virtually assured. The only thing then to hold it up being the finalizing and legalizing of the language in the proposals. If the vote is "no," however, then the merger is squashed, on present terms at least.

However, the feeling does exist that the midwest and/or others may hold off their actions until after the referendum and then attempt to have the merger legally enjoined from happening. As far as the outcome of the vote itself, it is pointed out that it is anything but an open and shut case, despite the fact that a second motion was passed at the Saturday meeting stating that the sentiment of the body was in favor of merger on present terms. There are 80 voting midwesterners and about 45 non-residents who are admittedly largely opposed to the terms. In all the SDIG has 495 eligible voters, however, including the 56 dual card holders who want the merger. 146 members attended Saturday's meeting.

Burton Robbins Kickoff

Executives of nearly 20 circuits joined the press and Burton Robbins, president of National Screen Service, as the latter hosted a luncheon Monday (27) at New York's Americana Hotel. It tied in wtih a 90-day sales drive starting this week. Meeting also drew into focus new theatrical selling devices now being introduced by the service organization.

Robbins and ad-pub chief Melvin Gold offered illustrated descriptions of new-type trailers and displays, including "Cinemotion," this being an animation display which can be used in existing shadow-box frames in many theatres.

Par's Stake in Color Tube for TV, One of Retained Diversifications, May Pay Off Via Japan's Sony

The Paramount color television tube, which has been under development by Sony, the Japanese electronics company, is close to marketability. Sony, which owns the rights to the tube in Japan, will get the U.S. rights as well if it comes up with a practical application for the tube.

Japanese company has been working with the idea of compacting the tube for use in its tiny portable tv sets. The tube itself is very bright and it is felt that it can be used outdoors as well as inside because of this element. The Sony set is designed for flexibility and so this idea fits perfectly with its plans.

Sylvania, the U.S. electronics company, had been working on the tube in the U.S. but did not come up with a marketable solution. Actually, no U.S. rights to the apparatus had ever been assigned and that is why Sony can get them if it is successful in ironing out the final rough spots in its development program for the product.

The color tube is one of the few remaining areas of diversification Par has kept up through the past year when it sold its holdings in Ampex, Fairchild and other electronics firms. The company is now concentrating almost completely on pix making and distribution, with side trips to tollvision via Telemeter, tv via Plautus Productions and disks through Dot Records. But the idea has been to concentrate on film and Par's outside holdings, which at one time were considerable and make the company one of the more diversified picture operations, have virtually all been disposed of. The color tv tube is about the last of such outside activities.

As far as the project itself, the Sony outfit has made a considerable impact in U.S. electronics circles through the introduction of various items such as very small transistor radios, its small portable tv sets and various other such pieces of equipment. As far as color tv goes, there presently isn't a portable color set on the market, one reason being that the outdoor light usually washes out the color on existing tubes. Also, as far as color for portables goes, it has been too expensive to be practical in the lower-priced lightweights.

It is in these areas that Sony has been concentrating and is, in fact, a specialist. More news on the progress is expected by Par shortly and the word now is that Sony is close to final stages of development.

Festivals for 1964

Confirmed dates on 1964 film festivals around the world are slow coming in this year, but the following can be pencilled in:

Buenos Aires (formerly, Mar Del Plata), Argentina, March 30-April 9.

Cannes, April 29-May 13.

Montreal, Aug. 7-14.

A Nervous Issue: Guild's Red Oath

One of the more subtle, yet possibly more far-reaching issues of the debate within the Screen Directors International Guild of Manhattan over whether or not to merge with Hollywood's Directors Guild of America is the existance of the so-called "Red oath" in the DGA constitution. This requirement, that the prospective DGA member disavow any affiliation with the Communist or other "subversive" organizations, is not present in the eastern group's constitution or bylaws.

The "oath" has not been one of the negotiable items in the discussions between the two guilds. With the SDIG membership now having voted to hold a referendum on merger on DGA's present terms and the same body having also, in a separate motion, endorsed these terms, the "oath" would become a requirement of all union card-holding directors across the country, should the eastern membership vote "yes" in the referendum.

Although ruled out as a negotiable item in the talks, the presence of the "oath" has been on the minds of the SDIG members. In an unsigned document circulated before the meeting last Saturday (25) to vote on whether to hold the referendum or to reject the DGA terms, the question was openly asked: "Is the Communist pledge really the thing that is holding back the merger?" This was not the only query in the mailing but its being there was considered by some to be significant.

At the meeting itself, the question of the "oath" came up too. On the floor it was decided that, since the matter was non-negotiable, it would have to be a matter of personal conviction as to whether one chose to sign or not. Nonetheless, the fact remains that to work in any consistent way, one must belong to the union. Since to belong to the union would now require the signing of the "oath," it follows that in order to work one must sign.

The SDIG body was reported to "deplore" the existence of the "oath" provision. It has been claimed that, shortly after the merger, if it takes place, an amendment would be proposed to eliminate the requirement entirely. This would require 200 signatures, obtained by secret ballot. It is felt that these would easily be gotten, especially considering the fact that over 125 members at the SDIG meeting would have signed on the spot, it was said.

He's handling Pittsburgh and Buffalo for the UA group.

CLEVELAND CRITICS ON 'YEAR'S BEST' KICK

Cleveland, Jan. 28.

Cleveland Film Critics (five) picked the "Bests of 1963" and will present awards to winners at a civic-showmen's luncheon Feb. 13 at Hotel Pick Carter here.

"Hud" was selected as the best English dialog picture. Paul Newman, formerly of Cleveland, was named the best English lingo actor and Leslie Caron won the best actress award in the same category.

Critics named "Electra" as the best foreign language picture, Marcello Mastroianni as the best foreign actor for "8½" and Irene Pappas as best foreign actress.

Best supporting actor and actress went to Howard DaSilva and Patricia Neal. Group acclaimed Peter O'Toole of "Lawrence of Arabia" as the top male newcomer of year and Maggie Smith of "The V.I.P.s" as the best feminine newcomer.

Selected as the best director for his "It's a M-M-M-Mad World" was Stanley Kramer. Critics are trying to lure him here to accept statuette prize at party.

Critics Circle here are: W. Ward Marsh and Glenn C. Pullen of Cleveland Plain Dealer, Stanley Anderson and Tony Mastroianni of Scripps-Howard Press and Arthur Spaeth of Sun-Press.

Mirisches As Big UA Stockholders And Maybe All Will Be Peaceful Yet

A reflective aspect to the recent film industry chatter about the possibility that the Mirisch Corp. might leave United Artists at the end of its present pact or sooner, is the fact that the Mirisches hold around 87,000 shares of UA stock and are due to get more shortly.

Should the brothers exercise their option when it comes up, the Mirisches would become the largest single shareholder in the company, when taken as a unit. (However, such stock may be sold only with permission of UA.)

Mirisch Corp. pact with UA officially expires Aug. 31, 1967 and there was some trade speculation a couple of months ago to the effect that the outfit would leave UA at the end of that contract. Paramount was known to be a likely recipient of the Mirisches' services though the brothers also held talks with others.

A switch isn't dismissed entirely but the Mirisches are now believed receptive to a new deal with UA. It is understood that the indies were miffed at UA for certain decisions, among them the distrib's setting of a $10,000,000 top on the "Hawaii" budget. So the brothers began to talk around.

UA, however, apparently played it cool and insisted that the Mirisch pact with it was firm through mid-1967 and that was that. They're smart lawyers to start with. Meanwhile the Mirisches' large stock holdings will doubtless have a major effect on what does eventually transpire between the two parties. No other company is likely to want the Mirisches while they still hold so much UA stock nor, for that matter, would the brothers be working for one company while being the major holder in another, its figured.

So there are several things to be ironed out between now and 1967. What the Mirisches will do with their UA stock will presumably be a basic indicator of their future relationship with UA. Meanwhile, many observers believe that the main developments as regards the Mirisch operation will center around its filmmakers and not the outfit itself. The plan, it is felt, will be for UA and others to try to lure some of the Mirisches top film creators away either by contracts or picture deals which would dilute the brother's strength somewhat. No major "raids" have yet been made, however, and many of the Mirisches' more successful creators have pacts with lots of time left on their deals with the brothers.

What the outcome of it all will be is far from determined as yet, it is believed. The Mirisches have ben a major product source for UA in recent years but the company has recently been building a series of picture deals designed to beef up the company's long-range product position. UA is already scheduling projects into 1967 and, Mirisches or no, has considerable product on its drawing boards for release several years hence.

'THUNDERING WHEELS'

Dispute Over Title Between Two Indie Distribs

Baltimore, Jan. 28.

"Thundering Wheels," Willpat Production featuring Judy Lewis, Nancy Berg, Mike Bradford and Harry Mallard, will be released this spring.

Action drama is full length indie about two racedrivers and grudge they bear against each other which erupts when both take part in stock car racing classic in Atlanta, Ga.

Willpat is currently involved in suit in N.Y. Federal Court where company is seeking injunction to halt Sigma III Corp. from exhibiting a film by same title. It is alleged that Sig.a obtained film about stock car racing called "Big Wheel" and has renamed it "Thundering Wheels."

Lightstone Jets to Rome; For (1) Ponti TV Deal And (2) Tokyo Festival

Leonard Lightstone, Embassy Pictures exec v.p., has planed to Rome on a dual-purpose trip. For one thing, he will be huddling with Italo producer Carlo Ponti on the upcoming tv series Embassy prez Joseph E. Levine will make for ABC-TV in association with the Italian. For another, Lightstone will make arrangements for the participation of a group in the Italian Film Festival, to be held in Tokyo, March 4-11.

The exec's confabs with Ponti will concern "Hercules," a $4,000,000 series to be made in color at the Italian's Rome studios. Among the things to be worked out are casting, scripts, directors and a host of other details. Shooting is to begin this spring with the series itself to go on the air in 1965. Also on the drawing boards are two other series which Levine is planning with Ponti, "Casanova" and "D'Artagnan."

In the matter of the Italo fest in Japan, Embassy will have two pix entered, "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow" and "Empty Canvas." Lightstone will organize a group consisting of Sophia Loren, Marcello Mastroianni, Vittorio de Sica, Ponti, Levine, Embassy ad-pub v.p. Bob Weston and himself, all of whom will attend to rep "Yesterday," in which the Italians are all involved. Following the fest, the group will all come to New York for the U.S. preem of the film.

FITTER REAR-ADMIRALS UA RISING VOLUME

Al Fitter has been named to the newly-created post of assistant general sales manager at United Artists. Fitter had been the company's western division manager.

James R. Velde, UA sales v.p., said in a statement concerning the creation of the new post, that it was necessitated because of the expansion of the national picture market in the past few years which has resulted in a "tremendous increase" in UA's sales volume.

Fitter was western division manager for the past eight years, prior to which he was with Paramount for 10 years.

Impressions of a Recent Visit

By ABEL GREEN

There is patently more bounce to the local Hollywood production picture, be it feature films or vidpix, and the fact that recent releases "have been doing so well at the boxoffice" is heartening. "The youngsters seem to be rediscovering the movies all over again, or maybe it's what's on television that's chasing them into the theatres", observed one studio exec who, at the same time, was eyeing new pilots for the new tv season.

There's the usual invasion of the Mad Ave. set to talk video pilots, and the usual film studio optimism about the pilots in the can or in planning.

Tollvision Up Again

Tollvision is again to the fore as a Hollywood executive conversation piece, probably superinduced by Pat Weaver's "talking it up" so effectively as, concededly, he has been doing in behalf of his Subscription TV, the sports-oriented pay-see service.

Some executives are frank in suggesting that when and if feevee comes to pass, it would be to the exhibitors' best interests to be in on the ground floor.

The dream of "every home a boxoffice" for the new film releases, of course, is the springboard for such wishful thinking. But, coupled with it, is the reality that the exhubitor, the traditional outlet for the producer and distributor, could move up a notch and become the middleman as the distributor, purveying tollcasts of new pictures direct to the consumer (homes).

Schneider and Wasserman

Columbia Pictures prexy Abe Schneider plans making it a "run" at the studio, what with Mike Frankovich just taking over as production chief with hq now in Hollywood, and the Screen Gems' top spot still indeterminate following Bill Dozier's exit.

MCA's Lew Wasserman remains the enthusiastic, personally conducting guide of the burgeoning Revue-International film studio complex. Its sundry improvements in facilities and services are designed to achieve peak utilization of manpower within the prescribed man hours.

WB, 20th, Par

Jack L. Warner, of course, has his "personal" production—one of his rarities—the $17,000,000 "My Fair Lady" which is being merchandised with the same cash-in-advance hardticket selling as was the "Cleopatra" pattern.

Seymour Poe, Joe Sugar and Jonas Rosenfield Jr. powwowing with Dick Zanuck on the new production lineup which latter says "took a year to jell but is now going forward".

Barney Balaban, George Weltner, Jack Karp, Martin Rackin, Joe (Euripedes) Levine in "still more" Paramount deals. Latter converted the BevHills Hotel into a mau-mau motif, following a "Zulu" preview.

The Bob (UA) Blumofes (Joan Benny) making comedian Jack (and Mary) Benny third-time grandparents soon. The former Joan Benny has children from her first two husbands as well.

Las Vegas Sands' Jack Entratter also a second-time grandpop; he timed it 100%, waiting until Dean Martin (& Friend, yclept Frank Sinatra) opened, and then offed to New York in time to be with his daughter for the birth of her second girl.

Palm Springs' Tramway

The new tramway at $4 a head (plus $1 for parking) is really the new hit as a tourist attraction in Palm Springs. The Swiss-built funicular takes one high up on Mount San Jacinto with a commanding view past Indio to the Salton Sea. Eventually it will have a ski run, iceskating, winter sports, lodges, etc.

Charlie Farrell has returned to active management and hosting at the Racquet Club which was synonymous with him. He built it with Ralph Bellamy. Latter sold out and Farrell was so much the "mayor of Palm Springs" that he was elected to the job. Eventually, he too sold out some time ago to Texas-Pasadena interests, on capital gain, but the spot seemingly needs the former costar of "7th Heaven". (Farrell likes to tell one about the Santa Barbara dowager who gushed over him, his past film successes, and "you and Janet Gaynor were especially wonderful in '7-Up'."

Meeter-greeter to politicos and kindred VIPs is ex-Brooklyn cop-turned-tycoon Phil Regan who, at the drop of an arpeggio, still gives out with "Irish Eyes Are Smiling" at parties. Jo and Phil Regan influenced United Steelworkers prexy Dave McDonald to become a permanent resident. The youthful looking Regans mark their 40th anni this month. They like the desert so much that for the real hot months they have another home at nearby Beaumont, which is cooler in July-August.

Marion (Mrs. Clarence) Brown is currently active in local charities, also as permanent Palm Desert residents. Vet film director has extensive Palm Springs-PD realty holdings here. He figures PD will be the "new boom" in real estate because there is more latitude for developing.

Vera (Mrs. Nate) Blumberg, besides being a permanent Cathedral City resident (adjoining Tamarisk Country Club) works her Rocking Vee Ranch from dates and oranges to real estate subdividing. Widow of the former Universal Pictures prexy rarely leaves; she calls herself a "desert rat" and loves it.

Airconditioning has made the desert a comfortable year-round residential-business area, swelled of course by the midwinter influx, but hotels like the Riviera pitch for and get late spring convention business. It's only for a couple of weeks in July or August that some of the natives decide to "go fishing" in cooler climes.

The new Spa belies its primitive Indian mud bath origin, over which site it is built with a new plushery hotel along with the curative waters.

Harpo Talks

Another Palm Springs permanent resident is Harpo Marx who will "talk" in public for the first time when he takes off on a UJA tour in February taking him to Frisco, Portland, Seattle, Denver and then east.

Songsmith Frederick (Fritz) Loewe's concept of a movable bed—to him the kingpin of life and death—has become a showplace conversation piece. The bed moves with the sun and the view. As the Continental composer ("My Fair Lady", etc.) puts it—you're born in bed, you sleep, you make love, you die in bed, so why not make the most of it.

Frankie (Mrs. Leo) Spitz is another who favors the desert although still owning her BevHills digs when not commuting to Paris and New York on UN work in which she is vitally interested.

Quondam songstress Maxine Lewis, long in Vegas, now p.r. for the Riviera. She's the sister of "Mousie" (Mrs. William) Powell, long-time chums of Virginia and Charles Farrell. Latter celebrate their 30th anni mid-February, and Millie Iverson, livewire Boswell for the Racquet Club, is making it a civic as well as social event.

American Airlines' pub-ad veep Willis Player junketed press (travel, society and kindred columnists) to PS for the Tramway o.o. and as a spur to utilizing AA facilities from the east and the midwest to the Coast and down to Palm Springs.

Biz Strong; 'Charade' First for Fifth Week, 'World' 2d, 'Jones' 3d, 'Prize' 4th, 'Cardinal' 5th

Firstrun biz is following much the same pattern of recent weeks currently, with milder weather in many key cities covered by VARIETY helping trade. Most of pace-setters are pix which were launched during the yearend holiday.

"Charade" (U) (5th wk) is finishing No. 1 for fifth week in succession though being pressed now by some newcomers. Pic is playing in some 22 keys, several reporting better biz than a week ago. "It's a Mad World" (UA) (10th wk) is copping second place, an improvement over last round.

"Tom Jones" (9th wk), another from United Artists, is finishing third. "The Prize" (MGM) (5th wk) is copping fourth place. It was seventh last week.

"The Cardinal" (Col) (5th wk) will take fifth money. "How West Was Won" (MGM) (57th wk) is finishing sixth. "Soldier in Rain" (AA) (2d wk) is capturing seventh position via same new strong playdates.

"Strait-Jacket" (Col) (3d wk), sixth a week ago, is winding up eighth. "Cleopatra" (20th) (31st wk) will be ninth.

"Move Over, Darling" (20th) (5th wk) rounds out the Top 10 pictures.

"Sword in Stone" (BV), ninth a week ago; and "Lord of Flies" (Cont) are runnerup pix.

"Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" (Par), just getting around, hints nice promise, playing in some seven or eight keys currently. "Billy Liar" (Cont) shapes promising, being neat in Philly, and good in Pitt and Toronto.

"Love With Proper Stranger" (Par), another newie, hints big potential, based on this week's biz. It is smash in Chi, great in Detroit, socko in two N.Y. houses and fancy in L.A. Same is partly true of "Man in Middle" (20th), brisk in Boston, smash in Detroit and nice in Buffalo. "Comedy of Terrors" (AI) is uneven in current stanza.

"Irma La Douce" (UA), still playing in some major keys, looks fat in Omaha, fancy in Portland and big in Seattle. "Capt. Newman" (U), due next at N.Y. Music Hall, continues its strong run in L.A.

Note: The number of weeks out in release for bigger and longrun pix are designated in such cases.

Allied Artists Seeks Outside Product; Sets 2, May Handle McCarthy-Welsh

Allied Artists is stepping more actively into the picture-buying market. It has recently acquired two completed indie features and is dickering for yet another. This activity is in line with some new thinking that has been forming in AA's plans for the future, in which a greater emphasis will be placed on outside deals, both for product and creators.

The two acquisitions are "Station Six-Sahara" and "Train 349 from Berlin." "Station Six" toplines Carroll Baker, was produced by Victor Lyndon and directed by Seth Holt. It is a CCC Films-Artur Brauner Production, scripted by Bryan Forbes and Brian Clemens. "Train 349" toplines Jose Ferrer and Sean Flynn. A Ray Ventura-Han Oppenheimer presentation, it was directed by Rold Haedrich.

Also, believed that AA is presently dickering for the distrib rights to "Point of Order," indie documentary depicting the Army-McCarthy hearings. It is a compiliation of television kinescopes of the hearings, produced by Daniel Talbot and Emile de Antonio. It is now playing at the Beekman Theatre, N. Y.

It is expected that more such deals will be made at an accelerated pace by Allied. Idea is to convert the company's operation to a plan which has been termed the "UA method," which is to say put greater concentration on the acquisition of outside pix, properties and creators. The company has made some such deals in the past but will be doing a lot more of it as time goes buy.

Writers Ratify Contract

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Membership of the screen branch of Writers Guild of America West has unanimously ratified the recently-negotiated theatrical motion picture basic agreement reached with the major production companies.

Special membership meeting had been called for that purpose, and was presided over by screen branch prexy Allen Rivkin.

Separately, Frank Capra gave the scripters an inside report on his recent State Dept. sponsored inspection tour of the Russian pix industry.

A Canadian Makes It

Toronto, Jan. 28.

With membership by invitation only, first Canadian to become a member of the American Society of Cinematographers is Herbert S. Alpert, Toronto, director of photography on a number of Canadian features.

UA & Sellers In Hall Doubleheader

United Artists' debut at Radio City Music Hall will be a big one, with two pictures playing there back to back. It will also be an auspicious debut for Peter Sellers in that both films star the British actor.

Already reported is the Music Hall booking of "Pink Panther" for late spring. Now, however, the Hall has set "The World of Henry Orient" as its Easter attraction, immediately preceding "Panther." "Orient" is the first production effort of the Pan Arts Co., cohelmed by producer Jerry Hellman and director George Roy Hill, who functioned in these capacities in making the pic.

"Panther" was made by Blake Edwards who is presently fashioning another starring vehicle for Sellers and UA release based on the Broadway comedy "A Shot in the Dark." This is being planned by UA as its Christmas, 1964, release. Naturally, a bid will be made to the Music Hall for this one too. It's all quite a spurt for UA, which has never had a picture in the Hall since the present management took the reins several years ago.

HER REEL LIFE BEGINS AT 72

"There's so much going on in the world, it's difficult not to be prolific."

This is the spirited opinion of Nobel and Pulitzer prizewinning novelist Pearl Buck whose current committments to life not only include the raising of children, the writing of novels, the presidency of the Authors Guild, but, also, the writing and production of motion pictures, all this and 72.

Mrs. Buck and director-writer Tad Danielewski, partnered in Stratton Productions, are presently winding post-photography work on their made-in-India indie, "The Guide." Additionally, they have just co-authored the screen adaptation of Mrs. Buck's novel, "Imperial Woman," which Joe Levine is set to produce as a $10,000,000 roadshow attraction for Paramount.

Separately, Mrs. Buck is now well along on a new novel, "The Mandala Flower," set in modern India (and a direct outgrowth of her stay in India for production of "The Guide"), planning still another novel, set in contemporary New York ("It's about today—or, perhaps, tomorrow") and working closely with Danielewski on future plans for Stratton. Among these are the possibility of a film adaptation of her current best seller, "The Living Reed," a multi-generation tale set in Korea. However, both she and Danielewski insist, Stratton is not confining itself to her works ("Guide" is an adaptation of a novel by R. K. Narayan), nor to pix with Oriental locales.

They would particularly like to find a property for filming in New York, and would not be at all adverse to working in Hollywood "with its superior technology."

"The Guide," of course, is not the first Buck-Danielewski collaboration to reach the screen. Their first film was Mrs. Buck's "The Big Wave," filmed in Japan in partnership with Allied Artists in 1960 and to which AA has never given national release as far as the partners of Stratton Productions can tell.

They have no intention of allowing "The Guide," a $1,500,000 production for which they, as the U.S. partners, put up the equivalent of one-third of the budget, to be similarly lost. Levine, for whom they successfully worked on the screenplay of "Imperial Woman," will have first refusal.

"Guide" was actually produced in two versions, English and Hindi, both in Pathe color and both starring Indian b.o. toppers Dev Anand, Waheeda Rehman and Kishope Sahu. Danielewski directed the English version which, however, will be somewhat more "austere" than the Hindi version. Latter, according to Indian film convention, will be replete with much song and dance. As Danielewski estimates it, he and Mrs. Buck already have earned back their investment in the pic via surefire receipts from the Indian version (still shooting), which, he says, may be the most publicized film ever made in India.

Mrs. Buck, whose partnership with Danielewski had its genesis in 1957 when he directed a tv adaptation of one of her stories, finds her new involvement in show biz not particularly unusual or out of keeping. She has always been interested in the theatre and films and sees herself as a "narrative novelist," as opposed to the philisophical novelist of the Aldous Huxley vein. Metro, which filmed her "Good Earth" in 1937 and "Dragon Seed" in 1944, never asked her to participate in their production ("I always hoped that they would, but they didn't.").

Does she find it difficult to adapt her own works to the spare requirements of the screenplay? Not really, since she has found, under Danielewski's tutelage, that what might take 10 pages to describe in a novel can be stated in one frame of film. "In fact," said Mrs. Buck, because of her screen experience, "I don't think I'll ever again be as long-winded in my writing." She paused a moment and then laughed: "I have to take that back. My last novel (The Living Reed) is the longest book I've ever written!"

Par Takes Turn at Showcase Bat With 'Stranger' Via 2 Firstruns And Then a 20-Theatre Expansion

A Phantom Project?

Calgary, Alta., Jan. 28.

Maurice E. Hartnett, general manager of the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede, says he knows of no plans by Victoria Productions of Canada to make a feature film this summer in connection with the stampede.

No representations of any kind have been made to the stampede company, he said.

This project has been "announced" in trade press by the supposed promoters.

In all the "showcase" planning and discussing that has been going on lately, one of the silent zones has been at Paramount Pictures. Although it is not calling it that, the company has now set its first release pattern which resembles the "showcase" idea pioneered by United Artists.

What Paramount will do is also much the same as Universal is doing with "Charade." Ditto United Artists with "Irma La Douce" and "Great Escape." Par's plans will centre on "Love With the Proper Stranger," which has been playing a firstrun engagement at the Loew's State on Broadway, day-dating with the eastside Murray Hill.

As the plan is set up, "Stranger" will continue in its present berths and will add about 20 other "selected" theatres in the Bronx, Queens, Staten Island, New Jersey, Long Island and upstate New York This is what UA has been calling a "golden showcase" and is exactly what it did with "Irma" and "Escape," although the theatres were different. Universal's plan is different in that "Charade" is not remaining in its firstrun house, which was Radio City Music Hall, during its "showcase" run.

There are three Loew's houses in the "Stranger" multiple besides the Broadway State. These are the Metropolitan, Paradise and Mt. Vernon. The circuit is already in the "showcase" scramble with Metro with "Wheeler Dealers." Also involved with the Par plan are Century, Brandt, Redstone, Walter Reade, Town and Country, Prudential and others. Absent are any RKO or Skouras theatres, these playing a prominent part in the "showcase" plans set up by Universal, Warners, Buena Vista and others.

Stress is being made at Paramount that their's not a "showcase" per se. The company is not using any form of "showcase" logo or name, for example. Pix to be released this way will simply be issued with the usual campaigns, sans any reference to "showcase" or anything like it. The theatres that play the Par plan will vary according to bids, the idea being completely a bidding situation.

"Stranger" is the only pic so far slated for this kind of multiple at Paramount. It is expected that others will be marketed this way as time goes by but the company also plans to follow the traditional exhibition patterns as well for some of its product. "Stranger" will spread into selected multiple around Lincoln's Birthday. After playing this multiple plan, the likelihood is that the film will play the Loew's circuit, which is the chain's notion of "showcase" and is the same idea being used by the RKO group.

At the time UA introduced its "premiere showcase" plan, Par sales prez Charles Boasberg denounced the scheme. His primary objection was ostensibly the theatres which UA had been able then to assemble, the sales exec's feeling being that they weren't particularly desireable houses in the main. Par began to study other possibilities along this line, however, and had said that some kind of multiple plan was in the offing. What it has settled on isn't much different from UA's, except for the major addition of circuit participation. Both Par and UA use Century houses, for example.

'Kwai' All 'New' But at Old Terms

"There are no semantics," said producer Sam Spiegel. "Exhibitors say the producers do not make enough product. My contention is that more 'durable' product is the answer."

The independent filmmaker thus sketched the background for what is billed "a general release" of "Bridge on the River Kwai," which first hit the domestc market in 1957. Columbia Pictures distribution v.p. Rube Jackter and ad-pub v.p. Robert S. Ferguson say the picture is to be sent to market anew—like it never happened before. There are to be new prints, new ad-pub approaches, and new kinds of marketing.

"Kwai" shapes as a reissue, of course. But Col is regarding it as a brand new precious commodity. Spiegel declares a new generation has come into being and will be seeing it for the first time. And those who saw it before will want to see it again, he adds.

What value such a vaultie? It's been on re-release in England the past year and so far has grossed 65% of the original take of 450,000 pounds. The re-run upon completion likely will realize the equivalent of the first marketing money. It's similarly strong in France after five months. The reissue started in Stockholm this week.

Of particular significance are comments made by Jackter. He said the domestic terms are 50% from the first dollar—and exhibitors are going for such deals. This is the same exhib-distributor boxoffice split that obtained when "Kwai" first went out.

Jackter said the picture played less than two years in its first time around and grossed more than any other picture in Col history. It played 7,800 domestic (United States and Canadian) dates, raked in $14,600,000 in rentals, and Jackter withdrew it from circulation with the thought in mind of another full-scale go, like now. The "lavish" re-lauching is set for May 30, with the outlets perhaps to include some showcase situations such as in New York. This would mark Col's first experience with showcase. Said Jackter: "I'll play anybody who will give me a lot of money."

Spiegel said "Kwai" has grossed a little more than $16,000,000 first time around in foreign.

Key contention of the Col people is that "durable" features are capable of having impact on a re-release basis. Said Spiegel: "Television cannot conform the supply to the demand. In theatricals the distinction is that a good product is prepared for years and can stand up."

Col is hoping to match the original "Kwai" receipts with this second exposure. Jackter said he spoke to numerous circuit and independent exhibitors and they're high on the idea.

The results could be meaningful.

MGM 'Sunday' 500 Prints

Metro is dealing in terms of multiples with its release of the Seven Arts production of "Sunday in New York." Company has ordered 500 prints and this represents a 25% increase over the usual.

Film has Cliff Robertson, Jane Fonda and Rod Taylor in the leads.

Joseph E. Levine makes an impressive debut in British film production with "Zulu," a picture with potent b.o. potential, and one that also allows ample scope for his f amboyant approach to showmanship. This has all the proven ingredients for bigscale exploitation, which will clearly be reflected in the boxoffice returns.

Based on a famous heroic exploit, when a handful of British soldiers withstood an onslaught by 4,000 Zulu warriors, the Stanley Baker-Cy Endfield production is distinguished by its notable on-screen values, which are enhanced by top-quality Technicolor-Technirama lensing by Stephen Dade. It also has an intelligent screenplay by John Prebble and Endfield, which avoids most of the obvious cliches. It keeps the traditional British stiff upper-lip attitudes down to the barest minimum.

Authenticity is helped by the extensive use of Natal locations. The picture gets off to a memorable start with scenes of mass wedding celebrations, in which young barebreasted Zulu maidens, each carrying a small spear as proof of their chastity, perform a tribal dance with the warriors they are to marry. (Incidentally, this provides the basis for one of the promotional aids, already receiving exploitation locally via the introduction of the "Zulu Stomp" in dance halls and clubs.)

The defense of the garrison at Rorke's Drift took place on Jan. 22, 1879, and significantly the world preem of the filmic reconstruction of that episode took place on the 85th anni. At the time the garrison heard the news that the 4,000 Zulu braves were on the way, reports had just come in that a far larger garrison had been completely wiped out, and there was no prospect of help from any other source.

Senior officer at Rorke's Drift at the time was a lieutenant in the Royal Engineers, who had been sent to build a bridge over the River Buffalo, and he assumed command and rejected advice to evacuate the garrison. At this point in the yarn, the script focusses briefly on an inevitable conflict with another lieutenant, a professional who feels he has a hereditary right to command, but once the leadership is firmly established, private squabbles are set aside to prepare the maximum defense with the minimum resources.

There were just eight offices and 97 men, apart from the sick and wounded, to resist wave after wave of Zulu attackers, some armed with spears and others with rifles captured from the British. The perimeter defenses, consisting of a few upturned wagons and a wall hastily built of mealie bags, could not withstand the weight of the attack for long, and bitter and bloody hand-to-hand fighting ensued. Yet the defenders, their numbers seriously depleted, held their positions, and after an epic battle lasting through the night, the attackers withdrew with a salute to the bravery of their opponents. Eleven of the defenders received the Victoria Cross, the highest British military decoration.

Endfield's skillful and forceful direction adroitly builds up the suspense to the start of the campaign. And the ensuing battle scenes which continue through to the end of the film have a powerful sweep, yet are never repetitive. The mood and the tempo is occasionally changed by a variety of human touches, one of the best of which shows the defenders (all from a Welsh regiment and noted for their voices) singing "Men of Harlech" in answer to tribal war chants coming from the Zulu warriors.

One of the more obvious cliches in this type of yarn is apt to be the malingerer who displays great heroism in a moment of crisis. There is such a situation in "Zulu," but the cliche is avoided, largely because of the excellent performance by James Booth. Indeed, the high allround standard of acting is one of the notable plus features. Stanley Baker, a solid and reliable performer, turns in a thoroughly convincing portrayal as the resolute RE officer, with an effective contrasting study by Michael Caine as a supercilious lieutenant. Their admission, after the battle is over and won, that neither had had previous combat experience, is another of the warm human touches which are sprinkled through the film.

Jack Hawkins has an offbeat role as a missionary who pleads in vain with Baker to evacuate the garrison, and then urges the men to obey the biblical "Thou Shalt Not Kill" commandment and lay down their arms. As always, he plays it with consummate skill. Ulla Jacobsson has little to do as his daughter, though attractively provides a negative feminine interest. Both fade out of the picture around the halfway mark, when Baker sends them off in their wagon, rather than risk a demoralizing influence on the men.

Richard Burton contributes a brief and dignified narration. There are also a number of solid supporting contributions, especially from Nigel Green, Ivor Emmanuel, Paul Daneman, Glynn Edwards and many other members of the big cast. High grade technical qualities round off a classy production. Myro.

La Cuisine Au Beurre

(FRENCH-FRANSCOPE)

Paris, Jan. 21.

Valoria release of Corona-Dear Film production. Stars Fernandel, Bourvil; features Claire Maurier, Henri Vilbert, Michel Galabru, Andrex. Directed by Gilles Grangier. Screenplay, Jean Levitte, Pierre Levy-Corti; Raymond Castans; camera, Roger Hubert; editor, Madeleine Gug. At Marignan, Paris. Running time, 90 MINS.

Fernand	Fernandel
Andre	Bourvil
Christiane	Claire Maurier
Maitre	Henri Vilbert
Postman	Michel Galabru
Barman	Andrex

What should have been an almost bawdy comedy comes out a tidy, compact situation affair that appears primarily a local bet, on the pull of the starred one-name comics appearing in their first pic together, Bourvil and Fernandel. It's primarily a dualer or exploitation possibility on its theme in the foreign market.

Fernandel has spent 13 years holed up with a buxom Bavarian woman since the war. Her husband's impending return from Siberia has him going back to France at last. But he finds his wife remarried and his old bistro turned into a fancy restaurant by her new husband. Bourvil is the latter.

Then Fernandel feigns he has been in Siberia and is taken in by his ex-wife and her husband. And complications arise when it seems he has to give her a divorce since he is legally still the husband. Then come all sorts of dodges until Fernandel gives in and is also faced by his ex-Bavarian mistress whose husband has gone back to his Siberian girl friend.

Fernandel uses his heavy mugging and familiar gestures to etch an acceptable portrait of the feckless, slothful ex-husband while Bourvil is more subtle as the sensitive member of the triangle. But direction keeps the comedy in low gear and it too often depends on the earthy shenanigans of the duo. And these are not inventive enough to give this the depth it needs.

Film technically is good and appears good for boxoffice results here if it would need the hardsell overseas. Mosk.

Dark Purpose
(COLOR)

Silly, clumsily plotted suspense meller set against some lovely Italo scenery. Weak b.o. indicated.

Universal release of Galatea-Lyre-Brazzi-Barclay-Hayutin production. Stars Shirley Jones, Rossano Brazzi, George Sanders; features Georgia Moll, Micheline Presle. Directed by George Marshall. Screenplay, David P. Harmon, based on novel by Doris Hume Kilburn; camera (Technicolor), Gabor Pogany; music, Angelo F. Lavagnino; editor, Giancarlo Cappelli; assistant director, Frank Marchione. Reviewed at Universal, N. Y., Jan. 13, '64. Running time, 97 MINS.

Karen Williams	Shirley Jones
Count Paolo Barbarelli	Rossano Brazzi
Raymond Fontaine	George Sanders
Cora Barbarelli	Georgia Moll
Monique Bouvier	Micheline Presle

How all the respectable talents involved could have succeeded in turning out such a silly melodrama is the only mystery contained in "Dark Purpose." Perhaps they were touched by the Mediterranean sun, which so brilliantly lights the Italian Riviera landscapes and provides the pic — periodically — with a certain amount of eye appeal. "Purpose," otherwise, has very little.

Shirley Jones, Rossano Brazzi and George Sanders are toplined in this obvious bit of film-flammery. Brazzi is seen as a double-dealing Italo count who seeks to pass off his mentally ill wife, Georgia Moll, as his daughter in order to wed a pretty young American art expert, Miss Jones. Sandres is along just for the ride in his role as Miss Jones' art appraiser boss, while Micheline Presle turns up from time to time as Brazzi's unhappy mistress.

David P. Harmon's screenplay, which opens with Sanders and Miss Jones arriving at Brazzi's villa on a commission to appraise his various art treasures, makes an unsuccessful attempt to combine mystery and romance, spiced with wit. In the latter connection, Sanders, the acid-tongued critic of the world-at-large, is called upon—in effect—to parody some of his best remembered roles. Brazzi seems equally ill-at-ease as the narrative lumbers along, requiring him first to appear as a rather world weary intellectual and then as a love-crazed killer, dropping clues and suggesting menace with all the subtlety of the cat in a Tom & Jerry cartoon. The mice of the piece don't fare much better, and there are times when the Technicolor camera, which does so handsomely by the scenery, does anything but flatter the Misses Jones, Moll and Presle.

Vet George Marshall has directed the tale with no apparent enthusiasm or sense of discipline. This is evident in lines or dialog which meet with unsolicited laughs, as when Brazzi, with murder in his heart, batters at Miss Jones' door and is told by her: "Please don't come in, I've just taken a tranquilizer!"

Dead Ringer

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Warner Bros. release of William H. Wright production. Stars Bette Davis, Karl Malden, Peter Lawford; features Philip Carey, Jean Hagen. Directed by Paul Henreid. Screenplay, Albert Beich, Oscar Millard; from story by Rian James; camera, Ernest Haller; editor, Folmar Blangsted; music, Andre Previn; assistant directors, Charles L. Hansen, Lee White. Margaret and Edith	Bette Davis
Sgt. Hobson	Karl Malden
Tony Collins	Peter Lawford
Sgt. Hoag	Philip Carey

Paul Harrison	George Macready
Matriarch	Estelle Winwood
George	George Chandler
Garcia	Mario Alcalde
Henry	Cyril Delevanti
Janet	Monika Henreid
Dan	Bert Remsen
Apt. Manager	Charles Watts
Capt. Johnson	Ken Lynch

Aggressive salesmanship and the Bette Davis name will probably have to carry the boxoffice burden for this old-fashioned suspense melodrama about homicidal twin sisters. The story doesn't hold up very well under close scrutiny, so the William H. Wright production will have to rely on the wicket support of the less discerning, less selective picturegoer and the incurable Bette Davis buff. A big initial impact should be the target for the Warner Bros. release. Beyond that, it's apt to be tough commercial sledding.

Miss Davis, who, along with Joan Crawford, seems to have launched a new shocker-oriented career with the recent "Baby Jane," enacts the pivotal dual role in the Albert Beich-Oscar Millard screenplay from a story by Rian James. For some rather foggy and dubious reason inconsistent with the character itself, the relatively "nice" poor sister (Edith) murders the relatively unappealing rich one (Margaret) and assumes her identity. For some equally unconvincing reason, the boys down at homicide fail to deduce the pretty obvious crime, and the truth also eludes Edith's ardent beau, police sergeant Jim Hobson (Karl Malden). After three months of successful masquerade, Edith is confronted by Margaret's enterprising lover, Tony (Peter Lawford), who has been "vacationing" abroad ever since, it is disclosed, he and Margaret disposed of her mate. The question, then, is not which twin gets the Tony, but whether Tony gets the twin before she gets him. The ending, alas, is pure hokum.

The enactment of twins is nothing new to Miss Davis, who did it before 18 years ago in "A Stolen Life." She achieves good contrast in her dual portrayal and carries on gamely and with considerable histrionic relish in the combination assignment. It is not, however, a very rewarding role for her, although there is always a certain bonus challenge in the enactment of twins. If nothing else, twice as much lower case Bette Davis is better than none, though not nearly as good as one upper case Bette Davis.

Malden is his usual reliable self as the somewhat dense policeman. Lawford seems rather ill-at-ease as the mercenary lover boy. Others of passing import are Philip Carey, Jean Hagen, George Macready, Estelle Winwood, George Chandler, Mario Alcalde, Cyril Delevanti, Monika Henreid, Bert Remsen, Charles Watts and Ken Lynch. Paul Henreid's directorial tempo is somewhat cumbersome and lethargic in spots, particularly in the early going, but then he hasn't a very fresh or distinguished piece of material with which to work.

The most impressive thing about "Dead Ringer" is the rich and macabre musical score composed for the occasion by Andre Previn. It is the most virile aspect of the picture. Ernest Haller's photography is a plus factor. As noted, the film drags now and then, a negative charaeteristic that might have been—and still might be—smoothed over by editor Folmar Blangsted. Perry Ferguson's art direction is apt and impressive. Tube.

Mr. H	Bill Freed

The sting of this "B" will poison any double feature program unlucky enough to inherit it. Ineptly written and chaotically directed, the Carl Edwards production for Crown International is a melodramatic fiasco that is apt to cause even less discerning audiences to squirm.

Hitler rides again in the Richard Miles scenario from an original story by Steve Bennett. This time he turns up in the Caribbean isle of "Mandoras," to which he had been transported after an operation in which his head was decapitated and "perpetuated" by last-ditch Nazi fanatics in order to preserve that teeming brain. But der Fuehrer is foiled again in his plot to overthrow the world by means of a deadly nerve gas.

Flamingo Studio release of Johan Jacobsen production. Stars Ingrid Thulin, Ghita Norby. Directed by Annelise Hovmand. Original story by Paul Bach; screenplay, Paul Bach, Annelise Hovmand; camera, Kalle Andersson, Niels Carstens; music, Erik Fiehn, Sahib Shihab. At the Imperial Bio, Copenhagen. Running time, 94 MINS.

Elaine	Ingrid Thulin

Even before its release, this Danish New Wave film drew international attention. An English-speaking version was shot simultaneously with the Danish edition for a London preem. Its top femme star is Sweden's Ingrid Thulin, protege of Ingmar Bergmann. Its producer-director team, Johan Jacobsen and Annelise Hovmand, created a minor uproar in the U.S. with their film, "A Stranger Knocks." And "Sextet" represents yet another new twist in cinematic treatment of the subject of sex.

Twist is the word for it. "Sextet" involves six people, all emotionally and sexually twisted into terrifying knots. Miss Thulin plays a novelist whose creative powers are running dry while she gushes hysterical tears and guzzles raw whiskey in an attempt to hold on to her second husband, Axel Strobye. He has tired of her but feels pity for her teenage daughter, Hanne Ulrich. Not enough pity, however, to check his own prowling instincts when he suddenly finds himself confronted with a young innocent but animalistic woman, Ghita Norby, who is shocked by the discovery that her two suitors feel more for each other than ordinary male friendship.

The action takes place in and around a summer house somewhere in a coastal region that allows for some fine scenic shots. But interest is concentrated primarily on the six people who are forced by bad weather to spend a night together. Director Annelise Hovmand directs her camera crew better than her actors. The film contains a lot of superior footage having photographic beauty. Her weak point, however, is her direction of the players. Actually, only Miss Thulin speaks her lines convincingly. And it is unfortunate that so many of the lines are rather programmatic. The lonely are damned, she yells in case anybody should have missed this all too obvious point. And it is the only point made by this film.

All in all, the film certainly will stir interest. The scenes where the two young men fight in a way that seems a concealed way of making love is strong stuff but discreetly handled. The traditional boy-meets-girl-in-bed sequence is surprisingly boring, but Miss Norby is a doll with rather fine porcelain features. Besides her film work, she is an established dramatic actress of the stage. Kell.

The tongue-in-cheek approach to the horror film has become a speciality of American International Pictures over the past few years, but this latest effort in that category leaves much to be desired. The raw material for a jovial spoof of chillers was there, but the comic restraint and perception necessary to capitalize on those natural resources is conspicuously missing. Still AIP is apt to get some pretty fair boxoffice mileage over the short haul out of "The Comedy of Terrors" thanks largely to moppet support and its innate exploitabil-

CHICAGO'S 'SHOWCASE FEVER'

United Artists, the Innovator, In On RKO Circuit's Own 'Showcase'; New York Playoff Forever Changed

By EDDIE KALISH

The flattery of general imitation has now been meted out to the originator of the "Showcase" playoff plan in the New York area, namely, United Artists. Practically every major distributor has followed suit, as the last several issues of this weekly, and the current issue, too, attest. Indeed there is now some trade question as to whether the many different varieties of "Showcase," and the lack of uniformity, may not create some confusion in the public mind.

When United Artists first launched its "Premiere Showcase" (to which was later added its "Golden Showcase") the opposition was often vocal. The proposal to break with the old ways of costly-to-exploit Broadway firstruns in favor of a grouping of theatres extended to outlying neighborhoods and suburbs struck at entrenched bargaining advantages of the Times Square-anchored circuits.

That RKO and Loew's are now, belatedly, come round to the idea of "showcasing" may be said to consolidate the booking strategy revolution initiated by UA. But, significantly, UA is also riding along with the variant to its own plans.

The RKO circuit is presently set to handle the "showcase" nominations of Universal and Warners, first using a few, selected houses on "showcase" and then following with a "regular" circuit run. UA will now go along on this variation scheme too, its "One Man's Way" and "From Russia With Love" being the first two releases to use the circuit-expanded plan.

Universal is already set with "Charade," to be followed by "Man's Favorite Sport?". Later, in February, U will also put "Dark Purpose" on the plan. Warners will be marketing "Dead Ringer" on the RKO-Skouras-and-others "showcase" in February and "One Man's Way" will also go then. "Russia" isn't slated until April.

This sudden spurt of product on the new "showcase" system could conceivably cause some head bumping. To try to avoid this, a couple of different tracks of theatres have been established within the same plan so that more than one pic, say one Universal and one UA, can play the RKO-Skouras etc. "showcase" at the same time. This system will involve several more RKO houses than originally envisoned but it is a way of preventing a log-jam, or at least its hoped that it will. What happens when several pix get to the circuit break at the same time isn't clear but one will presumably have to wait for the next to finish.

Another interesting aspect of UA's new-found relationship with RKO is that the circuit, along with several other chains, will also be playing some UA re-issues. On Feb. 5, for example, "Kings of the Sun" and "Mouse on the Moon" will open in over 50 N.Y.-area houses, among them 15 RKO theatres, plus Brandt, Skouras, Interboro, Randforce, Century, Fabian and others. Also included is Loew's which has been playing some UA re-issues lately, but now joins RKO and the rest.

All of this activity will keep things pretty busy among the local circuits. Booking has doubtless already become something of a problem, with some theatres falling into the "showcase" scheme on one occasion and back onto their respective circuits the next. Not only has "showcase" caught on, it has done so with a vengeance and UA is taking deep bows for the victory.

Maybe Another Name?

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Because of the similarity in names of the Hollywood Foreign Press Assn. and the recently formed International Press Photographers Assn., Sven Rye, prez of the former has sent out letters to the press emphasizing that there is no connection between the two groups.

The International Press Photographers Assn. is a private business enterprise for active press photogs in Hollywood.

Vogel's Payoffs; O'Brien's $111,600, Weitman's $87,100

Joseph R. Vogel, whose employment contract at Metro expired Aug. 31, 1963, had at his option to collect $425,360 as lump sum settlement, in lieu of lifetime benefits of $40,000 per annum, from the company's retirement plan. The former president also is to receive $1,000 weekly for each of the number of weeks he was employed since Oct., 1956.

Robert H. O'Brien, new prez, is being paid $111,600 yearly, and his annual benefits upon retirement are estimated at $25,862, plus $500 per week for the number of weeks of employment since May, 1958.

Proxy statement lists Robert M. Weitman, v.p.-production chief, as receiving $87,100 annually and Benjamin Melniker, v.p.-counsel, $65,000.

Editorially Deplores Denial to Americans Of Own USIA Footage

Columbus, O., Jan. 28.

U. S. film audiences should be allowed to see motion pictures produced by the U. S. Information Agency for foreign audiences, said the Columbus Dispatch editorially.

"More than $6,000,000 annually is spent by USIA to develop films depicting various aspects of American principles of democracy, yet the taxpayers who furnish the money are not allowed to see them," said the Dispatch.

"Most recent film is 'The President,' a documentary dramatizing the continuity of American government after the assassination of President Kennedy. Now here is a film that would make a constructive contribution to Americans—ideal for showings to church and club groups—and especially before young people. But because of this USIA embargo, they will not have this privilege. Why is this situation allowed to exist? We believe some steps should be taken immediately to eliminate this unrealistic prohibition."

GALATEA FILM TO AIP

"Captive City" Players May Make Some Personals

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

American International Pictures has acquired U.S. and Canadian distribution rights to "Captive City," starring David Niven, Ben Gazzara and Martin Balsam, from Galatea Films of Italy.

National release date is set for June 10. Film's stars are expected to make personal appearances for key opening dates, according to prexy James H. Nicholson.

12-NABE TAKE OF $493,503

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Film tradesters here are anticipating a firstrun "showcase fever" following 20th-Fox's smash success with "Move Over Darling." The picture has grossed $493,503 in its first four weeks in 12 nabe and outlying theatres, the largest total tally for a like period of time and number of houses in Windy City exhibition history.

With the exception of a few minor demurrers, almost everyone is happy with the plan, not the least of which are the houses which played "Darling," several of which outgrossed the Loop deluxers for the same period.

Surprisingly, despite the fact that "Darling" took nearly $500,000 out of the total number of picture dollars available, Main Stem biz was little affected by the bypass, and downtown tallies were considered "normal" for the season and pictures playing. The 20th philosophy as articulated by Chi branch manager Ray Schmirtz is: "If you bring the pictures to the people, more people will go to the theatre." Although, it's a bit risky to accept this generalization as a rule on the basis of the "Darling" trial, it's also equally hard to dispute.

At the other end of the exhibition spectrum are the 40 houses who will get the picture on Feb. 7. The tale will be told at the ticket window of these smaller houses, but conversations with several chain owners showed them to be optimistic about the prospects. The owners of the small houses were almost universally displeased with earlier "A-run showcase" plans, wherein a picture played a Loop deluxer, then went into 12 to 20 perferred theatres for its first subrun before its was available to the rest. At least in the firstrun showcase, the small houses are second in line and not third.

What remains to be seen is the effect of a series of nabe firstrun showcases on Loop biz. This in turn is dependant upon the availability of a sufficient number of heavyweight pictures sufficient to withstand the drain away from the mainstemmers. A possible compromise would be to include a Loop house in the showcase circuit.

Should the showcasings continue, prospects are good for a revitilization of nabe theatre biz. It would follow that investors would look more kindly on construction of new houses in the neighborhoods and a lot of the older houses would be encouraged to refurbish.

The only negative response heard was from Jack Clark, prexy of Allied Theatres of Illinois. Clark concedes that the "Darling" showcase was a spectacular success, but thinks that the terms for the second run are too high. Unlike Schmirtz's "onward and upward" attitude, Clark believes that there are only "x" amount of dollars to be taken out of the neighborhoods, and that the second run houses should be given greater consideration.

'VICTORS' INTO HONOLULU

Honolulu, Jan. 28.

"The Victors" (Col) will have its Hawaii sendoff Feb. 5 as a March of Dimes benefit at the downtown Princess theatre.

Some 300 seats are offered at $10 a ticket with all others priced at $5.

Revolution-Within-Revolution: United Artists Induces Exhibs To Share in All of the Sell

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

A largely overlooked facet of "Premiere Showcase," the much-emulated pioneering scheme of United Artists, is the influence upon cooperative advertising practices in the metropolitan New York market. Prior to the inaugural of selective "firstrun" patterns, joining Broadway, East Side Manhattan, nabe, suburban and exurban situations, it was extremely difficult to persuade outlying theatres or circuits to share in exploitation costs. Whatever contributions to advertising were made were minimal and confined to newspaper space alone.

As a sample of former custom in the market, a circuit might agree to pay, say, $3,000. But under the traditional truism that the dailies were the frontline of sell, only the dailies were figured in. Almost any request by a distributor, United Artists or any other, for additional appropriations to cover radio or video drew a nix. In short, exhibitors were pretty closed-minded to supplemental campaigns although the trade has generally agreed for a long time that for certain types of features the air media was almost mandatory to reach the potential ticket-buyers for such entertainments.

United Artists was able, starting nearly two years ago, to induce theatres and circuits participating in "Premiere Showcase" to take the fish-hooks off the promotional bankroll. The total advertising strategy is now covered by cooperative funds.

Partners in the special dates, which average three weeks, multiple firstrun at advanced admissions, are invited to huddle with United Artists merchandisers. Stress is put upon the fact that all may criticize, demur or suggest and UA testifies that the theatremen have come up with some very valuable ideas. In certain instances, where an individual theatre feels that a given newspaper or radio station is useful, it may be added to the media recommendations from which it was originally omitted.

Under the United Artists plan, the participating theatres agree to contribute 4% of the "Showcase" gross to the advertising fund. This works out at a substantial net increase in available advertising budget.

While the distributor and the theatres are still in process of thinking through the lessons of their experimental period, it seems definitely established that the horizons of showmanship have been widened and that envigorating new breezes are blowing away the cobwebs of outdated policies.

There appears a trending to a relationship of equality between distributor and exhibitors. If the ratio of 50-50 is ultimately accepted as trade practice on "Showcase," or special, handling a quiet revolution-within-a-revolution has to be taken into account. It should be remembered that distributors were, in the recent past, demanding 90% terms because they alone bore the brunt of not only financing the negative but financing the marketing, too.

Stern Steers Scribes Skits

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Leonard Stern has been named producer-director of the Screen Writers' 16th annual awards dinner, to be held March 9 at the BevHilton, co-chairman Allen Rivkin and Christopher Knopf disclosed. Stern will supervise the event, and the more than 30 scripters in the Guild readying skits, blackouts and satiric material for the annual event. This is the first combined awards dinner of the screen and tv-radio branches.

Awash in Smoke; Cigarets as Stock Screen 'Business'

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.

Kap Monahan, drama critic of the Pittsburgh Press, tipped producers in his column that they ought "well consider a clamp-down on the free advertising given to cigaretes for half a century or more."

Discussing the effect on tv over the recent government ciggie exposure, he referred to "The late Gable and Bogart (who) between them inhaled from an astronomical number of cigarets in their screen scenes, the latter acquiring a fatal cancer of the throat and the former a victim of heart failure."

"Both in sophisticated and gangster movies," he continued, "the consumption has been enormous—for a gunman's moll simply was not believable unless a cigaret dangled from her sensuous mouth. And at the cocktail parties the air is blue with cigaret smoke."

"When boy and girl hold a tete-a-tete, he always lights on up for her, before lighting his own. Ah, so gay, so debonair, so care-free—the smoke spirals lifting from tempting ruby lips."

Morey Marcus As Gotham Anchor Man for 20th-Fox Far East Supv. in Tokyo

Morey Marcus is resigning as Far East rep for Cinerama to hold down the Far East desk in the 20th-Fox homeoffice in New York. As previously reported, his counterpart in the field is Geza Polaty, Far East supervisor. Latter leaves N.Y. this week to make his headquarters in Tokyo.

Marcus' appointment is part of the overall reorganization of the 20th overseas sales operation, whereby key territories are to be supervised by execs in the field, backed by homeoffice counterparts. Francisco Rodriguez was earlier named Latin American supervisor in Mexico City, with Karl Knust on the L.A. desk in N.Y.

Prior to joining Cinerama, Marcus was associated in the Orient with Paramount, Republic and Metro.

Says Exhibs Duck Promo Burden

Robert S. Ferguson, ad-pub v.p. of Columbia Pictures, let loose with a blast against exhibitors last week, charging them with failing to ante up for promotional expenses.

Hosting a press conference, Ferguson said Col, for one, spends beaucoup money in driving home the message to the public about individual pictures, and the exhib "just sits back."

Ferguson displayed numerous copies of trailers for theatres and television, along with press campaigns, by way of showing how Col goes all out in merchandising.

On the other side of the coin is the exhibitor, said Ferguson, who simply relies on the distrib ad-pub department and the local field exploitation representative.

20TH'S FRIGHT PACKAGE

Take Over Iselin-Tenney Doubles In Horror

Indie production firm of Iselin-Tenney Productions has sold its shock film package of "The Curse of The Living Corpse" and "The Horror of Party Beach" to 20th-Fox. Latter will put the pix into release in April.

Both films were made on the East Coast by producer-director Del Tenney, with Alan V. Iselin, Albany exhib, as associate producer. Tenney also scripted "Corpse," while the script for "Party Beach" was written by Richard L. Hilliard.

L. A. 1st-Runs Spotty; 'Bed' 26G; 'Jones' Still Mighty With $34,000, 'Tree' 18G, 'Charade' Sharp 21½G

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

While saturation booking has been regular feature of firstrun release here for many years, it continues breezy pace this week although biz generally is spotty. Take in a total of 107 houses, including 28 regular hardtops and 79 nabes and drive-ins, utilized in multiple-booking spreads, should hit a good $692,900, of which a nice $428,000 is credited with coming from the multiples.

Of new bills "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed" heads the pack with slick $180,000 in 31 situations, including sizable $26,000 in four regular hardtops. "Comedy of Terrors" looks like $133,000 in 24 spots, including a fair $5,000 at Hillstreet. Both "Great Escape" and "Caretakers" are in for Academy consideration but both are lightweight for reissue dates.

"Tom Jones" still is terrific at $34,000 in three houses. "Charade" is rated smart $21,500 at Chinese in fifth.

"Capt. Newman" looms flashy $15,000 at Holly Paramount. "Under Yum Yum Tree," for 27 sites, is rated rippling $147,000 in second week and stout $18,000 in four hardtops.

It's getting to be a familiar story here that Loop newcomers are reduced to a minimum. There's only one downtown fresh entry currently, "The Ceremony," and it's just okay at Academy. For a third successive week, the Orpheum has legit stageshows.

"How West Was Won" is great in 47th week at the Cooper. "Charade" shapes wow in fifth round at the Mann. "Strait-Jacket" looms hefty in second State week. "Cardinal" looks lofty in sixth at the Lyric. Return of below zero temperatures and bad snowstorms hurt weekend biz.

Estimates for This Week

Academy (Mann) (1,050; $1.25-$1.50) — "Ceremony" (UA). Slow $3,000. Last week, "Who's Been Sleeping My Bed" (Par) (3d wk), $5,000 in 10 days.

Avalon (Frank) (900; $1)—"Naughty Shutter" (Indie) and "Trial and Error" (MGM) (subrun). Mild $1,000.

Century (Par) (1,300; $2.10-$3.50)—"Cleopatra" (20th) (31st wk). Mild $4,500. Last week, $5,000.

Cooper (CF) (905; $1.25-$2.50)—"How West Was Won" (MGM) (47th wk). Great $11,000. Last week, $10,500.

El Lago (Carisch) (800; $1)—"Riff Raff Girls" (Cont) and "Pickup in Rome" (Cont). Satisfactory $1,100.

Gopher (Berger) (1,000; $1.25-$2.50) — "Move Over, Darling" (20th) (5th wk). Smash $6,800. Last week, $7,400.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; $1.25-$1.50)—"Cardinal" (Col) (6th wk). Lofty $5,000. Last week, $6,000.

Mann (Mann) (1,000; $1.25-$1.50)—"Charade" (U) (5th wk). Wow $7,000 or over. Last week, $9,000.

Park (Mann) (1,000; $1.50)—"Fantasia" (BV) (reissue) (2d wk). Nice $3,000. Last week, $4,000.

State (Par) (2,200; $1.25-$1.50)—"Strait-Jacket" (Col) (2d wk). Hefty $9,000. Last week, $12,000.

Suburban World (Mann) (800; $1.25) — "My Name Is Ivan" (Shore). Slow $1,400. Last week, "Pair of Briefs" (Davis), $1,800.

World (Mann) (400; $1.25-$1.50)—"Prize" (MGM) (5th wk). Solid $5,000. Last week, $5,200.

Warners' "My Fair Lady" will premiere at New York's Criterion Theatre Oct. 21 as a benefit for the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital Fund . . . Otto Preminger and David Wolper sewed it up for a documentary billed "Anatomy of a Movie," looking into Prem's production of "The Cardinal" and set as a Wolper NBC-TV airing Monday (3) . . . Metro and New American Library going hand-in-hand with a paperback based on Emyln William's play' "Night Must Fall." Film company is coming out with a cinematic replay as a major item on its 1964 sked and William Drummond was commissioned to novelize the work for New American . . . Anatole de Grunwald out west this week for MGM huddles about "Yellow Rolls Royce," which he's to produce in England and France . . . Producer Ivan Tors production of "Americanization of Emily" now getting down to the wire, ought to be ready for preview within a few weeks . . . Carl Foreman went back to London, with agenda including premieres of "The Victors" in Paris and Rome.

St. Malachy's Church on 49th and 8th is now offering Sunday mass at 5:30 in the afternoon—so there's no excuse.

Arnold Picker, UA exec v.p., sporting chin wiskers these days. The growth has special meaning for pub chief Gabe Sumner who, at the time he was hired at UA was wearing some carefully-nurtured face fur of his own. He was given the job with the proviso that he shave his beard because it wouldn't jibe with the company image. Some things seem to have changed—but too late for Sumner unless he wants to start all over again.

Adolph Zukor, Par board chairman and industry elder statesman, completely recovered after a bout with the flu which had hospitalized him briefly . . . David Picker, UA v.p., in Hollywood on production business . . . Jeff Livingston, Mirisch ad-pub v.p., back on the Coast after a few days' visit to Gotham and huddles with UA execs . . . Leonard Lightstone, Embassy Pictures exec v.p., to Rome this week, having postponed the trek last week due to press of business . . . UA's picture deal with the Beatles, England's excitement-provoking rock 'n' roll combo, is for three pix, not just the one that the company has been touting.

There are occasions when the New York Times simply will not be rushed into printing all the news that fit. In its coverage of Elizabeth Taylor's grievances vs. Eddie Fisher Saturday (25), the Times wound up blandly: "The actress, who reportedly plans to marry Richard Burton, the actor . . ."

Funny coincidence: On Friday last a truck labeled Glen Alden Farms, sub-billed milk, eggs, cheese and poultry, was stopped outside the Palace Theatre. Just seemed to be staying there. There's another Glen Alden outfit which owns RKO Theatres, of which the Palace is a unit. No kin.

Ruth Zucker, daughter of Dynamic Films' Nathan Zucker, engaged to Robert Wald, of BevHills, UCLA law student.

Dell, which has just published the paperback reprint of Calder Willingham's "Eternal Fire" (Vanguard), tieing up with Charles K. Feldman's Famous Artists indie buy of the novel.

Richard Coffey, Life's promotion director who oversees the special projects department which made the short, "The Directors," isn't missing any bets. He's arranged to have the short booked into Grand Central Station's Newsreel Theatre starting today (Wed.) in hopes of getting the trade of the Mad. Ave. commutor types who pass through the station twice daily . . . Meanwhile, Nat Greenblatt, of Life's special projects, is planning four more . . . Skouras Theatres has converted its Japanese Gardens on upper Broadway, a one-time film house which has been closed for 30 years, into a new rehearsal hall for legit companies. "Foxy" has already used it and the "Any Wednesday" troupe is there now.

Vet industryite Arthur L. Mayer, resting at home these days on doctor's orders, was forced to miss the IFIDA dinner last week . . . 20th-Fox veep Joe Sugar on a short vacation . . . Larry Tajiri, film and drama critic for the Denver Post, in town catching up on the legit scene . . . A local indie production company, Trans-World Associates, says it plans to make a feature based on John Gerstein's novel, "The Speculators," in Big Town this spring.

Reade-Sterling hopes to preem its "Black Like Me," which completed shooting in the south recently, this spring. There also are hopes to get it to the Cannes film fest . . . In an unusual move, Janus Films, the distrib, and Rugoff Theatres agreed to allow all patrons in free yesterday (Tues.) when "The Fiances" opened at Cinema II. Move was designed to bring the public's attention to the work of the highly praised Italo director, Ermanno Olmi, whose first feature, "The Sound of Trumpets" (Il Posto), opened here earlier to fine reviews and no biz.

Local avant garde filmmaker Gregory Markopoulos, whose feature, "Twice A Man," took a $2,000 prize at the recent Belgian fest of experimental films, has just wound editing of a short, "The Death of Hemingway," and started a new feature, "Prometheus" . . . Anthony Quinn gets the role of the pirate captain in 20th's "A High Wind in Jamaica," to be made as an Eady Planner in Britain and the West Indies starting in June . . . Times Film execs hoping for an Oscar nomination for the song, "More," featured in their English language version of "Mondo Cane."

Twentieth-Fox foreign people say that the $25,800 theatre gross racked up by "Move Over, Darling" in its 21 days at the Grand Theatre, Bangkok, is the biggest gross on any 20th pic there in two years—with one exception, the boss' production of "The Longest Day" . . . Salvatore Billitteri, AIP's east coast production supervisor, to Rome to oversee some upcoming overseas pix . . . George Skouras' daughter Odyssia and Federico Quadrani, who have been running an art gallery in Rome since 1957, yesterday (Tues.) formally opened their second, the Gallery Odyssia on Manhattan's E. 57th St.

Walter Reade Jr., chairman of Reade-Sterling, off on a swing through London, Paris and Rome. He's expected back about Feb. 10 . . . Munio Podhorzer reports his Casino Films will U. S. preem the latest film version of "Die Fledermaus" Feb. 7 at the 86th Street Theatre here. The Strauss operetta had its first stage presentation in Vienna just 90 years ago and, apparently, is still going strong.

Joe Levine and George Weltner back from London where they attended the world preem of "Zulu," which Levine's Embassy distributes in the U.S. and Canada while Par handles it for the rest of the world . . . a benefit preview of "Becket" has been set for March 10 at Loew's State by the Collegiate Division of the Friends of the Maimonides Institute for Exceptional Children . . . Tom Tryon inked for the lead role in Otto Preminger's upcoming "Harm's Way," having played the title role for the filmmaker in "The Cardinal."

Ruth Furst named national director of group sales for "Fall of the Roman Empire" . . . "Easy Life" has its first post-preem date since opening in New York Feb. 1 at the Exeter Theatre, Boston . . . latest cast additions to "Where Love Has Gone" include Jay Adler and Lisa Seagram . . . Feb. 19 has been set as the New York opening day for "Seven Days in May" at the Criterion and Sutton Theatres . . . the Billy Wilder duo of "Irma La Douce" and "Some Like It Hot" will now open at the Brooklyn Fox Theatre on Feb. 5, instead of the date previously stated by UA.

Claudia Cardinale presented with the annual "clown of the year" award by the Italian Orfei Circus, as a result of her portrayl of a clown in a sequence of Samuel Bronston's "Circus World" . . . Robert Buckner set to script "The Crusades" for producer Robert Arthur and Universal . . . Don Murray in New York last week for some promo work for UA's "One Man's Way" Norman Vincent Peale biopic . . . Nancy Kulp and Del Moore into Jerry Lewis' "The Patsy" at Par and David Raskin inked to pen the score . . . "Captain Newman, M.D." awarded Photoplay's gold medal kudo for April.

Samuel Bronston shipping several of the chariots used in the filming of "Fall of the Roman Empire" from Madrid to New York for exhibition in the World's Fair . . . Joe Levine's "Contempt" named best French pic of the year by a group of French journalists, La Nouvelle Critique de la Cinematographie . . . Anne Francis tapped for the lead femme role opposite George Maharis in John Sturges' "Satan Bug" . . . Paramount is circulating three different tv featurettes to plug "Seven Days in May."

Martin Rackin, Par production exec, back in Hollywood after confabs in Gotham, London and Madrid . . . "How to Murder Your Wife" is now a joint production of Jack Lemmon's Jalem Productions and George Axelrod's Charleston Enterprises, with Lemmon starring, Axelrod writing and producing, Richard Quine directing, Gordon Carroll as exec producer and UA releasing . . . Gregory Peck, accompanied by Universal eastern pub manager Paul Kamey, yesterday (Tues.) completed a couple of days' promotion in Washington, D.C., for "Captain Newman, M.D."

Robert Mitchum, Carroll Baker and others now in Kenya on location for "Mr. Moses" plenty worried about happenings in neighboring Uganda and Tanganyika, where mutiny and revolt have been spreading, and they're reported working with bags packed in case flight is necessary . . . Joe Levine's "Zulu" opened big in London at the Plaza Theatre last Wednesday (22) pulling in a hefty $1,172 for the preem day . . . Princess Irene, daughter of visiting Queen Fredericka of Greece, joined editors of over 65 Gotham high school newspapers for a special screening hosted by Gregory Peck last week of "Captain Newman, M.D."

Ernest Sands, Allied Artists general sales manager, back in his Gotham office after a two-week tour of the company's exchanges and meetings at the Hollywood studio . . . Samuel Goldwyn Jr., who recently lectured at Princeton on film production etc., will also speak at Yale Drama School, Washington & Lee and the U. of Virginia later this year . . . Robert Steuer, Cinema Distributors of America exec v.p., back in his Mobile homeoffice after confabs in Los Angeles. Company's general sales manager Clayton Pantages and eastern sales manager Ross Wheeler are in Boston currently, huddling on upcoming releases.

Ingrid Thulin flies in from Stockholm this weekend to attend the Monday (3) opening of her latest pic, Ingmar Bergman's "The Silence." Pic is Sweden's official entry for the foreign language Oscar . . . Elia Kazan will write his own Greek subtitles for "America, America" . . . Ken Adams was art director on "Dr. No," not Syd Cain as noted in last week's VARIETY list of potential Oscar nominees.

Estate Trouble

Italian production of "The Bible" has been a long time a-coming and a Manhattan gagster, who might be dismissed momentarily, offers an explanation.

He states that producer Dino De Laurentiis ran into trouble in getting the various literary

AA's 11 Ready For Market By July

Allied Artists has 11 features completed and skedded for release in the first seven months of 1964. This list includes the debut of Ace Films, production arm of the American Congress of Exhibitors, which helped back Philip Yordan's production of "Thin Red Line," a summer release.

All of the 11 are in final composite print form except for one, on which scoring starts next week and delivery is expected the first week in March. The batch doesn't include "Soldier in the Rain," which has been out since December and which is just going into general release now.

In addition to "Red Line," Allied has "A Yank In Viet-Nam" skedded for issue this month. For March, the company has two pix ready, "Never Put It In Writing" and "The Strangler." April will see the release of "The Naked Kiss" and in May AA will issue its recently-acquired "Train 349 From Berlin." Skedded for the summer along with "Red Line" is another recently-purchased effort, "Station Six-Sahara" which stars Carroll Baker and will have the benefit of following her toplining role in "Carpetbaggers," a Paramount release.

Besides these, Allied prez Steve Broidy related that the company is presently in negotiation for several other pix. In addition to those listed, other films like "The Secret Door," "A Life In Danger," "Master Spy" and "Clash By Night" will be released. The latter two are new acquisitions.

Allied also still has Samuel Bronston's "55 Days At Peking" in release in Japan where it has been doing hefty biz. Also, the same producer's "El Cid" was recently released in Mexico for the first time and is likewise doing nicely, Broidy pointed out.

Paperback Novelization Still A-Growin'

May Be 20% of Publishers Production—Tie-Up Helps Both Ways—Writers Get Cash Advance and %

Making and marketing of paperback novelizations of films has become a major business within the past few years. Hardly a film of even medium proportions is released without some kind of book tiein. Trend had progressed to the point where, according to some estimates, 15% to 25% of most publishing houses' monthly paperback output is keyed in one way or another to films.

This has now become a big factor for both pubs and filmmakers. Publishers aren't just handed the novelization rights these days either. This used to be the case but no more. Paperback rights range as high as $10,000 in some cases but the publisher stands to make this back and more. Upwards of 300,000 to 400,000 film novelizations have been sold on one picture alone, at prices of around 40c or 50c. This could mean as much as $2,000,000 grossed by but one title.

All of this take doesn't go to the publisher, of course, but he stands to make a tidy sum all the same. As fare as the initial rights deal, arrangements vary, depending on who ownes the property. Sometimes the studio controls it, another time its the producer and another its the writer himself. In any case, one third of the publication loot goes to the writer, according to the Screen Writers Guild contract.

These cases all, of course, apply just to originals. In the case of a film being an adaptation of a book, a publisher already controls the publication rights. In the case of the adaptation of a stage vehicle, the situation varies but often there is a book pegged to the film version. It is interesting to note in this connection that scripts published in paperback film editions generally don't fare too well unless a major playwright is involved. In most cases, however, the novelizations make out pretty well.

Once A Giveaway

An interesting aspect to the picture is that less than five years ago, film companies used to give the rights away to get a book version of one of its pix in the stalls. Today they are sought by all publishers of paperbacks and at some fairly handsome fees, as indicated. Likewise, all film companies seek book tieins for their product. It has proved good business for both.

It has also proved good biz for writers. Novelization scribes usually get royalty and a cash advance of about $2,000. Some, if they have any name value of their own, may collect twice that amount. All get bylines, as well as the benefit of hefty ad-pub campaigns that these novelizations generally get, plus prominent display and readership across the country.

Interesting too is the fact that both parties feel that they are getting the better end of the deal—a highly unusual thing in the picture biz at least. The book pubs feel that a film novelization benefits them more than it helps a picture. Film folk say, however, that the added co-op advertising and saturation in areas that they would normally not have the time or knowhow to reach is unestimateable in its value.

Some of the mutual advantages are spelled out by Knox Burger, editor of Gold Medal Books, a Fawcett Publications division. The company is presently working on "Fall of the Roman Empire," among others, and Burger points out that Fawcett will take house ads in all of its various magazines to plug the picture and the book, as well as preparing special bus cards, point of sale displays and other aids. Additionally, the pub circulates ad mats to newspapers and does several other things. It is estimated that it would cost the film companies at least twice as much as it does this way to accomplish the same saturation.

Tie-In Front Covers

The books have special covers which feature the film involved and, in some cases, its stars prominently. Additionally, there is often a photo section inside containing stills of the picture and there may be various other definite pic plugs. The major advantage, Burger points out, is that the books reach many areas well in advance of the film itself and serve as a fine teaser for the picture. The editor noted that often more books are sold before a pic is actually shown than after.

Burger said that in practically all cases if a pic is successful, the book will be. A bad film will hurt the book sale, he opined, but the reverse isn't necessarily true, he feels. Anyway, the idea isn't to turn out an unsatisfactory product in either medium. There is often a conflict between pubs and film companies or others connected with a given pic over billing and the preparation of the cover material but, by and large, the transition from screen to novel is fairly smooth and the results are very often gratifying for all concerned.

For the paperback book world, these film novelizations have come to supplement the "genre" books which used to be the mainstay of the field like the westerns, crime stories and such. With tv, these books have been hurt because so much of the material is on the tube. It is also definitely felt by the pubs, Burger said, that these books build readers and return buyers, so the idea has worked out very well for pubs, despite spiraling costs and various internal problems in the book industry itself.

As far as the picture biz goes, no film company will go into distribution with a major film without a book tiein if it can help it. Such associations are considered money in the bank. It was this type of thing that developed with the music biz regarding soundtrack LPs of scores from pix. This has been successful but not as consistant as the book bit, which has become one of the most successful cross promotions devised between the picture biz and another medium.

QUOTE TICKET-TAKER IN 'CARDINAL' COPY

Minneapolis, Jan. 28.

At the start of its loop's sixth week, the Minnesota Amusement Co. (United Paramount circuit) Lyric used unique large newspaper ads for "The Cardinal" (Col).

The ads included a large full length photo of one of the theatre's elderly ticket takers standing by his ticket receptacle and easily recognizable by those who attend the Lyric.

Ads quoted the ticket taker as saying, "I have never before seen so many people come back to enjoy a movie a second time!" The words issued from his mouth.

It's the first time ever here that any showhouse ticket taker has had his picture used in a newspaper ad. The idea was that of the circuit's publicity department.

Rod Steiger pitched by Galatea Films in Rome to star in "The Ragged Saint," which Franco Rosi will direct in Rome and Athens this summer.

Las Vegas Revisited

solo, in that department, at Hank Henry's al fresco Silver Slipper marathon burleskery).

There is an attitude that the other showcases for names encourage the four revue-tab musicomedy hostelries in self-defense. Meaning that it's less competition for the names which the Sands, Riviera, Desert Inn, Sahara and Flamingo consume.

Doing biz when caught were Eddie Fisher at the enlarged and very attractive new Crystal Room of the Desert Inn, backstopped by an elaborate Donn Arden revue which, with stagehands, musicians et al., is said to run $65,000 weekly as against Frederic Apcar's Casino de Paris (starring Line Renaud) imported show at the Dunes. However, the built-in-Glasgow (Scotland) "Octuramic" stage (designed by Sean Kenny) represents a $250,000 investment. This is a series of mobile elevated miniature stages, like hugh petals, on which sundry components of the revue perform. It's a far cry from the Dunes "Minsky's Follies" policy and is giving Major Riddle's casino-hotel beaucoup action. He, too, incidentally, has one of those skyscraper auxiliary hotel wings already rising high above the Vegas sands—always a striking silhouette against the arid background. The Riviera, the Stardust with its mammoth Convention Hall, and Jack Entratter who plans to do ditto at the Sands, all have that convention influx in mind.

The Two Buddys

The manner in which Buddy Hackett and balladeer Buddy Greco work in tandem augurs a continuous coupling of the pair. Hackett, who has been chided in the past for indigo stuff, was well nigh impeccable with a standup monolog which, in the al fresco backgrounding of Las Vegas, could have been broader in concept. Instead, he utilized his Jack Paar showcasing as springboard for some Far East comedic recall and played his unique brand of wit against Greco's "Eyetralian" ancestry. It not only made for a warm, human—and clean—comedy routine, but brought Greco to the fore for authoritative delivery of lines, straighting, and not a little funstering on his own. This is what cues the Hackett-Greco booking as a good coupling for future. More than incidentally Greco looms as a Vegas star of the near future on his own with very effective vocal charm delivery.

Not For Cyd

Glamorous man-wife teaming of Tony Martin and Cyd Charisse was doing okay at the Riviera (in which he is a limited partner) but all-American girl Miss Charisse doesn't need that strained indigo doggerel of "modern" nursery rhymes which Sammy Cahn-Jay Livingston-Ray Evans fashioned for her, among the rest of an otherwise tiptop "Two Act Revue", as the presentation is billed. It's truly a double-featured headliner. "Baby" Pingitari's "residence", for the six-week Nevada divorcement bit, was seemingly an inside joke with Martin. The personable songster has never been in better voice. Martin cavalcaded old and new ballads to as big a score as the MGM star's song-and-danceology. No joke was headwaiter Richard Hubert's mishandling of at least one VIP reservation, with post-scripted regret by Martin who, as owner of some "points" in the Riviera operation, has vested interest.

Carol Lawrence and Jackie Mason were clicking in tandem at the Flamingo, and the Sands had a tri-parte show with George Gobel, Tommy Sands and Roy Castle until Dean Martin (& "Friend"), yclept Sinatra, bowed in for one of those in-and-out "guestings". (Boniface Entratter states that whenever Martin, Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr. appear, whoever is the "official" headliner gets the full tariff; the others, as "guests", do it for laughs, until there is a reciprocal opportunity).

$30,000 Ceiling

Incidentally, on headliners' salaries, the $30,000 figure appears to be the fixed "ceiling" for the tops of tops. The other emoluments of VIP services, suites and the like, are merely fringe benefits as befits the headliner.

Monte Proser has had to forego his two-in-one tabloid musicomedy policy and has scrapped "High Button Shoes." Dick Shawn only does "Anything Goes" until Pete Marshall (& Tommy Noonan) comes in to succeed, when Shawn shifts to Broadway to take over Zero Mostel's "Forum" role.

The double-Equity scales for the chorus and other considerations forced Proser to one show—otherwise it was an innovation to have the same cast do two different tab musicals, keyed of course to attract renewed trade to dinner or supper shows. Patricia Marand, Eileen Rodgers, Irving Benson, Pat Finley, Benny Baker et al. are a competent company. Benson, erstwhile burleycue second banana, is a funny fellow who may suddenly be "discovered" in the right Broadway musical.

Dick Shawn's Gloss

More than incidentally, Dick Shawn has come a long way and looms as a fullfledged versatile comedy talent all his own. His "Cockamamie" (new rock 'n' roll) "dance" conception is a devastating satire on current mores and a minor classic all its own.

Bands In Lounges

There is a big band vogue in the lounges this semester along with pop vocalists. In the sundry spots, both on the Strip and downtown in the Fremont St. environs, are tunesters and thrushes like Jerry Wald, Jan Garber, The Gables, Don Cornell, Della Reese (splitting the lure with the bellydancers), DeCastro Sisters, Esquivel's crack orch, Tex Beneke, The Modernaires, Freddie Bell, Roberta Linn, Paula Kelly, Buck Owens, Billy Gray & The Nuggets, Dukes of Dixieland, Big Beats, Paul Gilbert, Ray Anthony, Frank Yankovic. Jacques Foti's Continental chansons makes The Sultan's Table at the Dunes a popular windup spot, and Woody Herman and his new "Herd" have put the Castaways (opposite the Sands) on the map as a winduppery for the show bunch. Sammee Tong & Patti Kim and the Sun Spots head an Oriental floorshow. Spot has no casino.

The Reno-Tahoe area also has a flock of bands in its lounges, viz, Les Brown, Orrin Tucker, Ted Fio Rito, Shep Fields, Tony Pastor, Harry James et al.

Even TV Now

The greater security of Vegas is evidenced by the shows running longer and longer—in some instances too much so—and the pit bosses seemingly know that the longer they sit the more anxious they'll be to stand up around the crap tables.

Many of the new suites in hotels now also have tv sets. Theory, heretofore, was to give them creature boudoir comforts but a tv set might induce them to stay in the room and not come and gamble. Tain't so. Next thing you know they'll put clocks into the casinos and raise the blinds so that the players will know whether it's dark or daylight.

Nicotine Humor

The cigaret smoking scare cued both Fisher and Buddy Hackett to use the same joke: "I don't smoke, and I don't drink, and, well, two-out-of-three ain't bad!"

Fisher introduced Walter Wanger at ringside as the producer of "Cleopatra". Singer has wisely eluded any reference to Liz and the one crack he made was slick—he congratulated "the upcoming marriage of those two famous people (pause) Ethel Merman and Ernie Borgnine".

Incidentally, in Hollywood they threw a farewell bash for the newlyweds-to-be on the Borgnine set. Miss Merman offed to New York for Bell Tel's (Cole Porter) spec, and thence London's Talk of the Town (nitery), her first pro booking there other than a Command Performance.

Somehow Las Vegas brings out the best in fashionplating among the men. Tony Martin's After Six formals tieup is w.k., and he now has a new conceit—the handkerchief breastpocket is cut on a bias, as against the conventional cut. The boys will probably pick this one up fast.

Hollywood studio hairdressers commute regularly to Vegas for $15, $20 and $25-a-crack haircuts for the males—but concededly they produce "boff coifs" for the stags. To keep the nut down, two or three of the fops pool the plane fare and kindred overhead for some favorite barber imported from Hollywood.

Heller Still Thrives

Vet emcee Jackie Heller hosts the bar at The Sands (wife Phyllis has been having a rough siege with ruptured disks) and Nicky Blair is ditto at the Flamingo, Jackie Fields at the Tropicana, and Henry Dunn is a permanent LV fixture.

Ben Goffstein, who exited The Mint, downtown gambling saloon (he was long at the Riviera), is eyeing a South American revue for Las Vegas importing.

Liston's $1-a-Head

Sonny Liston draws a VIP turnout every afternoon at 2 p.m., at $1-a-head, not to mention color photos at $5-a-crack (three for $10), showing auditors (kids, in the majority) "sparring" with the champ. He does his stuff in the Thunderbird's nitery, same room where Monte Proser's tab musical performs, and occupies one of the two bungalows on the hotel grounds. Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy was in the same layout some time ago. Preceding Liston's fistcuffs with sparring partners he does warmup and "training" calisthenics. There is also shown a film of his past ring engagements. Liston in closeup is an imposing behemoth who gives the most ardent of Cassius Clay's partisans the shudders.

VARIETY correspondent Forrest Duke's twice-nightly spiel is a daily log of wha' hoppened the night before; where he went, with whom, celeb anecdotes and the like. Jack Kogan on KSHO-TV has a sort of Las Vegas "Open End" postmidnighter, coming on al fresco, following the feature film, and running at will into the a.m. with offbeat celeb interviews. Vegas of course is a built-in fountainhead for show biz names. Kogan does his stint live, sans tape, and seemingly gets all the personalities he can handle.

Since Hank Greenspun's Las Vegas Sun fire, he prints in L.A. and air shuttles the paper over from the Coast printery. He was offered the competitive Review-Journal's press facilities but nixed the deal. Greenspun is currently hassling with the underwriters on insurance payoff; he's also slated for a Prentice-Hall biog "as told to Ed Reid," co-author of "Green Felt Jungle." Reid is certainly no hero with the Strip bunch.

Sabbatarianism A Stubborn Foe

Winnipeg, Jan. 28.

Sunday movies, a hot issue of the last legislative session, will again occupy the limelight when the legislature reconvenes Feb. 6. City of Winnipeg will again ask the province to amend the city charter to allow Sunday exhibitions. The request, when made last year, was deleted from a bill which was passed allowing Sunday sports.

Legislature failed to permit all the Sunday recreation activities which were approved by a majority of Winnipeg ratepayers in a referendum held two years ago. Application will ask for the balance of items contained in the 1963 bill, which originally called for Sunday sports and movies and ended up as sports only, with legit theatre, cinema and concerts dropped, and the time for sporting events limited to four hours.

Drive for Sunday performances is backed by the Manitoba Motion Picture Exhibitors Assn.

Hardy Weekends Only

Buffalo, Jan. 28.

Five area drive-ins usually open through the winter are advertising Friday, Saturday and Sunday shows only.

Heavy snows and inclement weather is responsible for the restricted schedules.

RUNNING MATE SPIKED TOUTING OF 'LILIES'

Columbus, O., Jan. 28.

Interfaith Committee for Better Entertainment in Columbus wanted to recommend "Lilies of the Field" for children but was stymied because of the booking of an adult film, Judy Garland's "I Could Go On Singing," on the dual bill. So, at the suggestion of Samuel T. Wilson, theatre editor of the Columbus Dispatch, Rosemarie Yurasek, chairman, sent a letter to him in which the committee's position was explained. Wilson printed the letter.

"It is with great expectations that we anticipate 'Lilies of the Field'—coming at a time to add its contribution to the growing racial and religious understanding," said the chairman. "Lilies of the Field" had firstrun here at the Beechwold, Boulevard,

President—Jaroslav Steyn, Film Editor of the Czechoslovak newspaper, New York Listy.

Vice President—Kazimierz Zajac, Editor of the Polish newspaper, Czas.

Recording Secretary — Alice Melikian, writer in the Armenian Herald.

Executive Secretary (for 23d year)—Sigmund Gottlober of the American Foreign Language Press.

Roustang Goal: Add Compassion To Documentary

"'Mondo Cane'—with heart."

That's the way French producer Pierre Roustang last week described his projected "dramatic documentary," "Secret Paris," due to start production in Paris this spring. The producer, whose most recent film, the sketch pic called "The World's Greatest Swindles," will be released by Reade-Sterling here this spring, was in town to set release plans for "Swindles" and perhaps to gain R-S interest in "Paris."

Roustang, who feels that episodic, or sketch, pix may have already reached the peak of their popularity, sees his "Secret Paris" as revealing those aspects of Paris—ranging from shocking to inspiring—of which most Parisians, to say nothing of foreigners, are unaware.

As examples of potential material, he mentioned the abbatoirs of Paris, visited every early morning by nuns seeking leftovers for charity institutions. Also the gendarme raid on the poules in the vicinity of the Paris Opera one night each year before the annual gala, with the poules packed away in special cells located inside the Opera to prevent them from soliciting the classy cliente either before or after the performance on stage.

His idea, says Roustang, is to show the good with the bad, the happy and the sad, and, in effect, reflect the variety and texture of Parisian life. He feels "Mondo Cane," on the other hand, was devoted solely to the proposition that life is beastly, period.

By the term "dramatic documentary," Roustang means to indicate that some of the footage will have to be especially staged or "re-enacted." This, obviously, would have to be the case with the seg dealing with the Opera's special detention cells for the local prosties. He doubts whether Opera execs would allow his cameras in to film the actual location.

Producer is counting on a budget of about $500,000 for the pic, rather high, he admits, but not when you consider that he plans to film enough material for five distinctively different versions.

His idea is to shoot enough material for a three-hour film, which can be edited down to different 90-minute versions designed to meet the interests of audiences in France, Italy, the U.S., Germany and Japan.

Turning to a discussion of the two sketch pix he has made (in addition to "Swindles," he produced the earlier "Love at 20"), Roustang noted that the format had provided the only way in which a young producer such as himself, without unlimited resources, could afford top, high-priced directing talent. This was especially true in the case of "Swindles," whose segs were made in France, Holland, Italy, Morocco, Japan, under various coproduction arrangements which brought the overall budget down considerably.

Additionally, he said, some types of stories are best treated in short form. In his latest film, for example, he said the ingenuity of the swindles themselves are the important thing, not the characters who pull them off. A feature length film utilizing any one of the swindles shown in his sketch pic would inevitably have to be about something more profound than the swindle itself.

Producer returned to Paris last week to continue preparations on his "Paris" pic.

The Family Corral

Madrid, Jan. 28.

Spanish screen actress Mari Luz Galicia has starred in three made-in-Spain westerns. After "The Vindicator of California," "The Shadow of Zorro" and "Zorro's Revenge," Mari Luz recently stated:

"I am not elated with this type of film for the good reason that an actress cannot compete with a cowboy. In this respect I disagree completely with my husband."

Her husband is Eduardo Manzanos who is now actively preparing another Mari Luz-starrer, "Owen's Testament," in which she will star with Ray Milland's son, Dan. Manzanos has been coproducing oaters on his Western Main Street location set (20 miles outside of Madrid) during the past two years. He partnered last year with producer-director-star Ty Hardin in "Boudine."

'TOM JONES' CREATORS REPEATING FOR U.A.

British director Tony Richardson and writer John Osborne, whose Woodfall Productions turned out the highly-successful "Tom Jones," will now make "Charge of the Light Brigade." United Artists will release.

Picture will be produced and directed by Richardson from an original screenplay now being penned by Osborne. Filming is skedded to begin immediately after the script is completed. The project furthers the collaboration between the two which has turned out, in addition to "Jones," such pix as "Look Back in Anger," "Saturday Night and Sunday Morning" and "A Taste of Honey."

Actually, the team's Woodfall Productions has a multi-pic deal with UA and "Brigade" will be but one of a few pix they will make for the distrib under their indie company set up. Oscar Lewenstein will be associate producer on "Brigade."

Mann Plays 'Tom Jones' In 400-Seat House

Minneapolis, Jan. 28.

"Tom Jones" (UA-Lopert), on practically every 1963 "10 best pictures" list has been obtained on top bid, firstrun, by circuit owner Ted Mann who owns four of the loop's eight firstrun theatres here.

He'll open it next month in 400-seat World instead of into one of his other three loop theatres having seating capacities of 2,800, 1,095 and 1,000.

According to his calculations, it possibly could run a whole year at the World—much longer than in any of the larger houses. World's regular after 5 p.m. adult admission is $1.50. It'll be tilted slightly for "Tom Jones," according to present plans.

IRINA DEMICH FILMS

Her Second and Third Vehicles Go Out Via 20th

Paris, Jan. 28.

Irina Demich, picked by producer Daryl F. Zanuck for one of the two principal femme roles in "The Longest Day," will co-star with Jacques Charrier in "Le Temps D'Un Amour" (The Times of Love), to be made as a Franco-Italian coproduction for release by 20th-Fox in France and all French-speaking territories. This will be Miss Demich's fourth film.

Her second, "OSS-117," a French production has been acquired by 20th for distribution in various parts of the world. Her third was the recently completed Ingrid Bergman-Anthony Quinn starrer, "The Visit," also a 20th release.

"Le Temps" is skedded to start production here in May, with Bernard Javal as producer.

Town Can't Impose Revenue Boost In Guise of Police Need; Theatres Win

By SID BENJAMIN

Scranton, Jan. 28.

Two theatre chains operating six Scranton playhouses have won a legal battle to prevent City of Scranton from boosting theatre license fees more than 100%. Judge Otto P. Robinson of Lackawanna County Court handed down a ruling that an amendment to a 1930 ordinance, passed by Scranton City Council last year, is illegal. It would have raised the license fee from 20c to 50c per seat annually.

In a seven page opinion, the jurist branded the ordinance "a revenue-raising measure in the guise of police and safety regulations" and maintained it is not authorized by Pennsylvania laws. Judge enjoined the city from collecting the increased fees and from enforcement of the measure by arrest, fine, imprisonment or otherwise.

Successful legal attack was launched by Meco Realty Co., which operates the Comerford, West Side, Rialto and Roosevent Theatres, and Penn Paramount Corp., which operates the Strand and Center. The cinemas, operated by Meco, contain 4,478 seats, involving $2,239 in fees under the amendment which was nullified. Those operated by Penn Paramount have 1,650 seats, involving an $825 payment.

Judge Robinson found that the ordinance did not require regulation, inspection or supervision by the city for the safety and protection of the public.

"The ordinance is not regulatory, supervisory or protective and its purpose is to raise revenue," the jurist held. "Yearly inspections of each theatre, taking 1½ hours, are made by an employe of the Fire Department. More cursory inspections of 15 minutes each are made five other times during the year. Such inspections are not a special service to theatres but are made in connection with similar inspections of schools, churches, factories, plants, stores and similar establishments as part of general fire protection practices in the city.

"No sanitation, refuse disposal or similar municipal services are furnished to the theatres. No police services other than that afforded to the general public is furnished to the theatres in respect to banking of receipts, traffic control and protection of children attending performances.

"Plaintiffs have reimbursed the city for repairs made to fire extinguishers and have paid the wages of special police officers assigned to duty on their request.

"The ordinance in this case is a revenue-raising device, rather than a protective regulation in the interest of the public and, as such, is of course invalid.

"In Pennsylvania it is a well-settled proposition that a municipality may not impose a revenue tax under the guise of a police regulation. Ordinance exacting the payment of license fees, which are in reality revenue-raising measures, rather than laws to regulate and control operation of business in the public interest, will be stricken down.

"A license fee imposed in exercise of the police power must have for its purpose only the defraying of the expenses of implementing the regulation. And it is essential to the validity of the fee that the ordinance imposing it also prescribe the standards of public protection which the supervision is designed to maintain.

"Municipal services rendered at rare or occasional intervals at nominal cost are general in character and payment therefore is contemplated in the levy of taxes on real estate. License fees are valid only where they relate to a service that is in addition to those general in nature, and such fees may not be disproportionate to the cost of the regulation."

The ruling is a boon to the two theatre companies, who have found television competition unusually damaging because of the poor economic condition of this depressed area of high unemployment.

of acts of sexual intercourse between the two principal characters."

Charles A. Brind Jr. was counsel for Regents. Harry L. Rand argued for the film distributor. Following their filing of briefs and viewing of the film here, the jurists interrogated both lawyers.

Regents attorney said "Any male or female viewing that picture in the audience would have a feeling of sexual stimulation, would become sexually excited. I don't think there is any person that can view that act without getting excited. The Regents are correct in finding that the act (on the screen) is verboten."

However, the Board is not "clairvoyant." Brind pleaded with the court that the Regents not be placed in the position of determining "This sexual intercourse is all right; another isn't."

"I hope," he added, "that the Regents have some kind of a rule laid down that they can hang their hat on, when viewing these (kind of) pictures."

Answering Brind's statement that "The Board of Regents is in a difficult position," Rand remarked, "The position of the Regents is difficult, because the Board, as counsel for the board speaks for it, is (running) against the decisions of this court and of the United States Supreme Court."

"The Board of Regents' ruling is not based upon the entire film, but rather on two portions of this film. This can not stand, under standards enunciated by this Court and by the U.S. Supreme Court of the United States."

Plaintiff has agreed that "A Stranger Knocks" is one of artistic and literary merit; filed affidavits by producer Jacob Jacobsen who said, "Neither the film as a whole, nor any portion of it, is obscene. The two questioned scenes are vital to the story told; an essential part of it."

Rand explained the "symbolism" of the second scene. He started—in answer to a question by Judge John Scileppi — on an explanation of the first sequence, but further interrogations cut short Rand's time — before the clock ran out. Chief Judge Desmond set 40 minutes as the span for arguments. Brind took 17; Rand, 23.

Plaintiff's attorney pointed out that Brigitte Federspiel had been voted Tuesday night (21) by the Independent Film Importers and Distributors of America, at its annual dinner in New York as "the best actress," for her work in "A Stranger Knocks."

He cited exhibitions of the film in Washington, D.C., Toronto, Can., and in western cities, without any reported protest or criticism. An affidavit by Edward Svigals, vice president of Trans-Lux Films, to this effect was incorporated in the "record," Mr. Rand underscored.

He also quoted from the review of "A Stranger Knocks" by a Catholic Danish weekly, which specifically referred to the two scenes. Judge Desmond pressed Mr. Rand on the point: was the Catholic paper's comment a reflection of the official Catholic viewpoint?

The New York lawyer replied in the negative, adding that Catholic publications' reactions on such matters were usually "deftly," carefully, expressed.

The U.S. Supreme Court, Mr. Rand continued, had held "appeal to prurient interest" means "a shameful, a morbid interest."

"Anyone looking at the particular portions of 'A Stranger Knocks' would not be aroused to shameful or sex," Rand asserted. "Of course, they are sexually exciting. Every day, things we see and say are sexually stimulating."

There is nothing "filthy or smutty" in "A Stranger Knocks," Rand claimed. "To have a sexual act depicted," if it is "deftly" handled, is not the same as to be "confronted with a work that is 'hard core pornography.'"

To Judge Desmond's interrogation whether there is not a difference in impact between "books-magazines and motion pictures," Rand replied, "The motion picture has a greater impact than a book. On the other hand, I know people who would rather read and are affected by what they read more than by what they see."

"We argue that no part of this film is obscene. We argue that the ruling below must not be set aside because the film is not obscene. The Regents did not look on the film as a whole."

COMPO WANTS PICTURES TO ESCAPE DUCAT TAX

Council of Motion Picture Organizations will embark shortly on a campaign to include motion picture theatres in pending federal legislation which would abolish the admission tax of 10% on hard-ticket film engagements. This was disclosed as it became known that agitation is on, and indeed has reached Senate Finance Committee proportions, for the elimination of such levies on legit and even burlesque houses.

Exhibs for the most part are ired that the projected legislation excludes them out. The tax relief they got a few years ago was fine at the time, but now there are more and more roadshow pictures subject to the excise. And if legit can have it, why not them? they ask.

Major problem facing them, via COMPO, is whether to seek out public support, as was done in past, or just lobby on Capitol Hill.

Crews Go Idle, New WB Goes Up

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Sound stages at Warner Bros. studio will be refurbished and modernized during the "indefinite period of production inactivity," per E. L. DePatie, veepee and studio manager. Also during the shooting lull, construction will be underway on the previously announced building that will become headquarters of Sinatra Enterprises.

WB expects to invest more than $1,500,000 in the new construction and plant improvement program to be carried out this year, according to DePatie. Cost of the new office building is figured at $500,000 with refurbishing of stages at upwards of $1,000,000.

Actually, work on refurbishing stages began more than a year ago, at which time studio estimated that overall investment in the program would total some $5,000,000 when completed. This activity was at virtual standstill throughout most of last year as studio's stages were taken up with filming of feature pix and tv shows.

As noted, WB has inventory of more than $65,000,000 in completed features including $17,000,000 in "My Fair Lady," on which filming was only recently completed. Decision to suspend temporarily additional new filming was taken in order to play-off inventory and bring it to "position more normally carried by the company," DePatie explained.

"Sex And the Single Girl" was canned last Wednesday and no other feature is firmly set for starting, at this point. It is the first production inactivity at the studio since 1953, and the wheels won't totally grind to a halt as over next several months five or six "Temple Houston" vidpix segments will be made, producer Richard Bluel's unit remaining till that is done.

However, the commissary closed, and of course there will be layoffs in all departments affected by the production lull. Only four flax will remain — department head Max Bercutt, his assistants Bill Latham and Carl Combs and Mort Lichter.

Just when feature production will resume cannot be pinpointed, of course. The propertly most likely is "None But The Brave," possibly in March, or the Delmer Daves production of "Affair at Villa Viorita" or the Henry King production, "Undefeated."

Tony Richardson and John Osborne will produce "Charge of the Light Brigade" for United Artists release under their Woodfall banner, former to handle producer-director reins.

More Bulldog Trophies

London, Jan. 28.

Recent VARIETY box, "Yale No Handicap," which announced the appointment of Gerald Ayres as assistant to Mike J. Frankovich, has reminded Larry Kramer that three Yale students of the class of 1957 have made it good in the film industry.

Apart from Ayres, the trio includes actor James Franciscus, who has the lead in "Young Bloodhawk" and is starring in a tv series, and Kramer himself, who is script and story editor in Columbia's London office.

Snowfall Cost U Probable Yule 'Charade' Record

"Charade" wound up its seven weeks at Radio City Music Hall with a total take of $1,202,286, missing by just $1,000 the Hall's all-time high for a Chirstmas show, set by U's Operation Petticoat," which played seven weeks during the 1958-59 holiday period and tallied $1,203,293.

In fact, the only thing that kept "Charade" from setting the new record was the snowstorm which crippled Gotham biz for a couple of days two weeks ago. Music Hall estimaters figure that the storm cost nearly $15,000 at the boxoffice and that would have been much more than enough to make "Charade" the new champ.

Elsewhere around the country, the Stanley Donen production which stars Cary Grant and Audrey Hepburn, is rolling up hefty biz. Same goes for Canada and Universal still expects the picture to easily wind up among its all-time top grossers.

Producer Steve Parker in from Tokyo to set up shop at 20th-Fox for "John Goldfarb, Please Come Home," first of six he'll do in next 18 months.

IATSE'S CASH IN HAND PLUS GENERAL ASSETS

International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees has total assets of $1,620,999, according to a report of the union's board of trustees, as recorded in the winter issue of the IATSE Bulletin.

Actual cash balances, as of Nov. 12 when the audit was taken, were $356,388 in the general and special class B funds. Also, there are securities at cost value amounting to $1,092,194. There are other assets of $15,386 represented by cash on hand, loans to locals and interest receivable.

Also included in the total is $157,031 in the transportation and per diem fund. This amount is for the purpose of defraying the transport and per diem expenses of delegates to the 1964 national convention, to be held this summer in Louisville, Ky.

Cinerama Vague In San Antonio

Martin Theatres, based in Columbus, Ga., operator now of several Cinerama theatres in the south, has suspended plans to run a new C'rama house in San Antonio. From San Antonio, president E. D. Martin is quoted as saying the project is "being held in abeyance."

The information in New York is that C'rama regards Martin as being out of the picture in San Antonio and negotiations for a C'rama outlet in that city are now going on.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Image building is becoming a major activity at Paramount Pictures these days. The company is presently engaged in a campaign to re-establish itself as an aggressive, modern operation and to shake its late years conservative reputation. Several things have been done to this end lately and the latest is the plan to hold the first of a projected series of periodic management conferences with the trade and financial press.

The inclusion of both financial and trade press in the program is reflective of the company's dual emphasis in the campaign. Not long ago, Par held a special screening for the financial community at which it not only presented the main attraction, "Seven Days in May," but also unveiled a special film presentation about its upcoming product, punctuated by comments by ad-pub v.p. Martin Davis.

Company has for some time been out to show Wall Street that it is on the move. The result has been that Par is being touted strongly by financial tipsters and its stock has surpassed its 1963 high and is still climbing. In the trade, too, Par has been demonstrating its newfound muscle with a series of major deals involving some large-scale product, scheduled for production and distribution through 1965.

An exact date has not yet been set for the first management press conference but it is expected that it will be held in the very near future. Scheduled to appear will be prez Barney Balaban, exec v.p. George Weltner and Davis, as well as other Par execs perhaps. There is also the possibility that Joseph E. Levine and Otto Preminger, two of the principals in recent deals the company has made, will also be on hand. One of the things holding up the exact scheduling of the session is organizing the availability of all of these people.

"More," the Riz Ortolani theme from the "Mondo Cane" pic score, was inadvertently omitted last week from the VARIETY boxscore of tunes in the running for the Academy Award this year. The song, which is published by Edward B. Marks, has picked up 58 disk sides to date in both singles and album workovers.

Carl Foreman returned to his London base over the past week with apparently little accomplished in the way of his crusade for a subsidy for United States producers.

Foreman fought for the principle of something akin to England's Eady Plan on the theory that a kickback to American filmmakers would encourage more production. In talks to exhibitors and opinion-makers at various universities he also made the point that a government endownment would place the Yanks on an equal footing with competitors from abroad.

Reaction in the U.S. was two-fold. Producer-distrib reps in the United States would prefer that an equity be established via elimination of the incentives to producers abroad. They much would prefer discontinuance of all kinds of quotas in terms of playing time for localized foreign product and boxoffice taxes which would go back, in part, to the producers.

American exhibitors, it was discerned, are not high on the idea of adding to the b.o. tariff with a tax which would be shared by themselves in addition to producers and distributors.

The AFL-CIO "union label" drive, nothing new, has been getting increased support for the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. Boothmen around the country have been increasingly successful in getting a 15-second "union operators" identification flashed on the screens of the house in which they work. Per recent issue of the IA Bulletin, orders for the 22-ft. film strip containing the IA emblem and the sentence "the pictures shown in this theatre are projected by union operators, members of the International Alliance etc." have been increasing. National Screen Service distributes the film strips on request, at $2 per strip plus postage.

P.S. To 'Variety' Best-Grossers

(READER REACTION TO ANNI LISTS)

Every year following publication in the Anniversary Edition of VARIETY's list of (1) top-grossing pictures of the year just ended and (2) updating of the all-time hits, the reader-critics take pen in hand. This year especially they center concern on why not an appraisal of foreign rentals, in addition to the domestic (U.S.-Canada) money accruing to the American distributors. The reason is that foreign playoff is involved beyond disentanglement. Pictures play for the most part six months later abroad than in U.S. Distribution patterns are different. Estimates are harder to check. Rule-of-thumb is that an American picture abroad will ultimately gross a little more than it does on the home grounds.

Despite the global success of Walt Disney product, Disney has been an exception to the aforementioned rule-of-thumb. Only one of his pictures, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," did better foreign than it did at home. The major point is that a Yank production is just about gauged upon its reception in the domestic market.

In another direction a correspondent, who identifies himself as an investor in various film companies, states that the $40,000,000 negative cost for 20th-Fox's "Cleopatra" is not appropriate as profit-loss line of demarcation because $6,000,000 was written off as loss in 1962. This, he opines, should bring the line down to $34,000,000.

VARIETY's observer replies this is like saying that Metro wrote off it's loss on "Mutiny on the Bounty" last year and everything that comes in now should be regarded as profit. Bookkeeping writeoffs are done for corporate keeping-our-house-in-order purposes. But when it comes time for sharing with the fiscal participants, such as anyone who has a piece of the profits, those earlier written-off losses will be considered in the final accounting.

A Sick Comedy Routine: Hoaxers Call E. M. Loew's Ex-Spouse With Threat

Boston, Jan. 28.

Hub theatre magnate E. M. Loew was reportedly kidnapped in a scare hoax which excited Boston, Cambridge and Milton police Thursday (23). After much confusion, "E. M." was found safe in Cambridge Probate court.

The kidnap scare began when the phone in the home of Mrs. Sonia Loew, his former wife, rang. A gruff voice told her to listen carefully and to follow instructions to the letter or Loew would be killed. The voice said she was to get a large sum of money and "come as you are" immediately to the parking lot behind a department store in Cambridge.

Mrs. Loew kept the man on the phone while she dialed an operator on another phone and had the operator listen in and relay a message to the Boston Police radio turret that Loew was being held by three men. Cambridge police raced four cruisers loaded with officers to the parking lot finding nothing there. Mrs. Loew called police as soon as the man hung up and told them Loew had business in Cambridge probate court where police found him safe and well.

Goldwyn Wins in U. S. Appeals Court

Action Dating Back to 1950 Partly Resolved—But Issues Still Unadjudicated

San Francisco, Jan. 28.

U.S. Court of Appeals here upheld a $300,000 antitrust damage award in favor of Samuel Goldwyn Productions and against 20th Century-Fox Film Corp. and three subsidiaries.

But the appellate court ruled that Goldwyn should be permitted to prove a claim for more damages against two of the defendents and sent the case back to the Federal District Court for a decision on that issue.

Goldwyn had asked $6,750,000 trebled damages when the case was first filed on May 16, 1950. He charged that he was the victim of a monopolistic conspiracy that had prevented fair competitive bidding for his films. He said that he had been deprived of a fair return on 28 pictures he had produced since 1935.

However, after the District Court held that under the statute of limitations Goldwyn's claims must be limited to only three years prior to initiation of the action, the pictures involved fell to seven. Goldwyn had sought $1,755,000 treble damages for these.

The defendents, besides the parent Fox company, were National Theatres Corp., which operates film houses in the middle and Far West states; Fox West Coast Theatres Corp., controlled by National; and Fox West Coast Agency, which buys and books pictures for Fox West Coast operations in four western states.

Appeals Court, in its 66-page decision, said that the damage claims would be allowed to stand against Fox West Coast Theatres Corp. and Fox West Coast Agency for the three years prior to the filing of the suit, but, the court said, the three year limitation should not be applied to 20th Century-Fox Film Corp. or National Theatres Corp. because they had been involved in a government civil anti-trust suit brought earlier in another federal court.

This earlier suit was not settled until the late 1950's and, while it was pending, the statute of limitations was suspended so far as affecting Goldwyn's actions against the two Fox companies, the court said.

The Goldwyn films involved in the current suit were "The Best Years of Our Lives," "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," "The Bishop's Wife," "Enchantment," "Roseanna McCoy," "My Foolish Heart" and "A Song is Born."

Liston-Clay at Arena

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.

The Sonny Liston-Cassius Clay closed circuit fight will be the first attraction of its type in Pitt's Civic Arena. Dan Rooney will promote and will offer 10,000 seats for sale, priced at $4 and $6. The Penn will also have a fight and will have 3,472 seats on sale.

Stanley and Gateway, the two other houses with theatre tv equipment, have not decided yet whether or not to take the fight.

Universal execs here say that "Charade" broke all single-day records for any theatre here Jan. 4 at the Piccadilly Theatre.

On that date, a Saturday during the picture's third week of release, a total of 10,203 patrons jammed the 1,500-house for the five performances This would mean that in addition to those who had seats, there were 2,703 standees.

Japanese Stake In Honolulu Biz

Honolulu, Jan. 28.

First downtown theatre project here in recent decades consists of an 850-seat, $500,000 showhouse that will replace the present 1,000-seat Kokusai Theatre. Latter house is earmarked for demolition as part of a mass redevelopment project.

New theatre will be built by Pacific Motion Picture Co., headed by Soichi Kimura, and will become the outlet for Japanese films released by Daiei Motion Picture Co., Tokyo. Daiei will help underwrite construction costs.

Showhouse will utilize Japanese-made projection equipment for both 35m and 70m product.

Kimura hopes to open the house in August or September, shortly after Toho of Japan's midtown 800-seat deluxer is opened. He figures a nearby 180-car metered municipal parking lot will solve nighttime parking problems.

The rival Nippon Theatre, owned by brothers Noboru and Satoshi Furuya, also is slated for demolition as part of the same redevelopment project but specific replacement plans haven't been firmed.

The Kokusai and Nippon, along with Consolidated circuit's Toyo and Kapahulu Theatres, are first-run outlets for Nipponese films. The Toho, of course, will stretch this to a total of five first-runners, which indicates the boffo biz Tokyo pix do here.

MANK REDEEMS 'CLEO'; GILMOUR'S 10TH BEST

Ottawa, Jan. 28.

Local bets were being made that "Cleopatra" wouldn't make Maclean's (and Toronto Telegram and CBC) critic Clyde Gilmour's annual "Best 10 Movies." But, while conceding "it is sometimes more ludicrous than gorgeous," he named it 10th "because director Joseph L. Mankiewicz did deliver a 'spectacular' much more urbane and adult than any of its wall-to-wall rivals except "Lawrence of Arabia'." He also gave the nod to Rex Harrison for "year's finest performance."

His "10 Worst": "Duel of the Titans," "Diamond Head," "Drums of Africa," "Girl Named Tamiko," "In the Cool of the Day," "My Six Loves," "Of Love and Desire," "Old Dark House," "Playgirls and the Vampire," "Spencer's Mountain."

Gilmour's "best actress" — Rachel Roberts in "This Sporting Life"; "best supporting actor" — John Huston in "Cardinal"; "best supporting actress" — tied: Patricia Neal in "Hud" and Margaret Rutherford in "VIP's." No. 4 in his "bests," incidentally, is "Charade"—"which has the laughter and excitement of Hitchcock without his sadism."

Newsweek on 'Bests'

Newsweek, issue dated Jan. 13, states that a listing of 10 best films "is usually a useful fraud" because there aren't enough features worthy of mention. But 1963 was different — seems that the product was better—and pix editor David Slavitt thereby provides his choices, as following: "8½," "Tom Jones," "America America," "Muriel," "Music Room," "Monkey in Winter," "The Trial," "The Critic," "The Easy Life" and "Hud."

Nick Ray Sees Chance To Make H'wood-Type Pic in Foreign Field

Paris, Jan. 28.

The way American director Nicholas Ray figures it, foreign filmmakers can just about come up with the same type of product as Hollywood. That is for general commercial pix though the big money for spectacles is rarer. But, under these conditions, he feels he can work anywhere that a script interests him.

He has been abroad for five years now, and made two costume spectacles for Samuel Bronston in Spain, "King of Kings" and "55 Days at Peking." Now he wants to do package deals on his own with the majors.

Depending on the script, they will be made where necessary, he claims now that the idea of runaway production is over, and pix are usually made where the locale calls for. He is working on a western with locally-based Yank writer James Jones, "Under Western Eyes," but it probably will be made in the U.S.

Ray is also updating an Ibsen play he hopes to do with Ingrid Bergman. He also has a musical item which he would like to do with Brigitte Bardot. Ray is still headquartered in Spain, but is due back here for further work with Jones and confabs with Misses Bergman and Bardot on his projects.

Ray still thinks Hollywood is the ideal place for a film when it calls for it because of its technical proficiency, but international outlooks force actual foreign exteriors if the plot calls for it.

WRITERS GUILD AWARDS DINNER SET FOR MARCH

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Invites to 2,500 members of Writers Guild of America West for their 16th annual awards dinner, to be held March 9 at the Bev Hilton, were mailed last week.

It's the first time the event will combine screen and tv-radio awards, 11 altogether. Screen categories are for best-written American comedy, drama and musical. Screen board will vote at its Feb. 17 meeting on the Laurel Award for Achievement, given annually "to that member of the guild who has advanced the literature of the motion picture through the years and who has made outstanding contribution to the profession of the screen writer." Joseph L. Mankiewicz won last year.

Six tv-radio awards to be given are divided into these categories: best dramatic anthology script, any length; best dramatic episodic script, any length; best adaptation from material not originally written for tv, any length; best comedy-variety script, any length; best documentary, any length; best radio script, any length.

Third Valentine Davies award will be given "to that person whose contribution to the motion picture community has brought dignity and honor to writers everywhere." Guild council will pick the winner at its meeting the end of this month. Mary C. McCall Jr. was the first to win it, and Allen Rivkin was last year's winner.

Thirty-four comedy-satire scripters are currently working on the gridiron-type sketches and musical numbers.

Exhib-Projectionist Add 7th Link to Chain

Dayton, Jan. 28.

Former projectionist John Holokan and exhibitor John C. Keyes have leased the New Salem theatre here from Stravos T. Vradelis, thus bringing to seven the number of nabe theatres in their H & K Enterprises.

Holokan and Keyes set up their burgeoning circuit a year ago in the belief that the chain will give them more buying power and a chance to pick up some firstrun product. Chain stresses family type pix.

H & K's leasing of the New Salem ends the show biz career of vet showman Vradelis, whose fight against juvenile delinquency and support of various community projects earned him much praise in the Dayton area.

The Comedy of Terrors

ity, but beyond its irresistible attraction for younger children the film is limited in audience range and appeal.

Too many producers have been known to spoil the froth. This picture boasts no fewer than four who fall roughly into that exalted category: "producers" James H. Nicholson and Samuel Z. Arkoff, "co-producer" Anthony Carras and "associate producer" Richard Matheson, who is also credited with the screenplay. Matheson's scenario is rich in satiric promise, but realizes its potential only momentarily and fitfully.

Story has to do with a tippling mortician (Vincent Price) who, in arrears on his rent, takes it upon himself to "create" his own customers. He gets his comeuppance thanks to a combination of three unlikely factors: the virtual indestructibility of his Shakespeare-obsessed landlord-victim (Basil Rathbone), the bizarre romance that erupts between his mistreated, would-be coloratura spouse (Joyce Jameson) and his unwilling, tone-deaf henchman (Peter Lorre), and the unexpectedly effectual intervention of his senile father-in-law (Boris Karloff).

In order for a film of this nature to be effective and fully satisfying to more than the most childish audience faction, it must be developed and executed with a deft touch so that the comic-satiric approach does not crush the horror-suspense aspects of the story. No such deftness is displayed here. Under Jacques Tourneur's heavy-handed direction, "The Comedy of Terrors" is neither sufficiently comical nor terrifying.

As deliciously grotesque a gallery of histrionic rogues as could conceivably be assembled on one Hollywood sound stage has been herded together for this project, making the result all the more disappointing. Evidently they have all been instructed to ham it up with all the uninhibited thespic flourish they can muster, and they have followed their orders extremely well. Alas, too well. Comedy such as this should be allowed to ooze out of a subtly wry approach. Outrageous overacting only serves to smother the satiric essence. Poof, goes the spoof. In addition to the aforementioned players, others who cavort briefly across the screen are Joe E. Brown, Beverly Hills, Paul Barsolow, Linda Rogers, Luree Nicholson, Buddy Mason and a cooperative cat named "Rhubard."

Workmanlike assists to the production have been fashioned by such craftsmen as cameraman Floyd Crosby, editor Anthony Carras, art director Daniel Haller and composer Les Baxter. Tube.

Les Parapluies De Cherbourg

(The Umbrellas of Cherbourg)

(FRENCH-COLOR-SONGS)

Paris, Jan. 28.

20th-Fox release of Madeleine-Parc-Beta Films production. With Catherine Deneuve, Anne Vernon, Nino Castelnuovo, Marc Michel, Ellen Farmer, Mireille Perrey. Written and directed by Jacques Demy, with music by Michel Legrand. Camera (Eastmancolor), Jean Rabier; editor, A. M. Cotret. Previewed in Paris. Running time, 95 MINS.

Genevieve	Catherine Deneuve
Guy	Nino Castelnuovo
Mother	Anne Vernon
Cassard	Marc Michel
Aunt	Mireille Perrey
Madeleine	Ellen Farmer

It takes nerve to make a pic in which all dialog is sung when tuners rate low at the b.o. in France. "West Side Story" was the exception here. Also, there is no dancing and this is not a filmed operetta or opera. Picture is an original, eye-filling, fetching affair that appears to have the legs for both arty house and even more general situations abroad provided its way is eased with tact and taste.

Jacques Demy went to the port town of Cherbourg to make this simple tale of a boy and girl in love. He is depicted leaving for the army, with said girl pregnant, and she giving in to her mother's blandishments and marrying a well-heeled suitor. He comes back and finally marries a childhood friend and they see each other briefly one Christmas night as both go back to their regular lives.

Seemingly banal and sentimental on the surface, director-writer Demy has avoided these aspects by tasteful handling and the right balance in emotion, compassion and narrative. The feeling develops from the pic as the singing allows the tale to be taken on its own terms.

Thus, once everybody singing their lines is accepted, this takes on a sort of fabled feel. Pic becomes touching without being mawkish, simple sans being trite, and lovely to look at. So the lovers seemingly floating down a street is quite acceptable as are the gorgeous colors that can make tawdry interiors attractive and real streets almost surreal.

Michel Legrand has supplied a richly tuneful score that still is not ostentatious and also serves as a sharp counterpart to help story points and enhance the moods. The bright sets and the excellent color work are also assets.

Catherine Neneuve, a winsome looking type, that other directors have forced to act, here is allowed to be herself. She etches a fine portrait of a 16-year-old in love. Nino Castelnuovo has presence and poise as the boy. Others are all fine in their supporting roles. The dubbed voices, done in playback and recorded before shooting started, are all fitting for the various characters. They have the folksy, natural air that make them vibrant.

The fragile story has the slice of life, romantic look of the pre-war Hollywood comedies, but possessing a feeling and beguiling flair all its own. It looms a film that could make its way everywhere on its intrinsic rightness in atmosphere and tone. But it will need a helping hand via proper selling. Critics and word-of-mouth should help, too.

It is something old, in a disarming story, which has been done up in a bright, new package. It has fine production dress.

20th-Fox is distributing this pic in France, Belgium and Switzerland. Film has already won the top critical award of the year, the Prix Louis Delluc, even before release. It will probably break the jinx on musical pix on its home grounds. The title stems from an umbrella store owned by the girl's mother. Mosk.

Lost Job He Held 34 Years When House Sold

Toledo, Jan. 28.

Two union officials have been named defendants in a $200,000 suit filed by projectionist Joseph I. Seligman of this city. Named are Harold A. Plumadore, former business agent of Toledo Motion Picture Operators' Union, and Art Partis, former assistant business agent, who is now B.A.

Seligman, a member of the union since 1911 and employed at the Princess Theatre, first-run downtown Toledo house, for 34 years prior to Aug. 30, 1962, charged that the two officials failed to return him to his job there when house reopened Dec. 25, 1962.

Julius Jacob, counsel for Seligman, said the suit is for $7,000 in wages already lost, plus damages for future loss of wages and compensation for embarrassment. The Princess had been operated by Balaban & Katz of Chicago, until Sept. 1, 1962, and now is under lease to the Armstrong Circuit of Bowling Green.

Par Toll Gear to Britain

Ship Equipment Used In the Canadian Test at Etobicoke

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

International Telemeter has begun shipping feevee equipment from Etobicoke, Toronto, to England, in preparation for the three-year pay tv test to begin in the United Kingdom early next fall.

Etobicoke is the Toronto suburb where Telemeter is currently conducting its feevee experimental test. Approximately 2,700 feevee units will be shipped to England altogether, 2,000 to go to London, and 500 or thereabouts to the Midlands, for the test to be held under aegis of British Telemeter Home Viewing Ltd., International Telemeter veepee in charge of engineering William Rubinstin said.

Movement of the units from Canada, expected to be completed in March, will in no way affect the pay tv operation there, and was planned long ago, the exec said.

General Postoffice in Britain, which sets the rules and regulations for the upcoming three-year test since it controls communications, has granted licenses to British Telemeter and four other companies — Choiceview Ltd., backed by the Rank org. and Associated Rediffusion; Tolvision Ltd., with the backing of Sir Isaac Wolfson and Hambro Bank; Pay TV Ltd., run by British Relay Network; and Caledonian TV, owned by Scottish investors. British Telemeter is backed by Paramount, Granada, British Lion, the Manchester Guardian and the Rothschild interests.

Each company has been given a limited area and a specific number of units for the test, and will have two locations, one in London, one in the north of England. Each firm will have its own network which it will program.

Louis White is general manager of British Telemeter, and Robert Allen is board chairman.

This will be the first overseas test for feevee, and results of it are expected to dictate the British government's position on the question of pay tv.

California Exhibitors Seek 400,000 Voters To Oppose Tollvision

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

California theatre owners won the right to circulate petitions in their campaign to outlaw tollvision in the state. Attorney general's office issued title to the initiative move. It's now up to the exhibitors to get 400,000 signatures to qualify for a place on the November ballot. A new outfit in Frisco, Pay-TV Inc., has joined Subscription TV of Santa Monica (Pat Weaver's company) in fighting the initiative move.

Weaver called the latest move by theatre owners "a ridiculous proposal and another attempt to oppose progress."

Gerry Sherman Exploiteer Chief at Allied Artists

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Gerry Sherman has been appointed exploitation manager for Allied Artist, handling national tieups, radio and television promotion, West Coast field exploitation and all facets of promotion of firm's product.

For past five years Sherman has headed his own company. In this field he handled all Paramount's L. A. and Frisco radio-tv placements and promotion.

UTILITY HELPS SELL WINTERIZED DRIVE-IN

Winnipeg, Jan. 28.

Few prairie Canadians are so hardy they wish to spend an evening at a drive-in theatre at mid-winter temperatures. To meet this resistance the Manitoba Hydro-Electric Board, government owned public utility, in a sophisticated and subtle attempt to woo both patrons to the theatre and increase its own business, made a pitch in large, well drawn ads.

Hydro suggests visiting Odeon-Morton's new all-weather ozoner in suburban St. James—"a small portable 1500 watt electric heater that is brought into your car with the sound speaker circulates warm air evenly, without your having to run the car engine."

Jug Lazy Burglar

Keene, N.H., Jan. 28.

A 19-year-old local youth, who has been jailed for six months after admitting burglaries at the Latchis Theatre Dec. 5 and 18, was living "near his work"—the Latchis Block, according to police.

Actually, the defendant, who reportedly confessed taking $26.50 and $12 in cash, was not sentenced for the theatre thefts, but on a mittimus issued when he was convicted of a restaurant break here, Oct. 21.

LABOR TERMS FOR TECK; BUT STILL DARK, NO PIX

Buffalo, Jan. 28.

Labor dispute between Loews Theatre Inc. covering Shea's Teck Theatre and the Motion Picture Theatre Operators Union has been settled but the theatre continues dark, now reportedly for lack of suitable film product.

Teck has been closed since early last Fall. Advertised Christmas opening was cancelled because of the wage demand. New York executive Bernard Diamond of Loew's was instrumental in working out a two-year settlement pact, on undisclosed terms.

No reopening date has yet been set.

Performers Union's Toll Scale

AFTRA Limits Fee to Four Showings—Principals $335—Walk-ons $100, 90-Minute Program Unit

RKO General has signed a pact with the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists covering special programming to be broadcast in Hartford. Contract limits the number of showings of any particular program to four and establishes minimum scales for 90-minute shows ranging from $335 to principal performers, soloists, duos and announcers on camera to $100 for walk-ons and extras. Specialty acts will get $500 per performer for four showings of a particular program. An additional 5% will be paid to the AFTRA Welfare & Pension Fund by RKO General.

This is the second AFTRA pact in the area of pay-tv, the first being signed in 1959 with International Telemeter Corp., covering shows broadcast by cable. The RKO General deal will run for the remainder of the temporary FCC license granted to the company in Hartford.

KNOXVILLE'S HARDTOP: FIRST IN 35 YEARS

Knoxville, Jan. 28.

Promotional frills marked the opening of Knoxville's New Riviera Theatre. It's first new main street theatre to open since 1929.

Mrs. John Duncan, wife of the Mayor, cut the ribbon opening the new house because her husband is in the hospital. Vice Mayor John McCallie made an address praising the management on construction of the new $325,000 theatre.

Furnishings, including new easy-type seats and all interior construction were contracted and built by Wil-Kin, Inc., Atlanta, Ga.

Charles Simpson from Atlanta, president of Simpson Operating Co., was present. Hugh Rainey is vice president and local Simpson manager. Rex Raney, WBIR-TV, acted as emcee for the event.

Elvis Presley set for Edward Small's "Frankie and Johnny" as first of two pix he'll do for United Artists, other still unset.

Spain Hints New Laws Won't Affect Pictures Already In Production

Madrid, Jan. 21.

Sharp cutback in production as a result of low subsidy classifications and a pending legislative overhaul of film aid, has spurred indirect government assurances that new laws will not affect film production initiated prior to enactment.

Film scribes Alfonso Sanchez and Vizcaino Casas presented the government's viewpoint at length last week. Both are members of the industry sub-committee within the State Film Council, now formulating changes in state aid policy and regarded by almost all film sources as a dead cinch to replace outright subsidies with percentage returns from boxoffice performances.

Sanchez advised filmmakers to ponder coming reforms. "The introduction of boxoffice subsidies," he stated, "may well be the 'moment of truth' for many producers. The disappearance of the old ratings would bring forth a new TAG—'audience support,' and that is the one film producers will have to live with in the future."

According to Vizcaino Casas, reforms will become official early in the spring. Legalite as well as scribe, Casas disqualified the prevailing report that reforms would retroactively affect pix in the mill prior to official promulgation. He spelled this out to say that all films presented for aid debates prior to the change in law would be classified and subsidized by current standards.

Within the industry, however, the feeling is one of caution. Between the present classification board trend towards niggardly ratings and the unknown factors of boxoffice percentage subsidies, there is little expectation that producers will line up to petition for shooting permits.

Japan Govt. Urges More Voluntary Censoring Of Tele, Pix, Literature

Tokyo, Jan. 21.

The Prime Minister's office has urged stronger voluntary censorship of tv, films and reading matter in response to what was said to be stiffer public demand for such change. A report submitted to a recent cabinet meeting asked that tele shows depicting excessive brutality or sex, glorifying gangsters or containing vulgarity should either be eliminated or moved to late hours.

The report also said that cinemas are showing too many pictures appealing to baser emotions, with advertisements also offending. Imports were said to be worst offenders. It was asked that pix receive closer editing and be restricted to adult viewing in some cases.

The report also deplored the high numbers of sex stories and unsupported exposes in weekly mags. It also cited war stories in children's mags and "sex education" material in women's periodicals. Stressed was the preference for voluntary censorship rather than government intervention.

Bilbao Exhibs to Drop Late Night Screenings

Bilbao, Jan. 21.

Bilbao film exhibitors are preparing modification of a filmgoing tradition—elimination of the late night screenings departure from the practice of two shows, one early evening and one night, is a result of film patrons refusal to head for cinema salles at 10:30 p.m.

Deserted hardtops have prompted exhibs to eliminate the late shows five nights a week and revert to the dual sessions only over weekends. Film circuits are reported in favor of the new plan, but would keep one hardtop in the chain open for the second show in any given zone.

Basque exhibs report late audience strength in many instances dipped below the 20 persons, and have decided to concentrate on evening performances to avoid continued losses.

GALA BERLIN SHOW OF 'ANNIE' FOR KENNEDY

Berlin, Jan. 21.

Plans have been made here for a gala show of Irving Berlin's "Annie Get Your Gun" (currrently at Theatre des Westens), with proceeds going to the erection of a John F. Kennedy memorial monument in front of town hall.

Schoeneberg where the late American president gave his famous "I am a Berliner" speech last June. Theatre des Westens is trying to get Berlin to Berlin. It's possible that Irving Berlin will receive an official invitation from either the Berlin Senate or Bonn.

Berlin had sent a letter to the producer of the German LP, "Annie Get Your Gun," in which the composer expressed his hope of eventually visiting Berlin. Incidentally, Berlin's letter was openly read via the American Forces Network last Sunday (19).

Originally Banned In W. Germany, 'Naples' Cops 'Worthy' Citation

Frankfurt, Jan. 21.

In one of those strange switches in the German film industry, a Metro film which could hardly get itself admitted into the country has just copped an outstanding citation. The controversial pic, "Four Days of Naples," was originally rejected by the West German Self-Censorship Committee, only on its third appeal did Metro get the film okayed to play here.

Now the West German Film Classification Board has just given the film its "Worthy" classification, which means that the film is eligible for certain tax relief in German cinemas.

The film stirred up a controversy between the German federal government in Bonn and the Italian film industryites and the government in Rome even while it was being made because the Germans complained that it was an "anti-German" film. They claimed, it was an untrue portrayal of four days of Naples resistance to the Nazis. Film will open late this month in German film houses.

Glasgow Exhibs Vote For Sun. Cinema Shows

Glasgow, Jan. 28.

Sunday opening of cinemas every week has been voted for by Glasgow and West of Scotland cinema owners, who made the decision by 21 votes to 19 at a Cinematograph Exhibitors Assn. meeting. Proposal came from the circuits and others, who want an end to the present rota system for Sunday cinemas.

The Glasgow decision has set some exhibs to probing the question and wondering if it will come to fruition.

Herbert Green, leading indie exhib, told a Scottish CEA meeting that many towns followed the lead of Glasgow, and he felt the matter should be put on the agenda for the Scottish executive committee to discuss.

British Techni Profits Off 21%; Divvy Same

London, Jan. 28.

Profits of British Technicolor dipped 21% in the year ended last Nov. 30, and before taxes, amounted to $1,094,800, with a $551,600 net. The dividend, however, remains unchanged with a total for the year of about 16c. per stock unit.

Albert Allan, Technicolor's managing director, attributes reduced profits primarily to a decrease in the processing of motion picture film, and promised a more detailed report from chairman Patrick J. Frawley Jr., in the final accounts due around Feb. 25.

Cut in Govt. Coin Wipes Out W. German '63 Film Book; Commies Copy It

Wiesbaden, Jan. 21.

First sign of the reduction of federal funds from the West German Ministry of the Interior to support the German Film Export Union revealed when for the first time in its postwar history, the Export Union has been unable to bring out its end-of-the-year catalog concerning German films. This reference book of the West German film industry, which appears in four languages, has facts about German full-length feature pix plus data about production, distribution and technical aspects.

The 1963 catalog has been cancelled, however, in the wake of the cutback of funds which forced the Export Union to retrench and close many of its foreign offices.

West German film industryites have argued that the dwindling federal support for the West German film production is actually giving support to the Communists, since the Commie-controlled East German film industry will have a better chance to sell its propaganda-loaded films in foreign countries.

Not only that, but the first to get word about the cancellation of the West German film catalog were the Reds—and they have already gone to work to bring out an excellent imitation of the Western film reference work.

Film Critic Named To Head San Sebastian

Madrid, Jan. 21.

Film critic Carlos Fernandez Cuenca has been designated director of the San Sebastian Film Fest to succeed the three-man directorate in power for the last two festsivals. Cuenca enjoys a solid standing in film circles. In addition, he has ruled the Filmoteca Nacional for almost a decade and, during this period, was instrumental in stimulating the development of a nationwide network of film clubs.

The designation also received widespread endorsement from the film industry because of Cuenca's familiarity with the international scene. During the course of the last eight years, he had served on juries of every major film fest with the exception of Moscow and Karlovy-Vary.

Appointment of Cuenca as film fest director is expected to generate further organizational changes that could finally lift San Sabastian out of its provincial mood. If this expected turn takes place, the festival could measure up to the top bracket category recently conferred upon it by the International Federation of Film Producers Assns. after its "B" rating last year.

Spain's Prizes Given In Cash

Madrid, Jan. 28.

Some 27 Spanish films and 22 shorts will compete this year for the peseta awards presented annually by the Sindicato Nacional del Espectaculo at ceremonies late this month of San Juan Bosco, patron saint of the film industry.

As in the past, two main prizes each totalling 250,000 pesetas ($4,000) will be given to a film best reflecting Spain's moral, spiritual, political or syndicalist values. The other top peseta prize is awarded on artistic grounds. Runner up winners will receive cash premiums of 150,000, 125,000 and 100,000 pesetas.

Favorites this year are films already conceded government distinction in the form of premium subsidies. These include "Del Rosa . . . al Amarillo" (From Pink to Yellow), "Los Tarantos," "Piedra de toque" (Touchstone) and "Los elegidos" (The Chosen).

Representation on the Sindicato jury ranges from entertainment union toppers, government film officials and film industry leaders to film directors, technicians and critics. Presiding is Sindicato chief Jose Farre de Calzadilla.

International Sound Track

London

"Cleopatra" is on a record-breaking spree in provincial engagements. In its first week in Liverpool it topped the Odeon Record by more than $8,000, to hit a new high of more than $27,000. The 20th epic also toppled the record at the West End Theatre, Birmingham, by more than $7,000, with a gross of $15,700 . . . Princess Margaret and her Lord Snowdon attended the premiere of "Mama Roma" and "Jules and Jim" at the Berkeley, Tottenham Court Road. Both pix are distributed through Gala Films . . . Location filming on "Wonderful Life," starring Cliff Richard, Susan Hampshire, Walter Slezak and Dennis Price, with The Shadows, is due to be completed in the Canary Islands next week and the unit will then return for about three weeks of interior filming at the Associated British Elstree studios. The film, being produced by Kenneth Harper and directed by Sid Furie for Elstree Distributors, will be released in the U.K. through Warner-Pathe.

Paris

Cipra, the French production company backed by Metro coin, chortling that N.Y. Times critic Bosley Crowther put two of their pix, namely "Any Number Can Win" and "A Monkey in Winter," on his 12 best for 1963. And no other Metro pic made the list. Both were directed by Henri Verneuil and both starred Jean Gabin . . . Singer-actor Charles Aznavour has penned a script called "Teach Me to Love." He had Yank offers for it to serve as a Doris Day vehicle. However, he wants to play in it and will do it here and will co-produce and star in it as a French pic later this year. Comedy is about a model torn between a playboy and a simple (sic) photographer. She finally chooses the latter. Aznavour plays the photog . . . Still unreleased musical pic "Les Parapluies De Cherbourg" (Umbrellas of Cherbourg) copping the lead critical-film worker prize, the Prix Louis Delluc. 20th-Fox has it for France, Switzerland and Belgium and local producer Gilbert De Goldschmidt for the rest of the world. Pic was shot entirely to playback voices and is completely sung.

Rene Clement winding "The Love Cage," made in English and French, for the Metro-controlled Cipra here after a few scenes in Gotham. He would like to do a film completely in the U.S. now . . . Pic director Claude Chabrol doing his first legit stint with "Othello" . . . A Swiss publisher, Max Reinhardt, now reportedly readying the long awaited memoirs of Charles Chaplin. Purportedly rights went for $500,000 . . . Michele Morgan celebrating her 25th year in films with her latest pic "Constance Aux Enfers" (Constance in Hell) . . . Ex-publicity man Pierre Kalfon, who scored with his first pic production "Dragees Au Poivre" (Sweet and Sour), now producing his second pic "Aimez Vous Les Femmes?" (Do You Like Women), a suspense-comedy opus scripted by Polksi filmmaker Roman Polanski of "Knife in the Water." New director Jean Leon helms with Edwige Feuillere, Sophie Daumier and Guy Bedos in the cast . . . Francois Truffaut, now again reviewing pix for the slick monthly mag Lui (Him), declares it is sometimes difficult when he is in the midst of a film. He thinks critics try too hard to explain and attack noted names and overblow new ones to make some dent. He thinks they should just deal with each film and forget about predictions.

Rome

Samuel Bronston made Commander of the Italian Republic, later feted at luncheon by Italo and Yank industry reps here; Bronston expects to coproduce "Paris Exhibition 1900" (also titled "La Belle Epoque") with Vittorio DeSica directing at Rome's Cinecitta starting this summer, sez he already has $7,000,000 in advance checks from eager distribs around the globe . . . Robert O'Brien headed Metro contingent here for pic talks with Carlo Ponti (on "Doctor Zhivago," among others, but also "Lady L" and "Operation Crossbow"); party also included Maurice Silverstein, Robert Weitman, Arvid Griffen, Lawrence Bachmann, Benjamin Melniker, Frank Rosenfelt, Michael Havas, Peter Ustinov, Guy Green, David Lean, Henri Verneuil, Christopher Mann, and Lee Steiner . . . Rialto Film of Berlin bringing unit into Trieste for two-week stint on Hildegarde Neff starrer.

Technicolor Italiana strike over, with workers getting some concessions on pacts and $25 bonus . . . Giuseppe Amato sued for breach of contract by actor Walter Bentivegna, who claims he was originally pacted by producer for "Grand Guignol," later dropped . . . Local papers grinding rumor mill on Shirley MacLaine as probable Marcello Mastroianni costar in new Mario Monicelli pic to be shot in the U.S. . . . Rita Pavone, Italo singer just back from States, does her first pic in April for Giuseppe Amato.

Virna Lisi off to Coast to play opposite Jack Lemmon in "How to Murder Your Wife" . . . Peter Marshall in town to wind "Seven Against Death Stint" for director Edgard Ulmer and producer Martin Melcher, then skies to Coast . . . Sancro Film's "The Magnificent Cuckold" to shoot in Cremona, in Po Valley, with Antonio Pietrangeli directing large cast . . . Francoise Prevost among actresses considered for Mary Magdalen part in DeLaurentiis' "The Bible" . . . Gina Lollobrigida in Italo RAI-TV guest stint in program dedicated to memory of Gerard Philipe . . . Carlo Ponti reported signing up Paola Pitagora and Luigi Giuliani, young Italo thesps, to long-term exclusive pacts . . . Michele Mercier stars next in "Angelique" for producer Francis Cosne and directs . . . Bernard Borderie, shooting in April in France, Spain and Italy.

Madrid

Valladolid's ninth Int'l Film Week of Religious and Human Values is inviting "The Cardinal" and "Lilies of the Field" as Yank entries at the April 12-19 fest . . . Cannes Film Festival director Favre Le Bret flew in to gander Samuel Bronston's "Fall of the Roman Empire" . . . Richard Conte turned down the "Joaquin Murrieta" remake western but likes director-writer Juan Antonio Bardem's offer to star in the screen adaptation of Henri Francois Rey's "Piano Mecanique" (player piano) . . . Bardem is also slated to direct a Metro remake of "The Postman Always Knocks Twice" as a Spanish-French-Italian coproduction for Metro release . . . "Circus World" dialog coach George Tyne will debut as a film director with "No-One Gets Hurt," working title of a script written by wife, Ethel. Race for Ownership of British Lion Reduced to 3 Major Groups; Balcon, Sydney Box, Spiegel Combo Bidding

London, Jan. 28.

With the formation of the imposing new syndicate, comprising Sam Spiegel, John Woolf and Leslie Grade, it is now felt that the race for control and full ownership of British Lion reduced to three major groups. The others are led by Sydney Box and Sir Michael Balcon.

Douglas Collins, a former chairman of British Lion who entered the arena for a short period, and offered to run the company without fee, has now withdrawn. And a bid by property developer Ronald Lyon, whose main concern was a redevelopment of the Shepperton studio site, is unlikely to be carried much further. There are still two unnamed bidders in the act, but their prospects are not being too optimistically considered.

Taking the view that the strength and independence of British Lion could be gravely impaired unless its future ownership is decided within a few weeks, the board of the National Film Finance Corp. (which owns British Lion 100%) has set a timetable for new bidders, which requires them to have had a preliminary meeting with the corporation, and publicly announced their identities, not later than next Friday (31).

Before that time schedule has been announced, John Terry, the NFFC managing director, told VARIETY that he hoped a deal could be closed by mid-February, but informed industry opinion considers this an optimistic target date. So far, only the Sydney Box group has had access to the company's books and accounts, and similar facilities must be accorded the other contendors. The necessary and complicated audits could cause a delay of some weeks.

Carl Foreman is the latest bidder for British Lion Films. He's a member of a syndicate headed by agent Stanley Dubins.

Sam Spiegel who, like Foreman is an indie producer aligned with Columbia, also is interested in possible participation in the British production-distributon company.

Sir Michael Balcon To Fore

While the industry still considers Box, who was first in the field, as the hot favorite, it is now recognized that he faces formidable opposition. Sir Michael Balcon, who has now firmly decided to go ahead, notwithstanding the government's decision to pull out completely from British Lion, is backed by an imposing array of creative talent.

There is also a strong likelihood that his syndicate will be joined by David Kingsley, the present British Lion chairman, and the four other directors, namely Roy and John Boulting, Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliatt. Others who are linked with Balcon include John Osborne, Tony Richardson and Peter Sellers. It is also believed that Bryan Forbes and Richard Attenborough may join with Balcon.

The announcement, last Wednesday, that Spiegel, Grade and Woolf had joined forces came as a surprise to the trade, but was admitted to represent a powerful lineup of creative talent, coupled with substantial financial resources. The syndicate has strong City and private financial backing, and a record in production which is impressive by any standards. The syndicate has given an undertaking that it will encourage as much independent British production as possible at Shepperton, and that finance for such production would be forthcoming. It would also encourage overseas producers to utilize the services of Shepperton studios, and of the British Lion distributing company.

Produced 'African Queen'

It is interesting to recall that Woolf and Spiegel have had a previous business association in the production of the hit "African Queen," some few years back. Leslie Grade, whose output has always been released through Warner-Pathe, has given an assurance that, if the bid succeeds, his company, Elstree Distributors, would take steps to determine its association with the Associated British Picture Corp.

There is still an air of uncertainty about the government's intention. At the time, the statement made by the president of the Board of Trade, in the House of Commons a fortnight back that it was to be on outright sale, was regarded as categorical and final. Now, however, the Cinematograph Film Council, the statutory body which advises the BOT prexy on trade affairs, has recommended, by a majority vote of 10 to eight, that the government should retain a stake in the company. There does not appear to be to much of a chance that the government will be persuaded by this advice, but there is always the possibility that the minister could be swayed by industry and political pressure.

Politico Pressure in Commons

Moreover, political pressure has been maintained in the House of Commons. Last Wednesday (22), two industry leaders in opposing camps addressed private meetings of Conservative Members of Parliament, but interestingly enough, they were not allowed to challenge each other in the precincts of the committee room.

The first to take the rostrum was David Kingsley, present chairman of British Lion, who argued the case in favor of continued government financial backing for the company. He was followed by John Davis, chairman of the Rank Organization who, presumably, spoke in defense of the role of the majors, who have been under considerable attack within the industry and in Parliament. Both meetings, however, were private and there has been a virtual news blackout on what took place.

Final decision on the sale of British Lion will not depend on price. This has been set by the NFFC at $4,450,000. A sum equal to half that amount has been paid to the five existing British Lion directors for their half share in the company, which they acquired a few years back for $25,200. It is the NFFC's publicly declared policy to sell to the bidder best able, in its opinion, to maintain the company and studios as an independent third force in the British film industry.

Ireland Tourism Soared Last Year

Dublin, Jan. 21.

Revenue from tourists to the Irish Republic last year netted the country $154,000,000, according to the official estimate here. This is about $7,000,000 better than in 1962. The number of guest registrations from U.S. and Canada in the first nine months of the year was up 7% while spending by trans-Atlantic guests was 11% better.

Main criticism by holidaymakers was the lack of entertainment in the evenings and special efforts are to be made to promote this in 1963.

Fewer Trans-Atlantic passengers travelled by ship, the number being down 700 in the first nine months of 1963, but arrivals from U.S. and Canada by air at Shannon were up 6,600 in the same period.

Sophia Loren Signed For Durrell Film

London, Jan. 28.

Sophia Loren nas been signed to star in a film based on an unpublished story by Lawrence Durrell, which is to go into production in Israel next June. All exteriors and studio interiors will be lensed in that country.

Kurt Unger is exec producer and the film will be directed by Daniel Mann from a screenplay now being finalized by J. P. Miller. World release will be through Paramount.

Swiss and 'Longest Day'

Geneva, Jan. 28.

Twentieth-Fox execs here estimate that "The Longest Day" has been seen by one out of every five Swiss adults.

Pic has racked up total attendances to date of 914,000, repping 16.3% of the nation's population of 5,600,000. However, theatre attendance is limited to patrons of 16 years of age or older. Thus the estimate of one out of five adults.

"Day" opened in Switzerland in October, 1962, and currently is being re-booked in many towns where it played on its first wave of engagements.

U Pacing Yank Distribs in Italy

Rome, Jan. 28.

Universal is back in the lead among distribs here, acording to latest key city figures, with "Charade" contributing strongly to the totals. Metro is runnerup, followed by Dear-UA, Columbia (Ceiad), Dear-Fox, Warners, Interfilm, Incei and Paramount rounding out the top 10.

While "The Leopard" (20th) and "How West Was Won" (MGM) continue to lead on an all-round basis, they rate sixth and third on a current seasonal score. "Lawrence of Arabia" (Col) is No. 1 followed by "Cleopatra" (20th). "55 Days at Peking" (AA) rates fourth while "Irma La Douce" (UA) is eighth. "Four for Texas" (WB) is eleventh.

Yanks continue seasonal dominance, with an all-over 48.7% vs. a collective 40.7% for Italos and Italo-French coproductions. British items come next with 7.8%.

Broccoli, With Two Bond B.O. Hits, Worried Over Spate of Message Pix

London, Jan. 28.

With a hit formula in the shape of the Ian Fleming-James Bond adventure yarns which has already resulted in two b.o. hits, Albert R. (Cubby) Broccoli, is concerned at the increasing spate of message pictures which, he fears, will have a damaging effect on the boxoffice and also on industry finances.

Broccoli declares that the producers concerned, many of whom are among his close personal friends, may be well-intentioned, but are clearly misguided. Their attitude in making pictures, which give them personal satisfaction, he described as being both selfish and unreasonable. It was their job, he declared, to make films that would satisfy the paying public, and thus lure patrons away from the small screen in their own homes.

It is Broccoli's belief that such message pictures, made by producers who felt an urge to satisfy their own whims, rarely succeed at the boxoffice. Such failures had a damaging effect on the industry as a whole, he contended.

Sees 'From Russia' as Hit

Through his Eon Productions, in which he is partnered with Harry Saltzman, Broccoli is confident he has a real b.o. hit with the second of the Bond yarns, "From Russia With Love," which he believes will gross over $2,000,000 in the United Kingdom before Eady is taken into account. In a number of key situations, it has been edged out of first place by the new Norman Wisdom comedy, "A Stitch in Time," but he believes that when the final accounting is completed, "Russia" will come out on top.

"Russia," which is outgrossing "Dr. No," the first Bond yarn, by about $700,000 in Britain, is scheduled for its N.Y. preem in April. It is to be followed by "Goldfinger," which starts at Pinewood Studios, Feb. 24, with Sean Connery again playing the secret service agent. Guy Hamilton is to direct. It will be in color and widescreen. The 15-week shooting schedule includes location work in Switzerland.

Apart from the new Bond film, which like the two earlier ones will be distributed through United Artists, the Eon slate for 1964 includes two other British pix which may be released through another major.

'Panther' Whopping 28G in West End, 'Haunting' Neat $11,000 Both For 2d; 'Arabia' Wow 17½G, 'Victors' 13G

London, Jan. 21.

Hottest of newcomers in the West End is "The Pink Panther," which grossed a whopping $28,500 in its first frame at the Odeon, Leicester Square, and seems likely to come close to that figure in second week with $28,000. Also in second round is "The Haunting," which shapes neat $11,000 or near at the Empire. "Under Yum Yum Tree" looks fair $6,700 in second Columbia round.

In most respects, the West End is dominated by the hardticket films. "The Cardinal," though somewhat below hopes, still is sturdy $9,000 in fourth week at the Astoria. "Cleopatra" is fancy in its 24th session at the Dominion. "The Victors" is rated solid $13,500 in ninth round at Leicester Square Theatre. "Lawrence of Arabia" continues great with $17,300 in its 49th week at the Metropole, where on moveover.

The three Cinerama films are also holding firmly. "It's a Mad World" topped a stout $14.300 in seventh session at the Coliseum. "How West Was Won" was also brisk $14,000 or over in 64th Casino stanza. "Brothers Grimm" was fine $9,600 in seventh Royalty week of moveover.

Assoc. British Profits Up $560,000 From '62

London, Jan. 28.

The half-year report by Associated Brtish Picture Corp. shows trading profits up by more than $560,000, but the interim dividend is being held at 10%.

Prelim returns released by the ABPC board for the six months ended last Sept. 30 show trading profits, after depreciation and amortization, of $6,697,443 against $6,130,300 for the same period of 1962. Current results are slightly below the profit in 1961. The net profit, after taxation, totaled $2,803,166, also better than last year, but down from 1961.

Exec Asks Scot Film Industry

Glasgow, Jan. 21.

A film industry for Scotland has been suggested here by Robert Keenan, regional officer for the National Assn. of Theatrical & Kine Employees, who claim that major circuits like ABC, Rank, etc. have so far ignored completely any claims here to have studio facilities for producing feature films.

"As in many other sections of industry," he said, "monopoly concentrated in London in private or State hands, using State funds, has given no comfort to Scotland."

Few can doubt the suitability of Scotland, scenic-wise, as ideal location for shooting not only grouse but films.

Union exec claims that the studio staffing of artists, musicians, writers, composers, technicians, craftsmen and semi-skilled grades would make for jobs locally. He suggests a new town like Cumbernauld, near here, or Livingston, close to Edinburgh, as sites for development. Project, if carried through, will give an all-round fillip to Scot entertainment.

"State funds have been available for film production," said Keenan. "Eire, a smaller nation than Scotland, has firstclass studios at Bray."

Boulting Bros. Dispute With ACTAT Resolved After 2 Court Actions

London, Jan. 28.

Under an agreement reached here last week, the long drawn out dispute between the Boulting brothers and the Assoc. of Cinematograph, Television and Allied Technicians has been resolved. A formula has been agreed on between the two parties, as a result of which the Boultings are applying for leave to withdraw their appeal to the House of Lords.

The dispute dates back to the time when the Boultings were filming "I'm All Right Jack." The union complained that their membership had lapsed and sought to compel them to resume active membership. The Boultings challenged the union in the High Court, and the verdict went against them. They appealed, and by a two to one majority, the Court of Appeal upheld the original verdict. By that time, having incurred costs of close on $50,000, they gave notice to take the matter to the House of Lords.

The settlement formally agreed between the union and the Boultings maintains the principle of eligibility of film producers and directors for union membership, but agrees that directors who are also proprietors, or company directors exericising the function of proprietors, shall be entitled to suspend their membership.

The settlement was negotiated between the Federation of British Film Makers and the union. The full terms are expected to be published, after ratification, later this month.

$10,000,000 and 10,000 Men Riding On Bill Leonard's Conviction CBS Can Develop Best Election Picture

For a guy who was put on a coronary alert back in '56, Bill Leonard, general factotum of CBS-TV's Election Year coverage, has achieved such perfect pacing and performance that he's become the envy of his colleagues. He's riding into the election circus with a medico's clean bill of health and if his heart now belongs to CBS News, lock, stock & barrel, it's as stout as the $10,000,000 budget which CBS has tossed into the "Campaign '64" fray and as steadfast as the dedication with which the network has buckled down to the job of translating the next 10 months into a razzle dazzle politico pageantry.

Aside from the $10,000,000 budget (which CBS doesn't particularly care to talk about, for even should it attain an SRO status it'll still be digging into its corporate pocket to the tune of some $4,000,000), some of the vital statistics attending Leonard's quest to write tv history this year are nothing short of fascinating. From the New Hampshire primary in March through the 21 projected specials into the Frisco and Atlantic City Conventions and the Election Night toting up, CBS will be recruiting a staff of 10,000—count 'em— 10,000 people, enough to populate a town and which would put a Bill Paley write-in vote in serious contention.

There will be 1,500 involved in actual production; 500 alone to man the IBM machines as CBS puts on a fullscale performance of "VPA" (the technique for collecting and analyzing votes in key precincts based on previous voting records in those same precincts). Standing in the wings will be 6,500 for the Election Night raw vote collection. Carpenter Hotel in Manchester will house 150 CBSites for the New Hampshire primary—thus giving Leonard and his boys the distinction of putting on a bigger campaign than Rockefeller himself.

Quite obviously CBS won't be soloing in this ambitious venture. NBC's Bill McAndrew (and on the basis of the Nielsen tote board he's still the one to beat) is as equally dedicated, and ABC under Elmer Lower and Jim Hagerty will also be going for the hosannahs. But for Leonard (and his boss Dick Salant) in his second time up as Chief Impresario for "Columbia Covers A Presidential Campaign" (with Bill Ames and Bud Wussler as the front-and-back-of-the-camera designers and choreographers and Theodore H. White as an overall election unit consultant), the stakes are high indeed. For this is the year CBS is determined to make it in the race to the polls to develop that Election Night picture.

And Leonard's got $10,000,000 and 10,000 men riding on a firm conviction that he can develop it first.

Cig Transits 'TW3'

NBC-TV's satirical half-hour revue, "That Was the Week That Was," kicked the cig habit last Friday night (24) without a twitch.

Participating sponsor Brown & Williamson had threatened to pull out of the show if a vidtaped bit spoofing the Government's cig-cancer report weren't eliminated. Whether or not the gesture was because of press exposure of the B&W threat, or good old fashion ornery integrity, the sequence did play and the cig company didn't.

Bit featured a vocal turn of "Smoke Get's In Your Eyes" accomped by still pix of smokers in idiotic poses, lung x-rays and surgery.

Cancer Report No Deterrent To Ciggie TV Buys

While the tv industry is playing it cool about making any specific commitments to restrict cigaret advertising, the tobacco companies are now heavily in the market for 1964-65 television time with only a minor nod to the U.S. Surgeon General's report linking smoking with higher mortality rates. Initially, the tobacco companies appeared to be rushing for post-9 p.m. time period. Now, however, they've dropped down to 8:30 p.m. for entertainment shows. News and sports shows are also acceptable berths for ciggie plugs at any hour.

Television industry execs, who are wondering how to juggle the $150,000,000 in tobacco advertising revenue without dropping the money bags or getting hit by legislation, are becoming increasingly testy over the big play this particular story has been getting in the press. One tv exec asked: "Do the print media sense an opportunity to regain part or whole of the cigaret advertising money that was switched to television? Having lost millions of dollars, the print media are taking a holier-than-thou attitude about smoking, but they're deafening silent about liquor advertising."

Trenner Exits RKO-Gen.

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Harry Trenner has resigned as division director of RKO-General on the Coast and will retire May 1 after 35 years in radio and tv. He will move to Palm Springs.

Starting this weekend he will develop programs for RKO-General tv stations and broader distribution. His post will be vacated. Mal Klein continues as manager of KHJ-TV and Martin Fliesler as KHJ manager, both reporting to N.Y.

Current Season TV Sales Fetch ABC $8,000,000

Close to $8,000,000 in business for the remaining months of the current season has been written since the start of the new year by ABC-TV. One of the major buys was made by American Tobacco, whose willingness to ride along with the "Jimmy Dean Show" cued the web's decision to extend the variety series to September. Latest flock of sales is putting the web at near the SRO level for the second and third quarter which is being sold at rates 20% over last year.

Other sales were made to Brown & Williamson in "Arrest and Trial" and to Florida Citrus in "Hootenanny." Dodge, S.C. Johnson & Son, Lehn & Fink, Plough, Polaroid and Tontl have also bought or renewed participations in scattered primetime shows.

ABC-TV has also sold out a couple of summer football specials, the Coaches All-Star Game from Buffalo June 27 and the All-Star vs. Chicago Bears game Aug. 7. Former game was bought by Hartford Insurance, Georgia Pacific, Goodyear, General Cigar and Schlitz while Gillette, R.J. Reynolds and Pabst bought the Chicago Bears contest. In another sports sale, Auto Lite and General Mills have bought out the "Pro Bowlers Tour" to the end of its run in April.

Wolper's 'Men In Crisis'

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

"Men in Crisis," a new documentary series exploring the conflict between men in history, is being prepared by Wolper Productions as the first of three new half-hour series currently being developed for network airing during '64-'65.

Bewitched, Bothered & Bewildered

All indications point to ABC-TV scheduling the Screen Gems entry, "Bewitched," in the Thursday-at-9 period next season. Quaker Oats has just purchased it from SG, subject to the right of Quaker to sell off half the program. "Bewitched," starring Elizabeth Montgomery, daughter of the film star Robert Montgomery, is produced by her new husband, Bill Asher. Quaker reportedly bought the program, featuring a young bewitched housewife who performs "Topper"-like feats, in hopes that it could qualify for a CBS time period. While CBS would be delighted to accept the program, all CBS half-hour possibilities apparently have been committed to other advertisers such as Procter & Gamble and Philip Morris.

Until last Friday the Thursday at 9 period had been committed to "Valentine's Day," the half-hour 20th-Fox situation comedy starring Tony Franciosa and produced by Hal Kanter. But Chevrolet, to whom "Valentine" and the Thursday at 9 half-hour had been optioned, was forced to pass on the Kanter comedy when parent company General Motors in the person of Gail Smith nixed the show, on a public relations basis, as being on the "risque" side.

ABC then extended the Chevrolet option on the valuable time period, which follows "My Three Sons." Now, it's felt, if Chevrolet concludes that "Bewitched" is the best alternative available, it will accept the show with Quaker as the alternate sponsor (thus giving Quaker, which co-sponsors the immedately preceding "My Three Sons," the money-saving contiguous rate on each half-hour).

Ironically, producer Hal Kanter has thus found himself "bewitched, bothered & bewildered" by the same kind of frustration which beset him several seasons back when he instituted a lawsuit against ABC for allegedly failing to honor a deal to schedule a Pat Buttram situation comedy, also produced by Kanter, in the selfsame Thursday at 9 period. Then, as now, it was Chevrolet which refused to schedule the Kanter show, and in each instance ABC stood by the sponsor.

To make the irony of the second Chevrolet turndown more bitter, ABC's financing of two Kanter pilots (the other being "Three On An Island") was conditioned on Kanter's withdrawal of the lawsuit which stemmed from the initial Chevy turndown.

However, "Three On An Island" is now pencilled in for Thursday at 9:30. Here, again, Kanter must override another sponsor hurdle as American Tobacco, which has an option on an alternate half-hour of the time period, is being asked to accept the program. (Meantime American Tobacco has just ordered an alternate half-hour of "The Rogues" on NBC Sunday nights 10 to 11 and has also placed firm orders for 10 and a half commercial minutes per week on CBS, which the latter has not yet accepted).

"Three On An Island" is a latter-day "My Sister Eileen," about three comely young things—Julie Newmar, Pamela Tiffin and Monica Moran—who live in a Manhattan apartment.

NBC Sings Along With Bearded One On Mitch Pitch Vs. 'Agency Shows'

At the outset of the '63-'64 season, the third for NBC-TV's "Sing Along With Mitch," the old Chicago croupier Art Nielsen was telling the tv industry that Mitch Miller, for audience, was doing something of a solo. Last few weeks have seen a change, and the "Sing Along" producer-host thinks it's all because he got NBC to sing along—with a saturation on-air promo campaign, that is.

In a new timeslot, 10 to 11 p.m. Mondays, Miller is now convinced it takes the Nielsen tribe a few weeks and some strong guidance to grope its way from the old to the new home in the schedule of an old favorite.

"It shows you can't take anything for granted," says the bearded one. "We all knew we had a good show and good research" (placed as it was between two "agony hours," CBS-TV's "East Side, West Side," and ABC-TV's "Breaking Point."

Still, with the dip in the numbers, Miller says everybody got nervous (Wm. Morris agency and the net execs). But instead of panicking, Miller put in a call to NBC prez Bob Kintner. It was never answered says Miller, but it was obvious that the boss (by ESP, or something) got the message because things began to happen immediately.

Network promo boys filled the weekend air with as many as 30 voice-over show plugs a day along with several film blurbs on the weekend before air dates.

That was in November. By the

LeRoy Dyke Show

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

LeRoy Van Dyke, country music singer, is going into tv production with his manager, Gene Nash. Pair have set up Bandshell Productions for a teleseries tabbed "LeRoy Dyke Show," and have closed deal with Canada's ITO network for 26 segments.

Entire series of half-hour episodes, to feature both American and Canadian guest performers, is being financed by Van Dyke, who started filming of pilot last week at WXIX-TV, ABC outlet in Nashville, where singer is also a member of the WSNU "Grand Ol' Opry" show. ITO is syndicating in Canada, England and Australia, with a new deal to be set for U.S. syndication. ITO deal also includes a 90-minute spec on history of country music, which Van Dyke will film later in year.

Perjury Action Looms in LBJ Tele Time Buy

Washington, Jan. 28.

Senators investigating Bobby Baker were suggesting today (Tues.) there may be perjury case case involving the sale in 1959 of $1,208 in tv time on the Austin, Tex., station owned by Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson and her daughters. The First Lady put her family's stock into an irrevocable trust when her husband became President.

Don B. Reynolds of D.C. suburb, who once was a partner of Bobby Baker in the insurance business, sold the LBJ Co., licensee KTBC-TV, two different $100,000 life insurance policies on President Johnson's life, the first in 1959 and the second in 1961. The company, which paid the premium, was the beneficiary.

The company took them out as an inheritance tax protection, it was explained by a Johnson aide. Under Texas' community property law, which divides assets between married couples, Mrs. Johnson

Chemstrand Coin To 'H'wood Palace'

Chemstrand, which has specialized in bankrolling such specials as "Elizabeth Taylor's London" and "Grace Kelly's Tour of Monaco," is now making something special out of ABC-TV's "Hollywood Palace" show. Chemstrand has bought half of three "Hollywood Palace" hours in February and March.

The "Palace" shows will be promoted by Chemstrand as specials. ABC-TV is reciprocating by coming up with some top emcees for the three vaude layouts, namely Gene Kelly, Cyd Charisse & Tony Martin, and Dean Martin.

Shecky Greene Series

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Shecky Greene, nitery comic currently in lounge of Riviera, Las Vegas, has been inked by Screen Gems for a vidpix series to be tailored for him. No format or tag yet has been set.

Deal is non-exclusive and permits Greene to do tv guestings, niteries and pix.

GAC Swingin' as TV Gets Some Fancy (Herman) Rush Orders

It's not quite a year since Herman Rush moved in as prexy of the tv division of General Artists Corp., yet in the intervening months he and his two key veepee aides (Lester Gottlieb in the east and Dave Gerber on the Coast) have been making like there's no tomorrow's in tv without a GAC tag.

On the live/tape front alone, GAC has had singular success in recent weeks with some middle-of-the-season "Rush orders" from ABC and NBC that has projected the agency into the forefront in that area of programming. In a three-way coup at the start of the new year, GAC delivered the "Hollywood Palace" Saturday night show for ABC; and both "That Was the Week That Was" and "You Don't Say" for NBC. The ABC entry, thanks to some fancy share-of-audience returns, looks like it'll be swinging into the '64-'65 semester.

Right now GAC is jumpin' with potential live entries that's met with favorable agency-network reaction, as with the Joel Grey "On the Brink" revue (which was on the verge of grabbing American Tobacco sponsorship had Jimmy Dean fallen by the wayside); the Bobby Morse "New Faces" exploration into new talent development, and the "Funny Funny World" variety show utilizing international talent, on which NBC holds an option.

In addition GAC is currently prepping two new live daytime game show entries, "Copy Cat" and "Show Me", both of which are being tested locally on KTLA on the Coast. A live summer replacement "Face the Music" with Sammy Kaye and a projected Mel Torme hour series are in the offing. Also in the east GAC represents the new "Reporter" (headed for CBS) Jerome Weidman series, as it does Jackie Gleason, pacted to a new $6,000,000 tv contract.

Coast vidfilm activity is even more diversified and all-encompassing, as witness the three Desilu properties: the half-hour Donald O'Connor show, already purchased by Colgate, at which ABC is casting eyes; the Dan Dailey "Papa GI" situation comedy series created by Jess Oppenheim and the Dwayne Hickman situation comedy series produced and directed by Bob Sweenney. All the pilots were delivered last week. (These are aside from Lucy herself and the current "Greatest Show On Earth"). There's a GAC label on two 20th-Fox properties: "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea" (which goes 7:30 to 8:30 Sundays on ABC), and "Three On An Island" (9:30 Thursdays ABC) co-starring Pamela Tiffin, Julie Newmar and Monica Moran. It's about three girls in a New York brownstone.

Tack on representation on the Saturday ayem "My Friend Flicka", with a sixth year upcoming and altogether GAC, which now talks by the dozen, spells out "Good American Cash."

Chester Quits NBC, Storke Gets Nod

Giraud Chester, director, program administration at NBC-TV has ankled over "policy differences" and William Storke, director of participating program sales, has replaced him.

Chester, who joined NBC a couple of years ago from ABC-TV, where he was director of daytime programming, says he will announce future plans in a few weeks.

Storke joined NBC in July, 1948, in the Hollywood guest relations department. He transferred to New York from the Coast web sales department in 1955.

REVUE: A THIRD OF A NETWORK

The NBC-TV Schedule

The NBC-TV '64-'65 schedule, finalized yesterday (Tues.), is loaded with surprises. It provides for six hours of movies per week, including the new made-for-tv Revue entry tentatively tabbed "Project 120." Jack Benny gets the Tuesday night 9:30 to 10 spot sandwiched between "Mr. Solo" and an hour variety show alternating Andy Williams and Bell Telephone. Wednesday will be comprised of two shows only (both out of Revue)—"The Virginian" and the aforementioned movies. Ditto Monday night's two-entries-only: "90 Bristol Court" and "Monday Night Movies."

Here's the blueprint:

Sunday—7:30 to 8:30 Disney; 8:30 to 9 (still open with "Grindl" maybe returning); 10 to 11 Four Star's "The Rogues."

Monday—7:30 to 9—"90 Bristol Court" (out of Revue); 9 to 11 "Monday Night Movies."

Tuesday—7:30 to 8:30—"Mr. Novak"; 8:30 to 9:30 "Mr. Solo" out of MGM; 9:30, Jack Benny; 10 to 11, Andy Williams-Bell Telephone.

Wednesday — 7:30 to 9 — "Virginian"; 9 to 11, "Project 120" movies.

Thursday—7:30 to 8:30—"The 13th Gate" science fiction series (produced by Felix Jackson); 8:30 to 9:30, "Dr. Kildare"; 9:30, "Hazel" and 10 to 11 "Kraft Suspense Theatre."

Friday—7:30 to 8:30, "International Showtime"; 8:30 to 9:30 Bob Hope"; 9:30 to 10, "That Was the Week That Was"; 10 to 11, Jack Paar.

Saturday—6:30 to 8:30—"Flipper' 'and "Mr. Magoo"; 8:30 to 9 half-hour comedy (maybe Joey Bishop back); 9 to 11 "Saturday Night Movies."

ABC's Political Convention 'Talent': Eisenhower, Humphrey and Ervin

In a move to glamorize its coverage of the national conventions via its association with top political figures, ABC-TV will be balancing former Pres. Dwight D. Eisenhower, a Republican, against two Democratic Senators, Hubert Humphreys of Minnesota and Samuel J. Ervin Jr. of North Carolina. ABC-TV signed up the Democratic senators as network commentator talent after former Pres. Harry S. Truman indicated that he was not available for such a job. ABC is providing "honorariums," a euphemism for fees, to the politicos, but in Pres. Eisenhower's case, at least, it's believed that the coin will be donated to some public institution.

ABC-TV is now in the process of lining additional personalities and personnel before and behind the cameras. With the exit of Bob Quinn, exec producer of the news department who was in charge of the preparations for the political conventions, it's understood that ABC News prexy Elmer Lower is aiming to corral a topflight producer from one of the other webs to handle this assignment.

ABC News, meantime, is moving to set up independent units for television and radio. The web set up separate radio news departments in the midwest, with Tom Casey as manager. Lower is slated to shortly name a head of the Coast news department for radio. Tom O'Brien is national radio director headquartering in New York. The web's Washington bureau has been beefed up by the addition of Baden Langton, one of Canada's top newsmen.

In the documentary field, ABC-TV is planning to program at least 10 hours next season. John Secondari, head of special projects, will be turning out documentaries with historical and entertainment flavors while Steve Fleischman, who recently moved over from CBS, will

Ackerman & Fries Ad Lib SG Setup

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Harry Ackerman, Screen Gems veepee and exec producer, and Charles Fries, executive production manager for SG, are running the local operation pending appointment of a Coast chief, to replace Bill Dozier, who has exited the telefilmery.

SG veepee and general manager Gerald Hyams has notified Coast staffers of the Ackerman-Fries status. Hyams, meanwhile, is considering a number of candidates for the vacated spot, but it's reported he is in no hurry to reach a decision, and it may be a month or two before a Coast chief is named.

CBSers Play Albee Time

Matinee company of Broadway's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" now is entirely composed of performers on CBS-TV soapers.

Henderson Forsythe (As the World Turns) is the latest to join the Broadway cast. He replaced Sheppard Strudwick. Others are Eileen Fulton, also of "As the World Turns," Bill Berger of "Edge of Night," and Haila Stoddard of "Secret Storm."

Foursome continue their tv roles while performing in Albee's play.

Carol Burnett's 3-Wks.-Out-of-4 CBS Sat. at 8:30

Out of this frantic Thursday-Friday period of last week which saw CBS-TV's Jim Aubrey locked in with his key colleagues to put the pieces together on next season's $250,000,000 program look (including the NFL grid graboff) came a commitment from Carol Burnett to do a three-weeks-out-of-four hourlong revue-type show. (On the fourth week it's planned to utilize a name guest but with an otherwise regular cast in a Bob Banner entry called "The Entertainers.") Show will go into the Sat. 8:30 to 9:30 period following Jackie Gleason.

Deal with Miss Burnett, who was pinned down to a commitment just as she was taking off for a Jamaica holiday, thus retains the CBS tradition of "one new key hour variety show per season." (This year witnessed the Danny Kaye click.)

Out of the hectic Thursday-Friday period came the $28,200,000 successful grid bid; the repacting of Jackie Gleason, the decision to go regularly with Miss Burnett and the virtual resolution of the entire '64-'65 sked.

CBS-TV Returning Tues. 7:30 to Affils

CBS-TV has opted not to program Tuesdays at 7:30 next season, the half-hour period now occupied by "Marshall Dillon" ("Gunsmoke" reruns).

The web the past two years with its "Dillon" series, in effect, had an electronic syndication operation. "Dillon," although programmed by the network, was up for local sales.

8 HRS. SHAPE UP ON NBC-TV SKED

They said that, come '64-'65, and Lew Wasserman's Revue telepix operation would be practically washed up—by virtue of the fact that (a) CBS-TV wanted no part of it; (b) its dedication to the anthology pattern of programming was too old hat. So what happens? What happens is that, on the basis of the tentative schedules posted around the Madison Ave. agencies by the three webs, Revue will be back hotter 'n ever, with probability that it will have 11 hours of programming (at the going production rate of $5,000,000 per hour) pencilled in on the fall tv spectrum.

In the process Revue will probably be writing some "tv history" footnotes, particularly in its relationship with NBC, where practically one-third of the entire prime time evening program schedule (for some eight hours per week) will be flaunting the Revue banner. (The other three hours have been earmarked for ABC-TV). Further, NBC Wednesday nights, 7:30 to 11, will be Revue all the way, and with only two shows, yet. From 7:30 to 9 there will be "The Virginians"; from 9 to 11 the two-hour made-for-NBC film features (tentatively tabbed "Project 120").

The two-network 11-hour spread, in the shapeup of the present countdown, goes like this:

"Broadside", the half-hour distaff version of "McHale's Navy" (featuring World War II Waves) earmarked for a Sunday ABC showcase;

"McHale's Navy" half-hour, ABC-TV;

"Virginian", 90-minutes, NBC-TV;

"Project 120" (two-hour features) for NBC-TV;

"Kraft Suspense Theatre", 60-minutes, NBC-TV;

Chrysler-Bob Hope series, 60 minutes, NBC-TV (Chrysler wants to renew but Hope says he hasn't decided yet whether he'll continue with the series);

"Wagon Train", back to 60-minute form, ABC-TV;

Alfred Hitchcock, 60 minutes (CBS won't pick up its option but it's expected to wind up as an NBC attraction), Friday night 10 to 11 even though Jack Paar is still listed in the tentative blueprint.

Jack Benny, half-hour, NBC-TV.

"Arrest and Trial" (in 60-minute form instead of present 90-minute version), ABC-TV;

"90 Bristol Court", designed as three half-hour comedy blocks, going into Monday night 7:30 to 9.

In the unprecedented concentration on Revue shop shows, the Wasserman studio will be supplying NBC with the equivalent of some two and a half nights of prime time programming per week—assuming the present schedule holds up.

Mary Fickett Series Set for CBS Radio

Mary Fickett, who was cohost on the new defunct "Calendar" CBS-TV series, returns to the CBS News fold, but this time on CBS Radio.

Miss Fickett, starting Feb. 17, will do a question and answer show on the radio web, on what roughly could be called women's subjects. Her show will be a supplement to the Walter Cronkite "Dimension" feature.

NBC Shifts Vanocur

NBC-TV's White House correspondent Sander Vanocur ankles that beat to take on general politics with particular attention to the campaign of Pennsylvania Gov. Scranton, aspirant to the Republican presidential nomination.

Robert Goralski of the Washington staff takes over the White House assignment. Beat reportedly was offered to Ray Scherer, but he preferred to continue as NBC's top man on Capitol Hill.

CBS Axe Swings on Shows In Projecting '64-'65; 'East Side,' Silvers, Garry & Hitch Bounced

Sullivan to 90 Minutes

With the demise of the Judy Garland show in March after 26 weeks, CBS-TV is expanding the Ed Sullivan Sunday 8 to 9 show to 90 minutes.

Starting April 5 Sullivan will occupy the 8 to 9:30 period with a half-hour show filling out 9:30 to 10. However, there's a possibility the show may not go in its expanded form until the fall.

CBS-TV program execs were burning the midnight oil up to last night to come in under the deadline in projecting the web's '64-'65 schedule. As matters were resolved, "East Side West End" went out the window along with the "Garry Moore Show," "The New Phil Silvers Show" and the new Allen Funt mid-season replacement show, "Tell It To the Camera."

Alfred Hitchcock, after a long ride on the web, is being axed from its Friday night 10 to 11 slot. He's expected to move over to NBC, joining another move-over—Jack Benny. Major casualty also is Judy Garland who fades from the Sunday night 9 to 10 slot in March after 26 weeks.

Lucille Ball will probaby remain a haf-hour Monday nights, having rejected the bid to go a full hour. Carol Burnett gets the Saturday night 8:30 to 9:30 period following Jackie Gleason and currently occupied by "The Defenders." Defenders" moves over to the Tuesday night 10 to 11 period which is being taken away from Garry Moore.

Going into the Silvers slot for General Foods will be "Gomer Pyle" (a spinoff from the Andy Griffith show) and Parke Levy's "Many Happy Returns" gets the GF nod for Monday night 9:30 now that Danny Thomas goes off.

Other casualties, as previously noted, include Danny Thomas, axed not because of ratings but because of Thomas' desire to slow down and do some specials (at NBC-TV). "Great Adventure," the historical anthology series, Fridays from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., cancelled after a one season ride.

"Route 66," currently filling the Friday, 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. slot, also won't be back on the schedule, the end of a ride of many years.

As the web began to prepare its '64-'65 schedule, the biggest question marks were Jackie Gleason and Lucille Ball. In both situations, the web received affirmative answers.

In the case of Gleason his production company which does the Saturday night weekly entry is pledged from $5,500,000 to $6,000,000 for the '64-'65 season. Gleason, in response to a question, said he thought next season he will get some $1,000,000 more than the current season. He addded, though, that his lawyers are clearer on the exact figures than he is.

In any event, his deal calls for 30 one-hour shows, the number he did this season. Eight will be repeated.

An important provision of his contract, according to Gleason, is

Alcoa $4,900,000 Buy Hinges On 'Tycoon' Switch

Alcoa has offered to buy the Walter Brennan "Tycoon" half-hour situation comedy series on ABC-TV next season for $4,900,000 (for a firm 52-week full sponsorship), but won't accept the Sunday at 9 period into which it's been slotted. Alcoa wants Thursdays at 9:30, but that's a period in which American Tobacco has an option for an alternate half-hour.

Alcoa is unwilling to oppose the high-rated NBC "Bonanza" series, particularly because CBS' main effort next season is expected to be directed toward the same time period with an "explosive, super-expensive" Ashley-Steiner variety show, with the major headliners, in the 9 to 10 Sunday period, immediately following Ed Sullivan.

CBC Disbands Its 11-Year Symph But Pacts Toronto Orch

Toronto, Jan. 28.

Announcement that the 11-year-old symphony orchestra of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. would be disbanded and the Toronto Symphony Orchestra given the concerts and other musical chores was made jointly by Bruce Raymond, CBC Radio program director of the Trans-Canada web, and R. W. Finlayson, prexy of the TSO. They said that all symphonic services during the 1964-65 season would be provided by the TSO.

It was also announced that tenure of Walter Susskind as conductor of the TSO had been extended another year. With 13 concerts skedded for this season, CBC Symphony reputation had continued to grow and several recordings were made by Columbia. It had been the favorite of such recent conductors as Stravinsky and Robert Craft.

Joint announcement stated that setup would allow the constitution of the best orchestral performers in Toronto into a single organization: would allow cutting down of rehearsal time and duplication of facilities. CBC also gets the TSO guest artists and conductors for this and next seasons.

More than 70% of the CBC symphony plays also for the TSO and it is 20 musicians that the latter is interested in. Toronto local of Musicians Union had made no decision over the weekend because they had not been notified.

Houseman to Revue

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Producer John Houseman has joined Revue studios, to produce a number of telepix for the Bob Hope-Chrysler series on NBC-TV.

Houseman has produced a number of teleshows, last being "The Great Adventure," and also has produced a number of motion pictures.

Rival Cigs in Yen For NBC 'Rogues'

"The Rogues," the Four Star-NBC-TV entry for next season, is already firm for one-half the bankroll with four cig firms currently scrambling to latch on to the remainder.

In for an alternate-week half-hour are Alberto-Culver and Procter & Gamble, and orders for another alternate-half have been received from Brown & Williamson, American Tobacco, Liggett & Myers and P. Lorillard.

With the cig folk as anxious as they are for late-hour programming since the Government report on the smoking-cancer link, it's an outside possibility that one company will take an alternate week chunk of "Rogues" with another settling for the opposite week participation.

Curb Ciggie Blurbs, Clout Clutter, Demanded At NAB's Florida Meet

Washington, Jan. 28.

Ratification and reflection are on the Sarasota agenda of the NAB Television and Radio Boards this week. To be ratified by the tv Board of Directors are restrictions suggested last week at Miami Beach by the TV Code Review Board on cigaret advertising and piggyback commercials.

Up for Radio Board action are recommendations issued earlier this month by the Radio Code Review Board for establishing a ciggie subcommittee and for bolstering code acceptance among stations.

When both boards meet jointly on Friday, ratings, research and LeRoy Collins will be topics for discussion.

At Miami Beach, the TV Code Board went part way to meeting Collins' demand for banning the butt. Pending final Federal Trade Commission action, the nine-member board voted unanimously to crack down on ciggie ads appealing to children or claiming benefits to good health.

The TV Code Board also moved to define piggyback commercials and require that all ads comprising a piggyback seg be counted as separate commercials under code time standards.

The Board recommended a prohibition against scheduling more than three consecutive announcements of any nature during prime time.

The piggyback action was also unanimously approved by the Code Board.

The TV code folk prefaced their provisions saying: "It is apparent that there must be a reappraisal of cigaret smoking and cigaret advertising in the overall fabric of television." The Board expressed "particular concern" with the effect of tv advertising on juve smoking. The Board added, however, that the ciggie manufacturers also have some responsibilities. Invited to appear at the Miami Beach session, the Tobacco Institute and reps from the six largest cigaret advertisers all declined.

They averred they shouldn't become involved in self-regulation of the broadcast industry.

The Code Board advised amending the code to read:

"Care should be exercised so that cigaret smoking will not be depicted in a manner to impress the youth of our country as a desirable habit worthy of imitation," and, "The advertising of cigarets should not be presented in a manner to convey the impression that cigaret smoking promotes health or it's important to personal development of the youth of our country."

Rejected by the board was a proposed amendment prohibiting cigaret endorsements by big names.

The Code Board appointed three of its members to serve as a ciggie subcommittee and cooperate with their radio counterparts. Selected were Douglas Manship, WBRZ-TV, Baton Rouge, La.; Roger Clipp,

McGannon: Man of Year

Sarasota, Fla., Jan. 28.

Don McGannon, prexy of the Westinghouse Broadcasting group, was named by NAB's board here as recipient of this year's Distinguished Service Award. The award will be made at the NAB national convention in Chicago in April.

Previously there had been reports that the award might be given posthumously to late Pres. John F. Kennedy.

Ad Agency Faces Fraud Indictment On Diet Product

For the first time in Madison Ave. history, a Federal indictment last week was slapped on an ad agency for fraudulent campaigning. Kastor, Hilton, Chesley, Clifford & Atherton was accused of the fraud in a 58-count indictment that also named Drug Research Corp. and its prexy John Andreadis and its chief chemist Saul Miklean and the New Drug Institute and its prez, Arthur D. Herick.

The ad agency is named through its handling of a $10,000,000 campaign for Regimen Tablets, which the indictment calls worthless diet product. The Brooklyn grand jury that handed down the charges said that the media involved — newspapers, magazines, radio and tv—were innocent victims of the alleged fraud. Cited as carriers of the ad were the CBS web show, "Keep Talking," NBC's "Today," and ABC's "American Bandstand," along with Look and Life mags, the New York Daily News and N.Y. Mirror and several other newspapers.

The grand jury said that tv blurbs showing Regimen users slimming down from week to week were phony, that actually the persons on view were on stringent diets. The drug firms were charged with inducing a medical doctor to "alter and change the conclusion of a clinical test he had performed on the tablets" to indicate a favorable result.

Agency and company individuals involved could receive sentences totaling 266 years each, and the drug firms could be fined up to $175,000.

'BURKE'S LAW' AS HOT BRITISH ENTRY

"Burke's Law," the Four Star-ABC-TV gumshoe series, has been renewed by the three commercial webs in England, Granada, Associated Rediffusion and ATV, which last August bought the first 13 episodes.

The UK webs have now purchased 32 episodes in all, covering the entire year's production of the show. Since the show, starring Gene Barry as millionaire detective, hit the British airwaves it has consistently ranked high in the ratings. Sale was made through Manny Reiner, veepee and general manager of Four Star Television International.

Metromedia Junketing Newsmen to Europe On Operation Schoenbrun

In line with recent signing of David Schoenbrun as world affairs correspondent, WNEW Radio, N.Y. and other Metromedia radio outlets are transporting 20 U.S. newspapermen to attend French President Charles DeGaulle's press conference in Paris Friday (31). The U.S. group will be the largest single delegation at the De Gaulle question-and-answer session.

Schoenbrun has also arranged a special briefing of the U.S. group by Charles Bohlen, U.S. Ambassador to France; John Tuthill, the U.S. ambassador to the Common Market, and Jean Monnet, regarded as the "Father of the Common Market." The group of U.S. newsmen will also fly to Vienna as guests of the Austrian Republic with hoopla set at the Schoenbrun (get it?) Palace.

Schoenbrun's reports are aired daily on WNEW Radio and the five other Metromedia radio outlets.

Canadian Tapped As Steve Allen Producer

Daryl Duke, a producer for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., has been signed by Westinghouse Broadcasting as the new producer of the nighly 90-minute "Steve Allen Show," originating in Hollywood. He'll start Feb. 1, working under Chet Collier, the show's exec producer and general manager of WBC Productions Inc.

Duke has been with CBC for the past 11 years, working on the "Quest" program among others. He replaces Milt Hoffman on the Allen series.

FCC Now Wants to Know: What Are You Doing To Meet Community Needs?

Washington, Jan. 28.

FCC plans to revise its radio station application forms putting new stress on what broadcasters are doing to learn their community's listening needs.

Oral arguments of the revised AM and FM application forms will be heard April 23.

The application form changes resemble those recently proposed for television applicants. On the new forms, applicants would have to tell what they are doing to "ascertain the audience needs and interests of their communities, and the manner in which they are meeting them."

These regulations would be asked on forms for new stations, renewals, transfers of control and major changes in existing station.

Deadline for requesting time at the oral argument is April 1.

Pre-Testing Of Brit. TV Shows A La Schwerin

London, Jan. 28.

Would British television program companies be prepared to raise the ante and pay more than the normal going rate for an imported series if there was a built-in guarantee of high ratings? That question, so far unanswered, is behind the thinking of the Schwerin Organization in Britain in contemplating the introduction of a new sampling service.

Currently, Schwerin is conducting an extensive research survey on behalf of Associated Television in a bid to determine the ingredients that contribute to program success. That survey, using a sample of about 1,300 heads, is being carried out at private theatres in London and Birmingham, and is also analyzing audience reaction to commercials. Indeed, preliminary results indicate that the commercials form an integral part of independent television, and are among the contributory factors to the success in the ratings battle versus the BBC.

Extending the experience already gained, Schwerin analysts believe they can offer a valuable service to American programmers who have series available for the British networks. As the continuance of the 14% quota for imported programming keeps Britain as a buyer's market it is felt that there are obvious advantages to the peddler whose program goes through the sampling mill and is given a thumbs-up verdict, which would ease the task of negotiating a network deal. On the other hand, it is believed that not too much would be lost if the sample test showed only lukewarm approval, as prices could hardly be expected to fall below the present level, and there is always the program buyer around who is prepared to play his own hunch.

Deke Heyward Set As 'Uncle Wiggily' Scripter

Louis (Deke) Heyward has been signed as writer for the "Uncle Wiggily" series going into production under the Jayark Films Corp. banner with Duke Goldstone as production veepee.

Heyward has a string of kidvid credits and was producer-writer on the Dick Clark dance show and a writer for the Garry Moore show. "Uncle Wiggily," which started as a daily column in the Newark Evening News in 1910, was a popular newspaper syndicate feature and, in book form, sold more than 15,000,000 copies. Jayark prexy Reub Kaufman got the rights to the series from Roger Garis, son of the creator, Howard Garis.

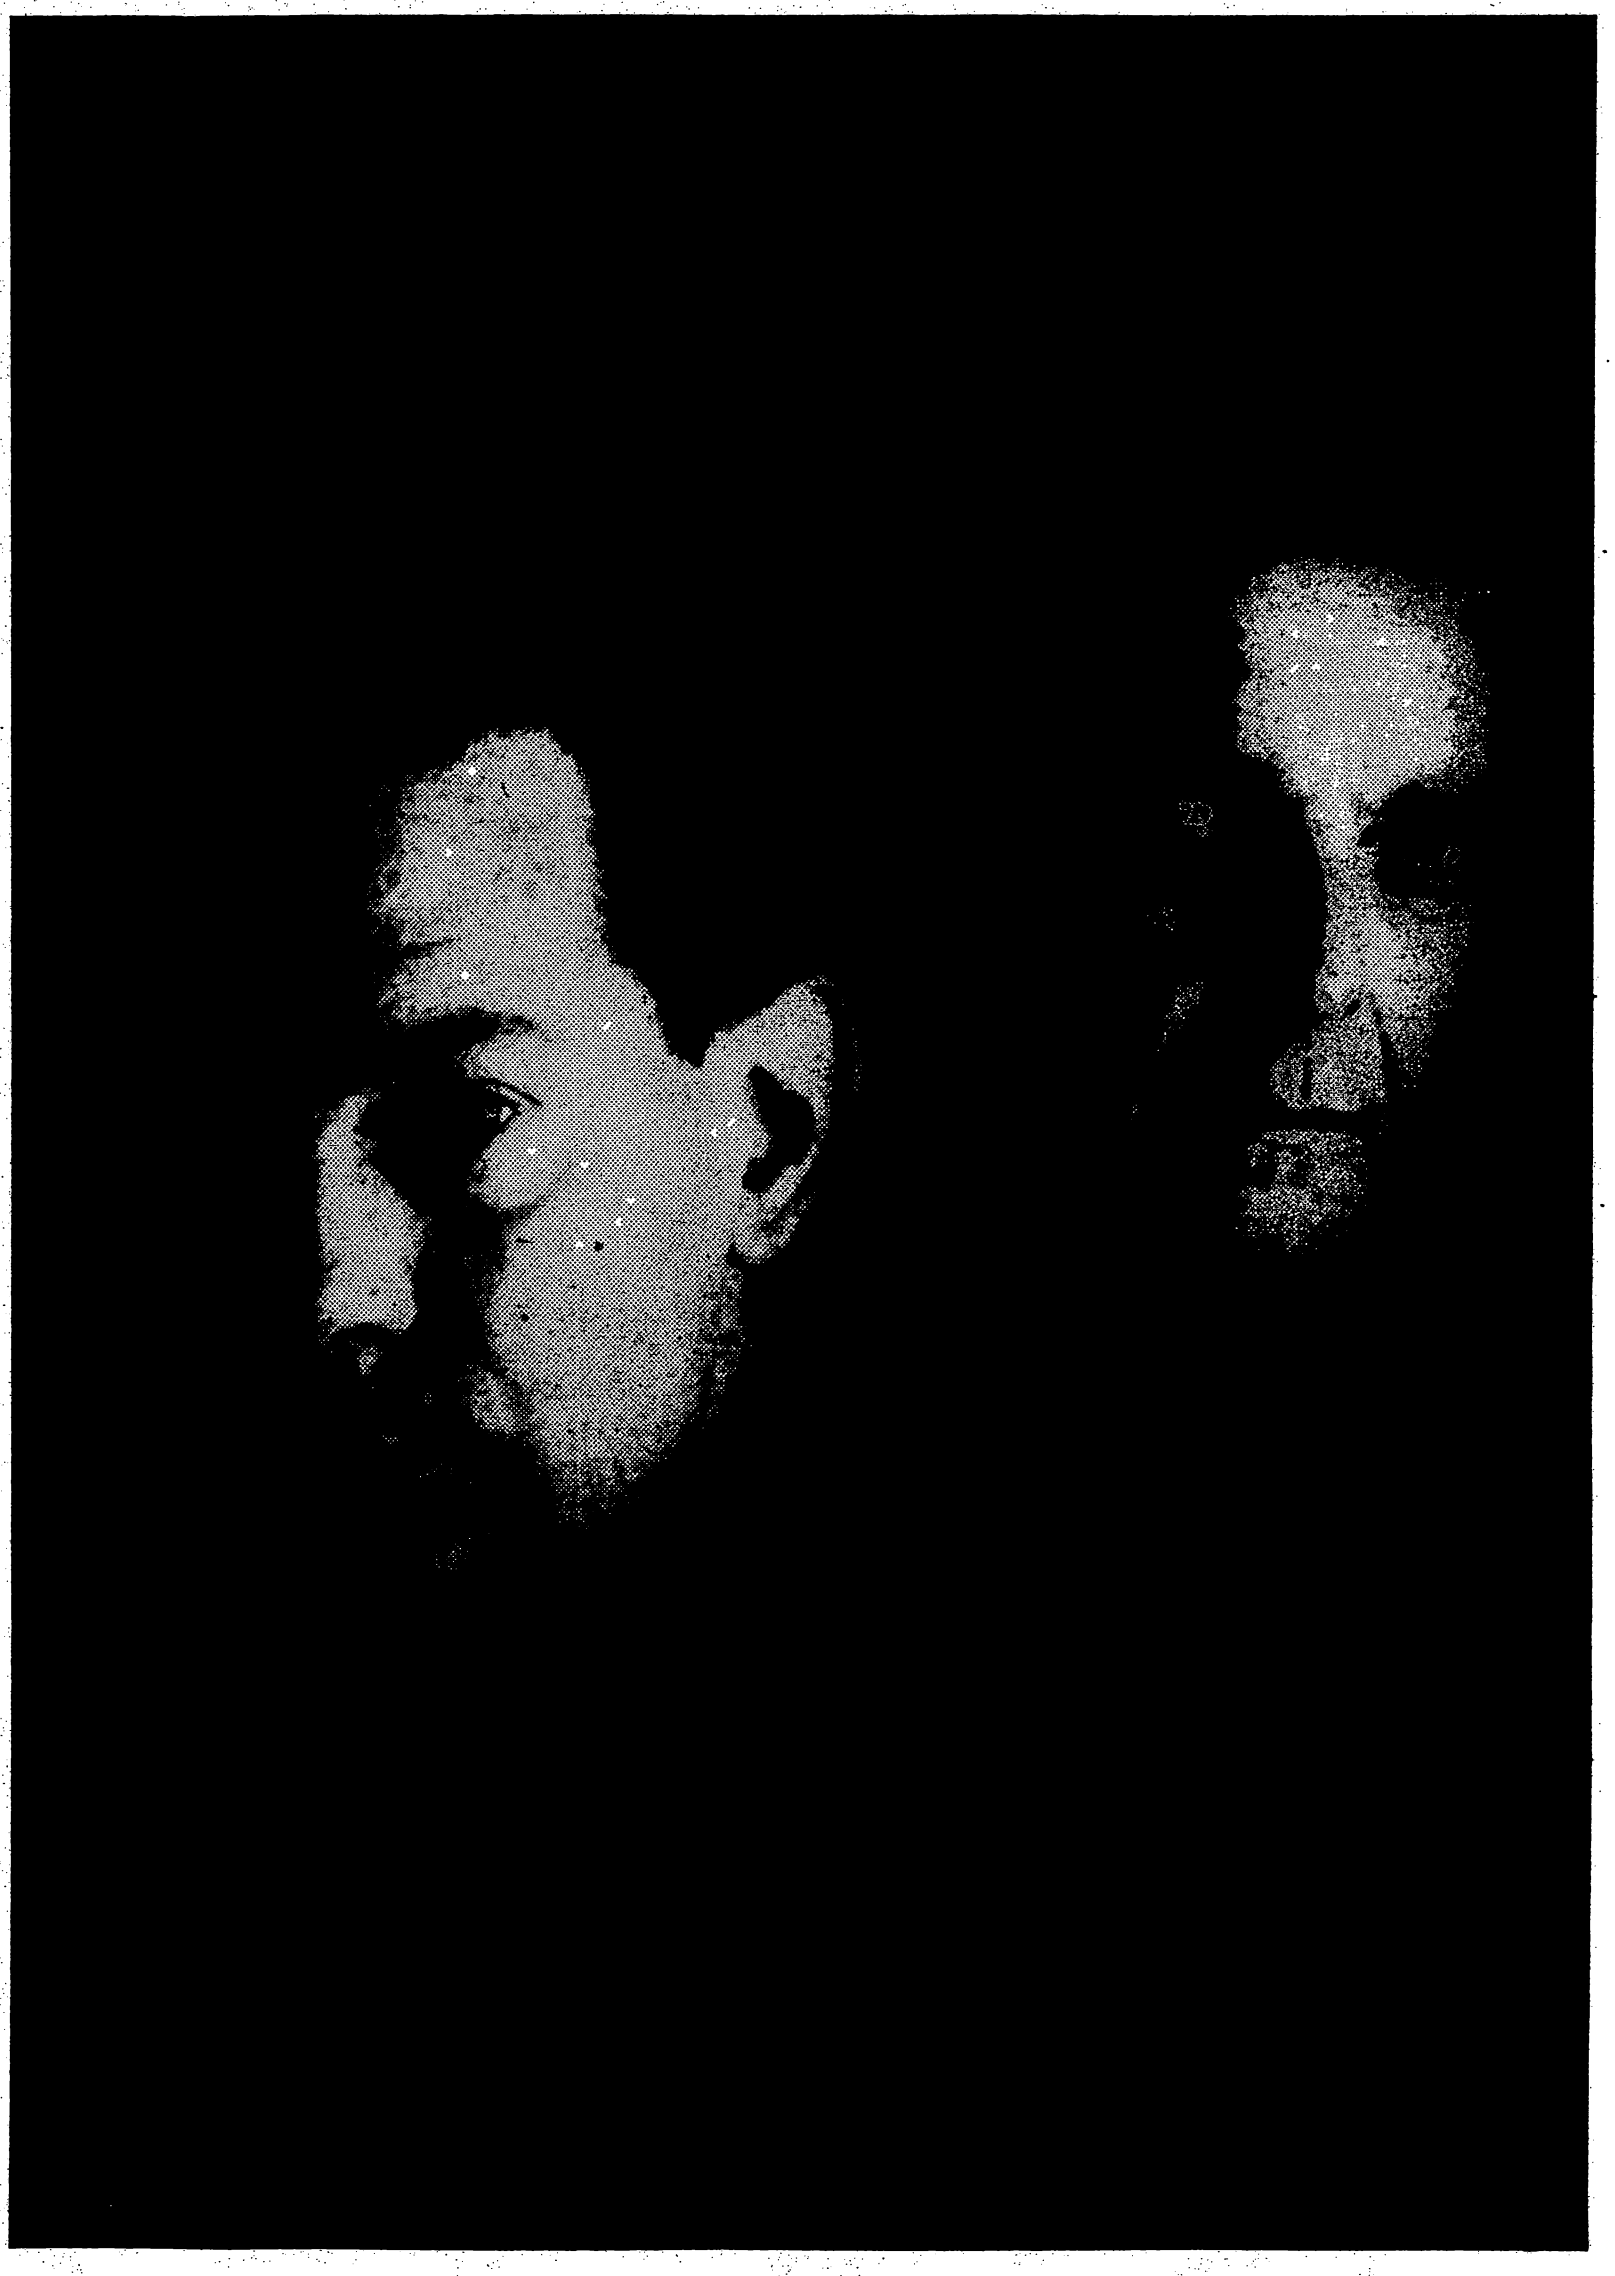
NEXT TO HUNTLEY BRINKLEY...

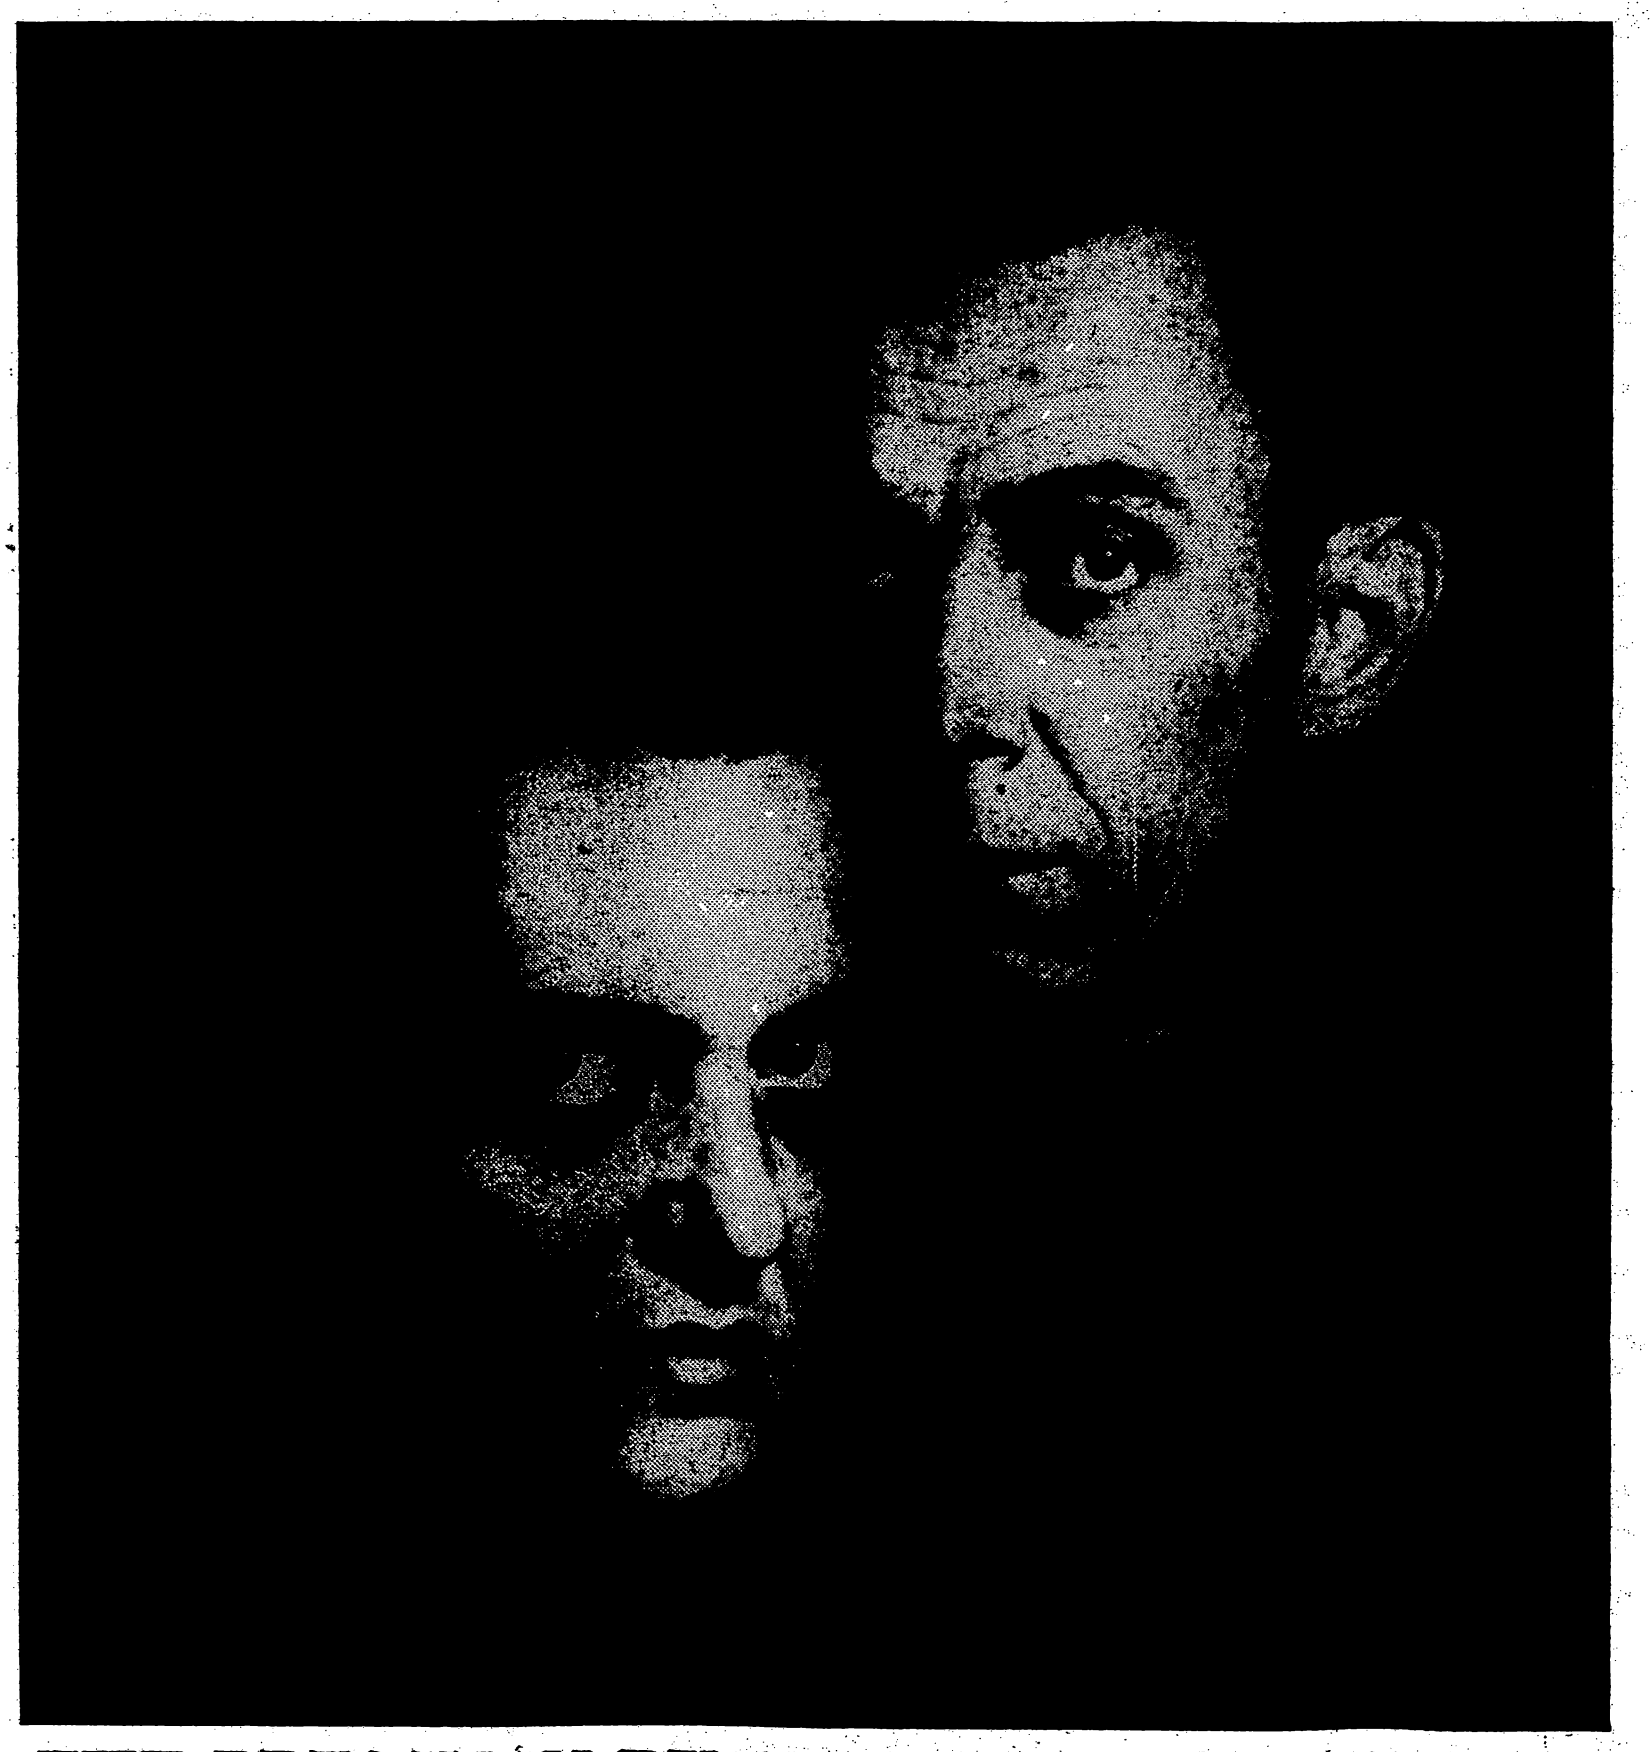


IN NEW YORK

When you hear someone on television say, "Well, Gabe—," it could be Mayor Wagner at City Hall; a fire captain at the scene of a tenement blaze; or a man-in-the-street reacting to a new parking regulation. They all know WNBC-TV's Gabe Pressman as one of the most ubiquitous, hard-working newsmen around the New York scene.

Equally well-respected is his partner on the early evening Report, Bill Ryan, who—during New York's four-month newspaper strike—won hordes of new admirers through his work as anchorman of WNBC-TV's widely applauded, 90-minute "Newspaper Of The Air" each weekday.

Backed up by the first-rate facilities of NBC News, Ryan and Pressman see to it that no important news story in New York, New Jersey or Connecticut ever goes unnoticed. Theirs is one of broadcasting's most challenging assignments. Yet, as two fathers accustomed to keeping up with the antics of a dozen offspring (combined total), Gabe and Bill consider keeping tabs on a mere three States a comparative breeze.



THE PRESSMAN-RYAN REPORT ON WNBC-TV

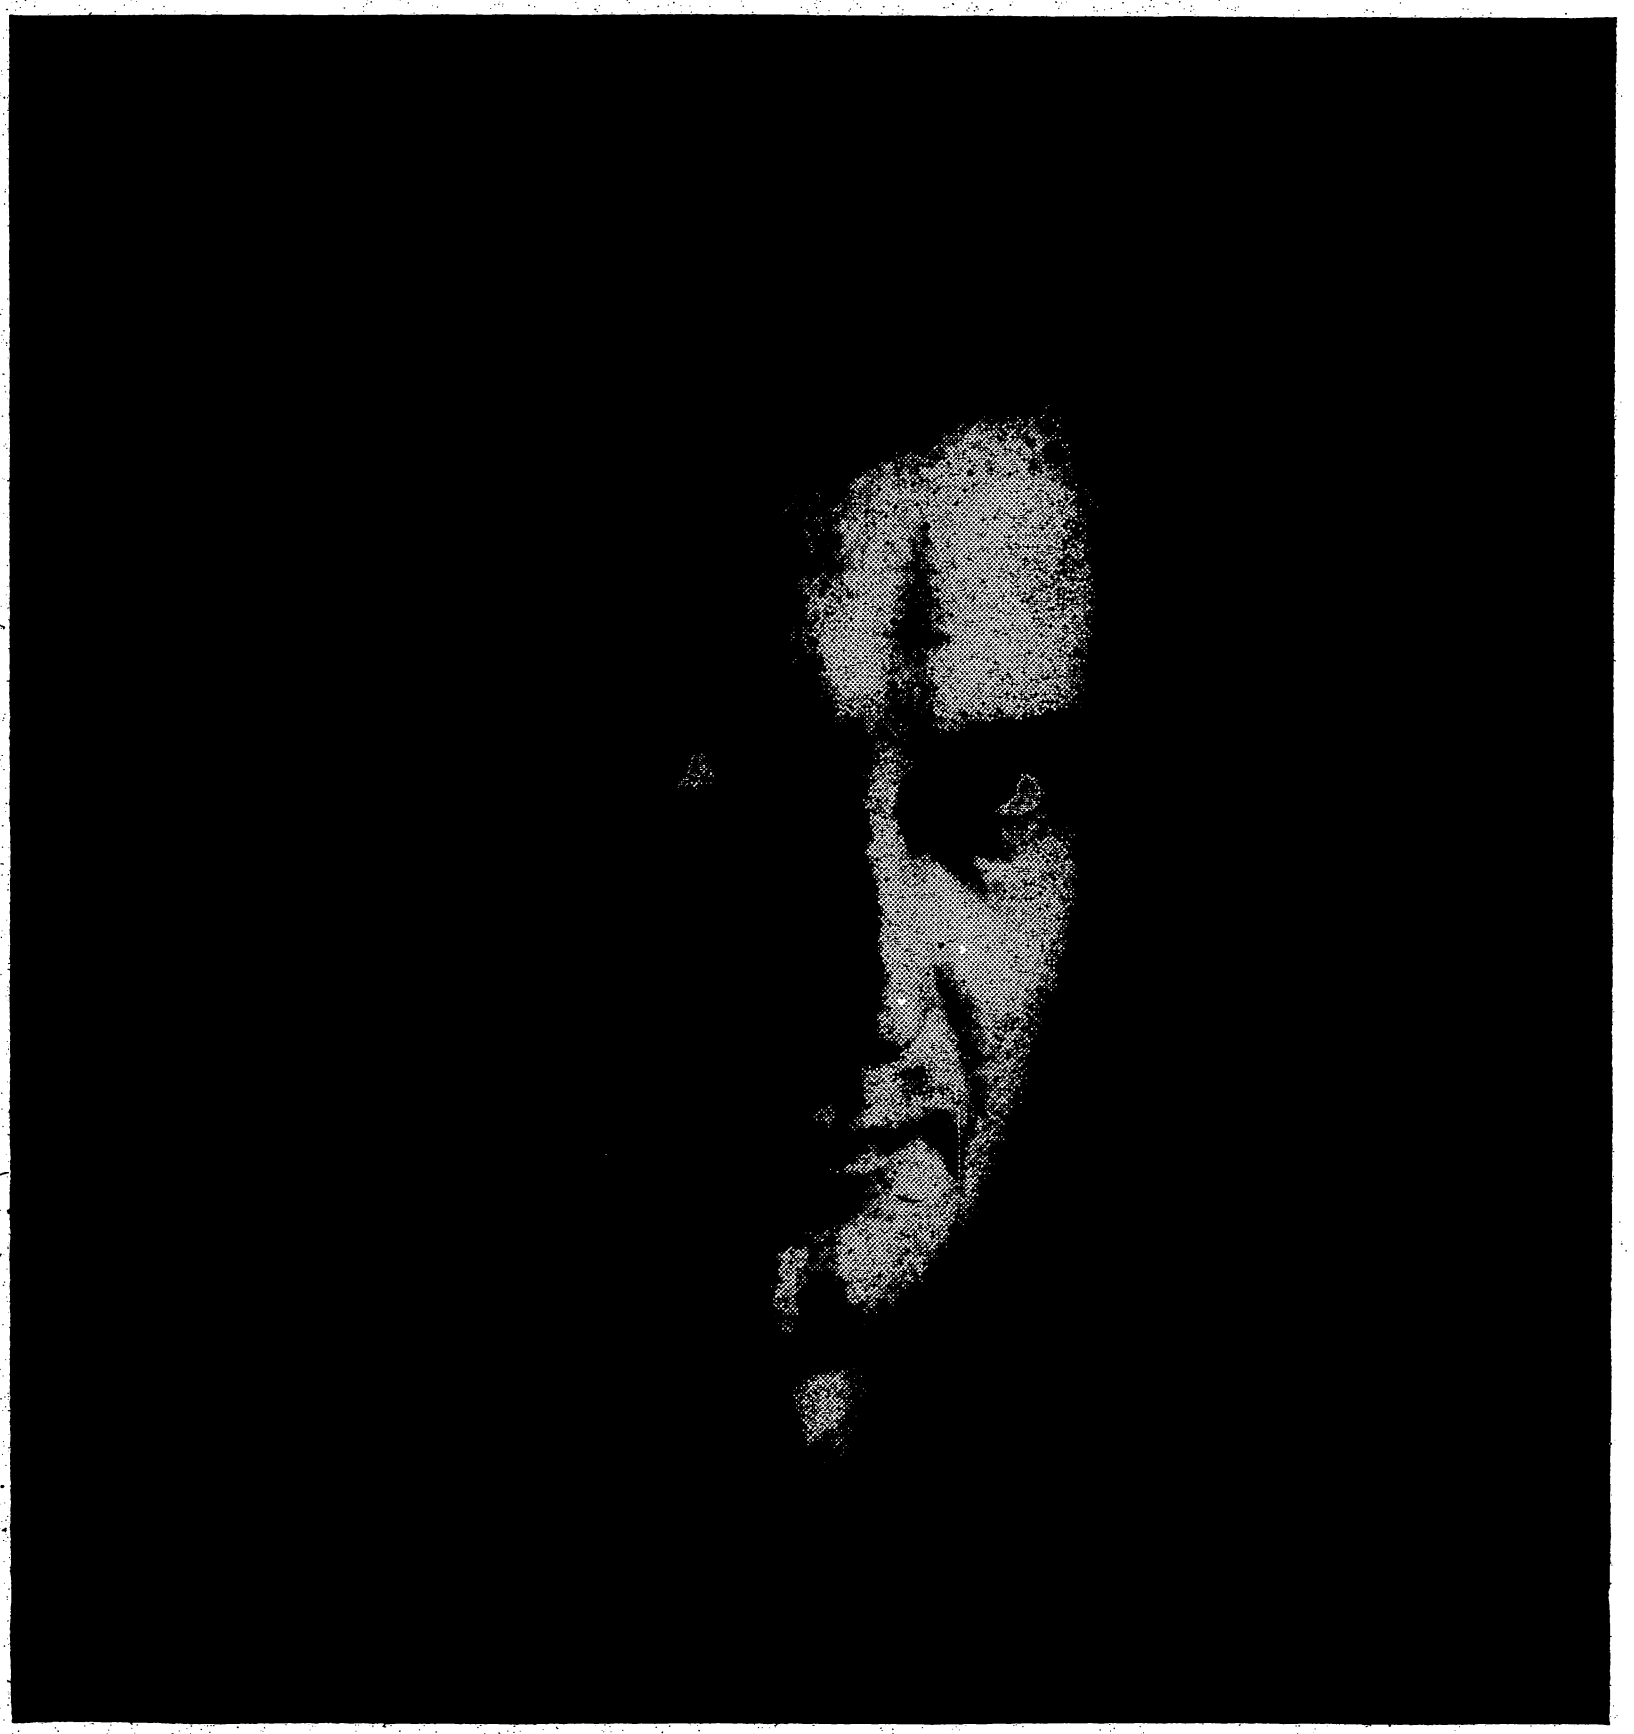
learned succinct broadcasting and straight shooting as a wartime radio operator-gunner. He has never lost either knack, which goes far to explain why he has long been Philadelphia's favorite newscaster. That, and the alert professionalism of WRCV-TV's award-winning news staff.

One of the staff's most shining half-hours is 6:00 to 6:30 each weeknight. It includes Vince Leonard, with the latest and liveliest local bulletins; a fully detailed report by meteorologist sports—all that Philadelphians need to know about the home front before assuming the global perspectives of Huntley/Brinkley.

Vince comes back each night for the news at eleven; acts as host on the public affairs program "Pinpoint"; narrates many of WRCV-TV's prize-winning documentaries. Vince, Wally and Jim are all pilots, and some weekends they fly together. It's the only time WRCV-TV News doesn't have its feet planted solidly in Philadelphia.



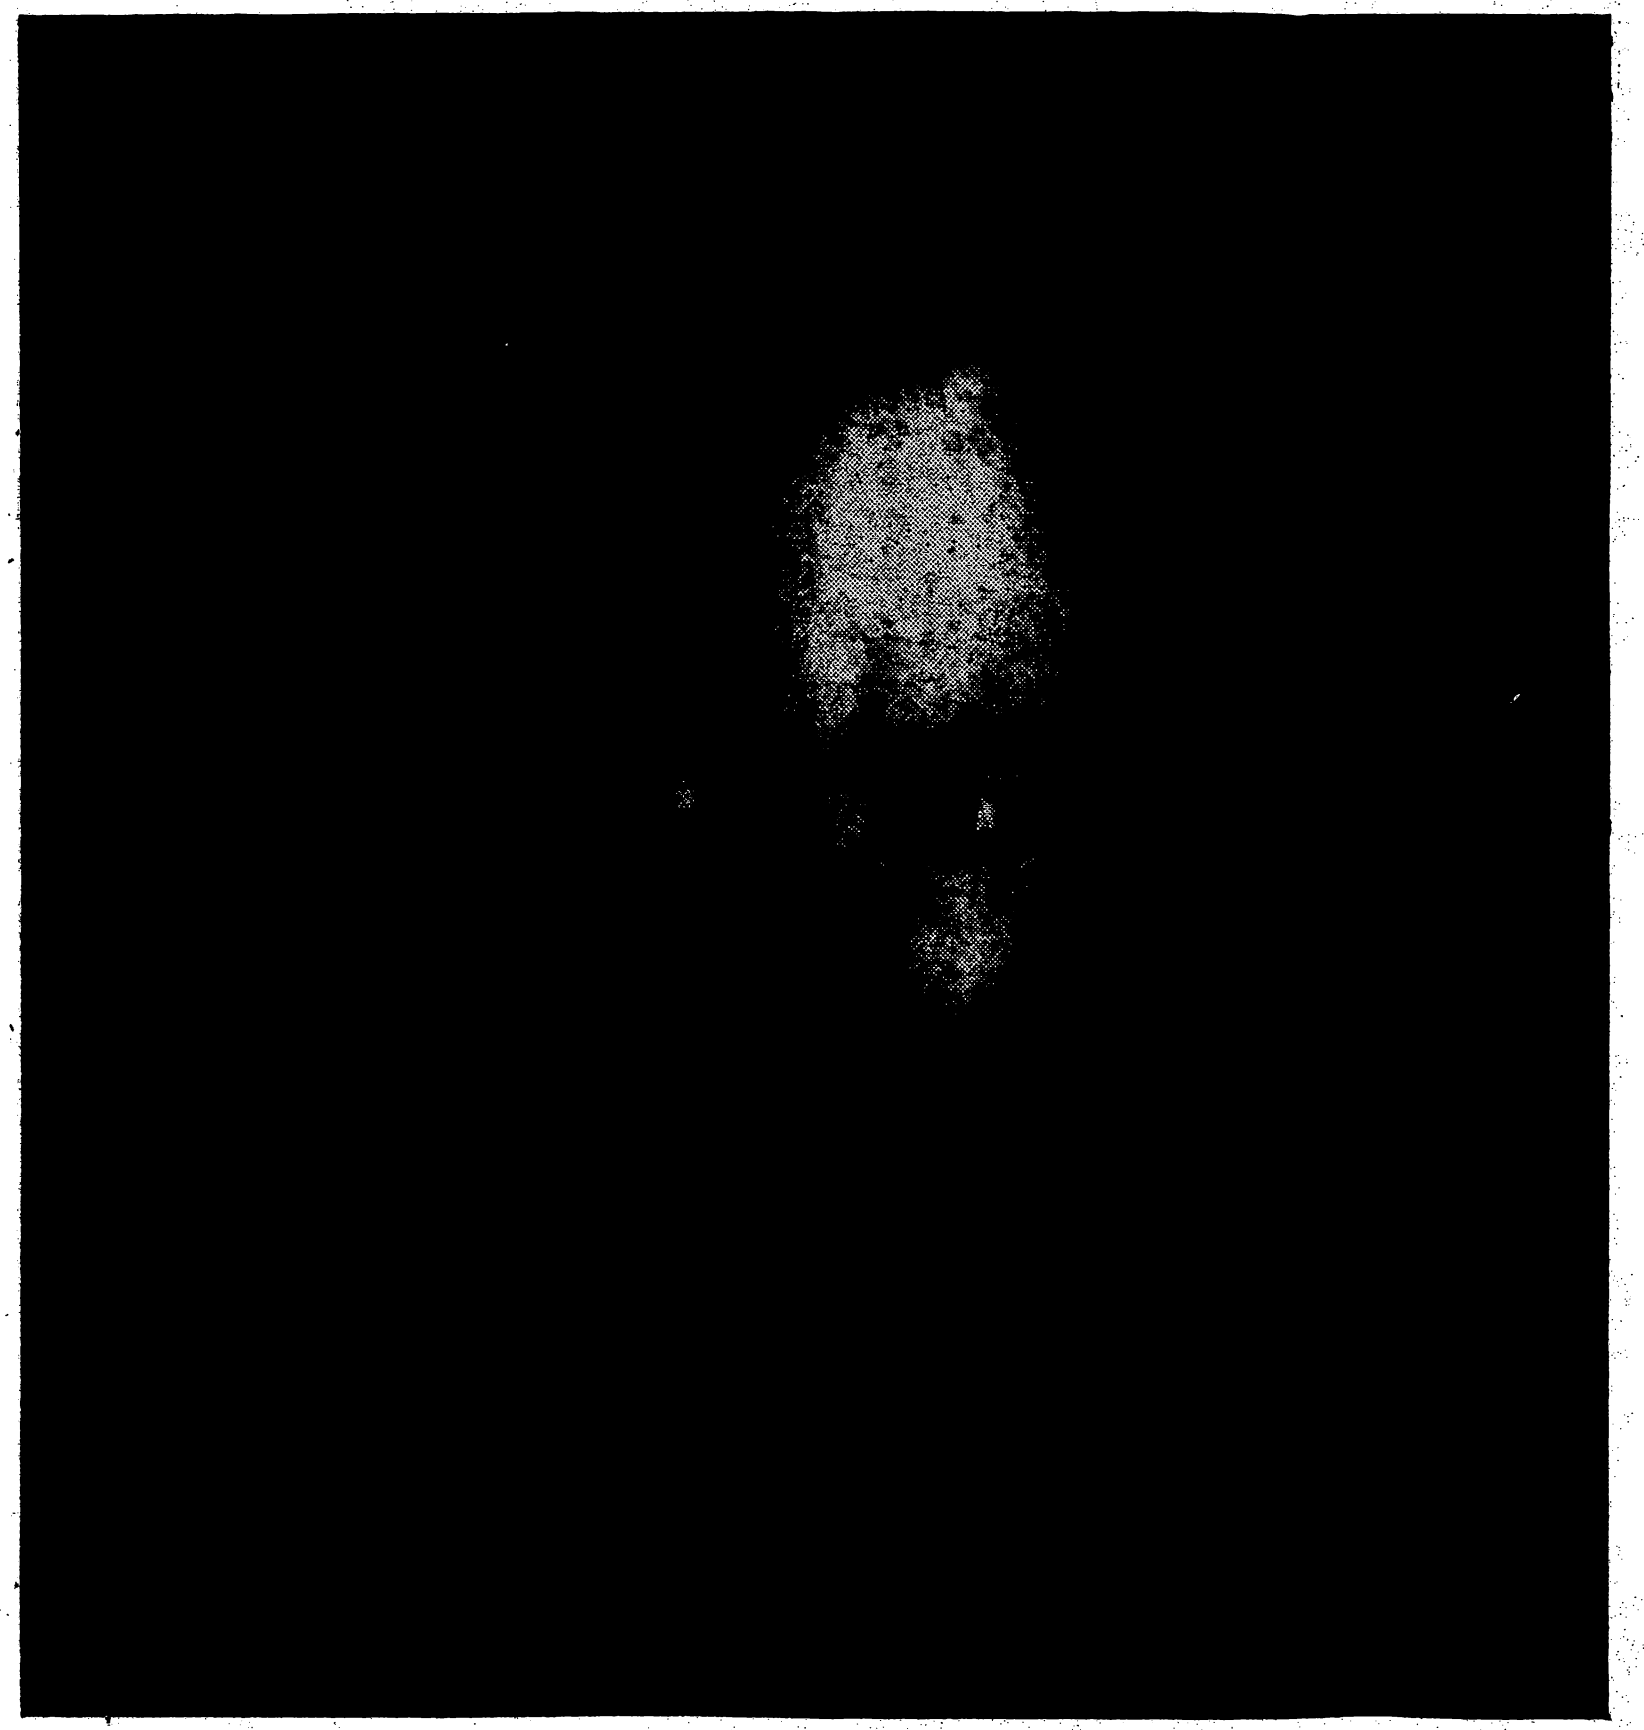
VINCE LEONARD AND THE NEWS ON WRCV-TV

IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

If the Secretary of State's grocery list were news, WRC-TV's Russ Ward could score a clean beat—because Mrs. Ward and Mrs. Dean Rusk happen to shop at the same super-market. That's how it is in Washington, where often the headline-makers are also the folks next door.

Local news-gathering can be pretty complicated beside the Potomac: the seating plan for a private luncheon may be a bigger story than a head-of-government's arrival, and woe betide the reporter who fails to tell Washingtonians what they want to know about what their neighbors are up to, or are not up to.

This is definitely not a failing of Russ Ward, or WRC-TV's week-night "News 4 Washington," which devotes a full half-hour to careful capital coverage. Russ brings eleven years as an NBC News Washington specialist to his assignment as "News 4" anchorman. He, as well as the rest of the WRC-TV news staff, knows dog-bites-man can be a big story in Washington, if the right dog's involved. When it happens, they've got it.



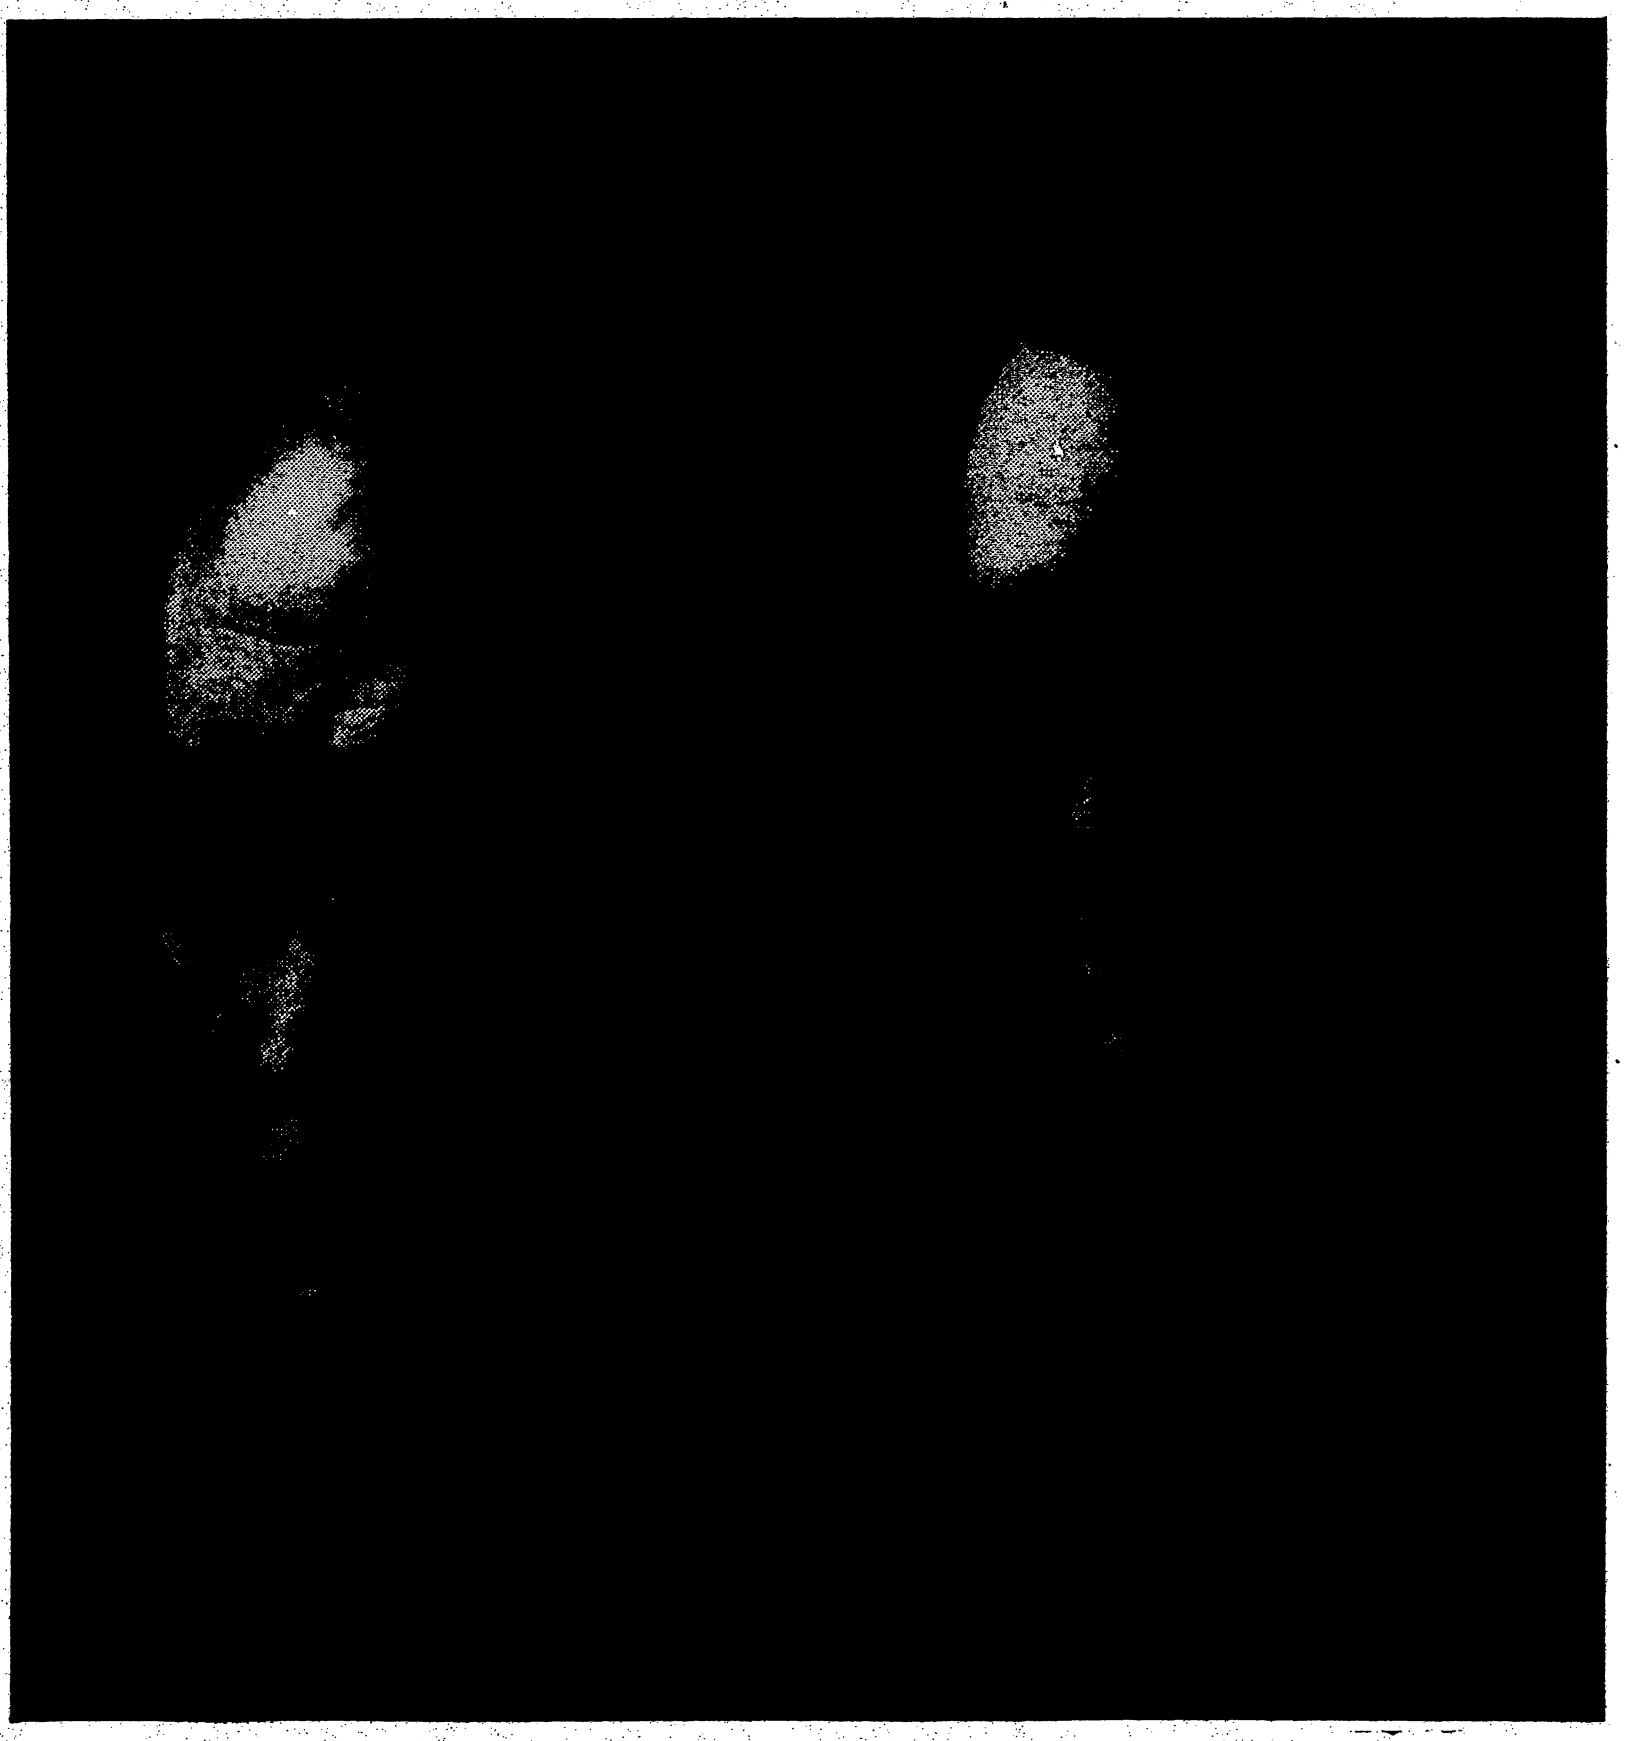
RUSS WARD-NEWS 4 WASHINGTON ON WRC-TV

IN CHICAGO

The most important and informative hour for Chicagoans is ushered in by Huntley/Brinkley, followed by "NBC News Chicago Report" with Charles McCuen and Len O'Connor. When they, plus meteorologist Harry Volkman, finish their weeknightly stint, Chicago has got the news for fair.

Anchorman McCuen joined NBC News, Chicago, after two decades of broadcasting in his native Iowa and in Minnesota, where Twin City residents still remember his meticulously researched reports on their civic problems. Since O'Connor is a lifetime practitioner of the hard-hitting Chicago school, his observations are not fit for ostriches. (They do, however, attract the largest audience of adult humans in their time period.)

Despite marked differences in style, McCuen and O'Connor have much in common. Both are midwestern to the bone. Both stand over six feet tall; saw overseas service in World War II. Between them they have eight children; a collection of broadcasting's most meaningful awards—and Chicago's close attention when they speak.



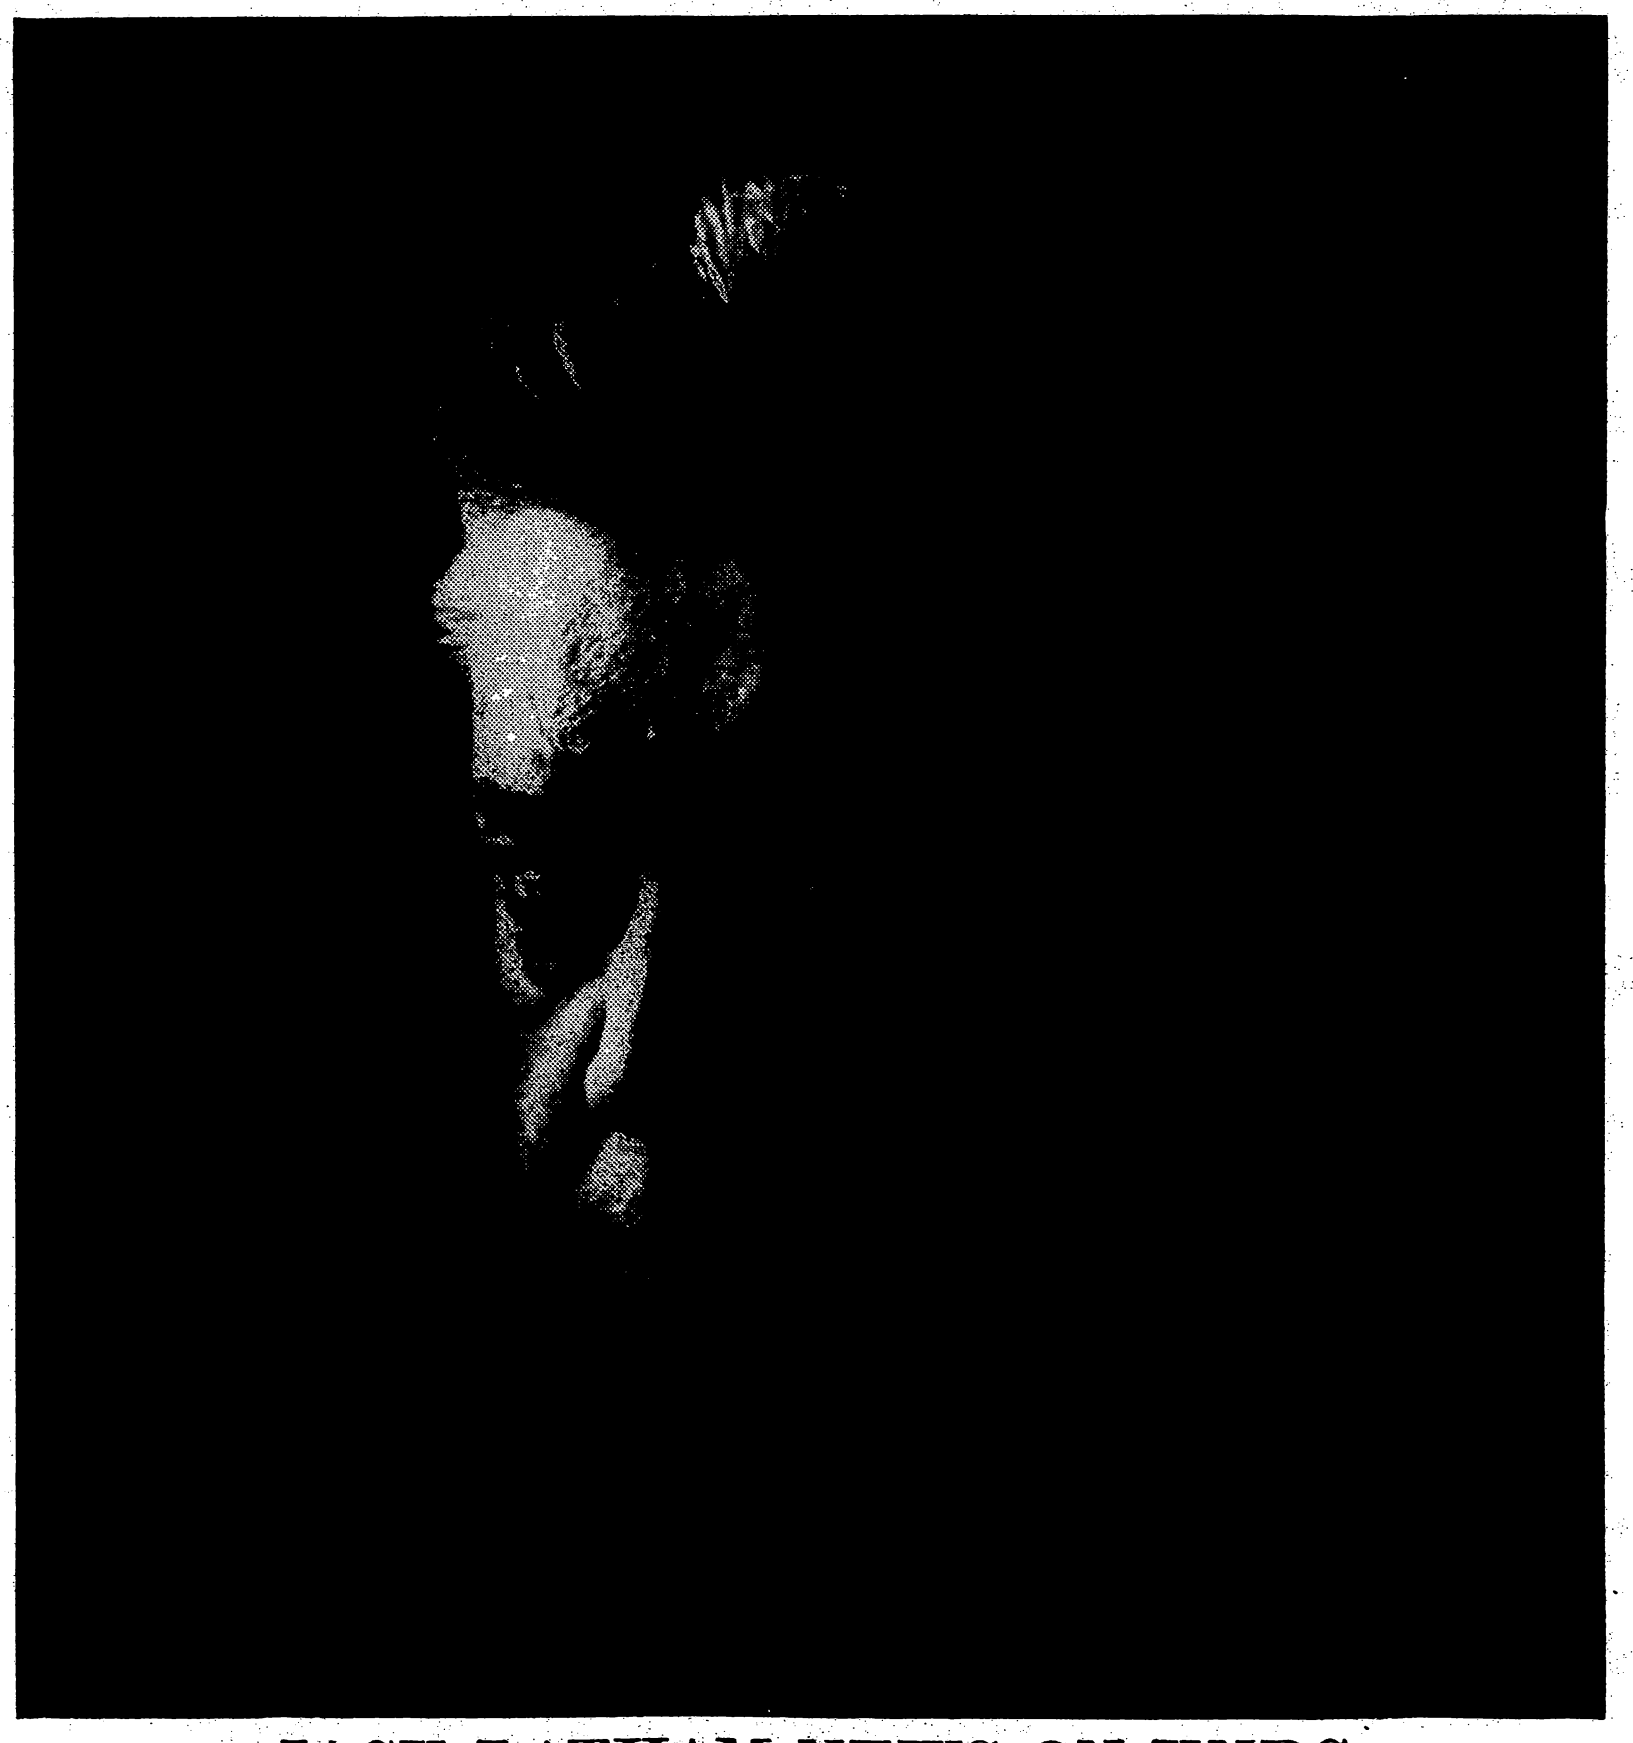
O'CONNOR-McCUEN NEWS ON WNBQ

IN LOS ANGELES

As you might expect, global-minded Southern California's most honored "local" TV reporter makes the whole world his beat. Jack Latham covers West Berlin as well as West Covina, and his keen foreign and domestic KNBC reports have won him two consecutive "Emmies."

KNBC backs Latham and his "KNBC News—Los Angeles Report" (5:45-6:30 pm, in color) with the area's most experienced news staff: veteran KNBC correspondent Elmer Peterson; newsmen Bill Brown and Bob Wright; sportscaster Chick Hearn, and weatherman Gordon Weir. They cover all the news in a fast-moving 45 minutes, just before the "Huntley-Brinkley Report" each week night.

Anchorman Latham also stands by nightly for the 11 pm "KNBC News—Los Angeles Report," 15 minutes of the headlines and stories that highlight tomorrow's news. A golfer and waterskier, Jack Latham says reporting is his first love. That's obvious to the many Southern Californians who look to Latham for the news.



JACK LATHAM NEWS ON KNBC

IN ALL 5 CITIES

The Monday-through-Friday evening news programs that adjoin "The Huntley-Brinkley Report" on the NBC Owned television stations represent the nation's finest examples of local coverage. They are produced under the supervision of NBC News, which has earned broadcasting's largest share of awards for local, national and international reporting.

On these five TV stations, seasoned journalists report the news to their immediate-and-surrounding communities with the same zeal and accuracy with which NBC News' Chet and David cover the national and international scene.

That's why—whether it's a neighborhood bank robbery or a Geneva summit conference—a viewer's best bet for evening news (in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Washington or Los Angeles) is the back-to-back, award-winning news coverage on his NBC Owned Station.

Fading Role of U. S. Telefilms In British TV Market; Impact On Com'l TV Network Practically Nil

By ROGER WATKINS

London, Jan. 28.

There is a rumble around American telefilm distributors here which, in some cases, has erupted into blatant cries for "Justice." For the noticeable absence of American tv programming from the top rating strata in many areas has caused comment in the national press. Much of this has seen national byliners quick to run down the value of foreign shows and, at the same time, to bally the superiority of British programming.

Sparked way back when BBC-TV topper Kenneth Adam publicly forecast the demise of American shows in the face of local productions, the seed thus planted in British newsmen's minds has begun to sprout. The word is around that offshore shows are slipping.

What the industry here knows, however, is that certain facts seldom emerge—even if they are taken into consideration. "Off the top," the picture presented by the lay press seems accurate, for it is true that during 1963 the top 20 shows in the U.K. did not include one American production. It is equally accurate to say that where once Yank shows dominated local top 10 lists, nowadays it is unusual to get more than one U.S. telefilm in the same charts.

But, importantly, the role of the American show on the local networks has changed in the past few seasons. It is no longer being set up as the key rating earner upon which stations stake their prime time "all." It has been designated, instead, a possibly more difficult task, and one of certainly no less importance (though significantly a lot of the glory is not in attendance). The Yank show on British tv these days is a "troubleshooter."

It's regarded as a surefire show which can be brought up to cut down the opposition's grasp on the top ratings. Commercial network schedulers now move a "Ben Casey" to face a local "Z Cars" on BBC-TV which without such hot competition could easily ascend to the highest top 20 pinnacles. Result of such a clash more often than not means each show is "wounded" while neither emerges truly victorious.

Other "troubleshooting" formula currently being practiced by both webs, is the slotting of two hot Yank contenders against one another—as per "Dr. Kildare" (BBC) against "Empire" (A-R),—

Sohio's Cutback

Cleveland, Jan. 28.

Standard Oil of Ohio is continuing to cut back on broadcast programming for spots with the announcement it has relinquished its sponsorship of tv baseball.

Earlier this month, Sohio cancelled its radio news programs after having axed television news. The oil company had been a baseball sponsor for over six years and it is expected a cigaret company may take over.

John Kinsella, McCann-Marschalk account exec for the oiler, said the money allocated for programming is now going into a heavy spot outlay. Incidentally, the agency announced it will soon move into new quarters with 18,000 square feet of floor space providing greater flexibility for staffers.

In another baseball note, onetime Cleveland Indian fireballer, Bob Score, has been named as color voice for Tribe telecasts with Bob Neal, who does play by play.

Ziv Fights 250G Award In 'Sea Hunt' Plagiarism Claim Made by Frogman

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Last month an L.A. Supreme Court jury of eight men and four women returned a verdict award to Supreme Court Judge A. A. Scott of $250,000 damages in a suit filed by three men charging that their ideas had been plagiarized as the basis of "Sea Hunt," the television series starring Lloyd Bridges.

The defendants made a motion yesterday (22), upheld by Judge Scott, on the grounds that the evidence presented in court by the plaintiffs did not support the jury award. The motion for the judgment for the defendants negates the verdict by the 12 jurors. Cantillon said that he would appeal.

The suit had been filed by Frank Donahue, a World War II frogman (reported to have been on a diving mission in the Dutch West Indies last December), and producers William Webb and Richard Ross. The three had brought suit against Ziv Television Programs, Inc., which produced the series, and producer Ivan Tors. James P. Cantillon, attorney for the plaintiffs, said that they had submitted script treatments and a format to Ziv for a series called "Underwater Legion" which had been turned down. Later, he said, "Sea Hunt" showed up on tv and the trio complained that it contained some of their ideas.

Phyllis Diller Special Sold to 9 Stations

The "Phyllis Diller Show," a special produced by WABC-TV, N.Y., and telecast locally last November, has been sold in nine stations by ABC Films. The show is being syndicated in its original 90-minute form and in an edited one-hour version.

Pacted todate are WNAC-TV, Boston; WFAA-TV, Dallas; KTSM, El Paso; KHVH, Honolulu; KBTV, Denver; WTEV, Providence; KABC-TV, Los Angeles; KGO-TV, San Francisco; and WBKB-TV, Chicago.

NAB Told to 'Stop Acting Like Amateurs' As Pierson Keys Meet

Athens, Ga., Jan. 28.

An industry debate at the U. of Georgia triggered warnings by Washington communications attorney Theodore Pierson against both the National Assn. of Broadcasters and the Federal Communications Commission.

"Research will show," Pierson declared, "the utter absurdity of a few people in Washington, whether on N. Street or Pennsylvania Avenue, attempting to devise formulas that in every station, in every community, at any time, will provide effective communication."

Pierson added that he is not suggesting that NAB be abolished, but declared it is high time that they "stop acting like amateurs." Washington attorney was one of the panelists at the 19th annual Georgia Radio-Television Institute, sponsored jointly by the Georgia Assn. of Broadcasters, Inc., and the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism of Georgia U.

Washington attorney called on the broadcasting industry to conduct more research, to improve professional knowledge and skills and to dedicate itself to a code of ethics that leaves discretion to the broadcasters. "In the long run," he added, "knowledge and ethics should be the real regulation."

WBC's Syndicated Tape Shows Hittin' 15-Hr. a Wk. Pace

In a market virtually blanketed by film product, Westinghouse's syndication division, WBC Program Sales, is spinning out tape shows for local markets by the mile. After a long, hard pull, WBC Sales, under v.p. Al Sussman, is now the only surviving major syndicator of videotape shows in the business.

WBC is currently delivering well over 15 hours weekly in syndicated tape shows. Accounting for most of this programming are the daily 90-minute Steve Allen and Mike Douglas shows. The Allen show, which really put WBC Program Sales into business has now been sold into 42 markets while the Douglas show, which was launched into syndication last November, is now seen in 13 markets. Other taped WBC shows include the "Meaning of Communism," a series of 30 half-hour shows produced in cooperation with Time Inc., and a group of 10 one-hour children's specials. Shortly upcoming will be the two-hour version of the Broadway legit drama, "The Advocate," which Westinghouse angeled and telecast on its own stations opening night. The only filmed series in the WBC library is the group of Intertel documentaries.

The high costs and uncertain quality that have been the customary shortcomings of tape are being licked by the Westinghouse duplicating operation in Pittsburgh, the main distribution point for the syndicated tape shows. Under Ralph Cunningham, the duplicating center runs non-stop around the clock seven days a week to keep up with the demand.

The Allen show is now in the black as a result of the syndication

Those 'I'm-For-Real' TV Pitches

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Those gushing, ostensibly extemporaneous product endorsements on tv by housewives and other "ordinary" folk, may catapult some of these amateur pitchmen into the financial stratosphere formerly reserved for the pros, under terms of the new AFTRA-SAG pact with ad agencies, sponsors and producers.

Additionally, new proviso might take some of the lustre off ploy for free-loading sponsors and hence send some of the work back to actors, animators and others whose livelihood is gained from standard filmed blurbs.

Possibilities were indicated last week by an SAG spokesman elaborating on the article of the new pact which covers "testimonials" and "hidden camera" commercials. Formerly, he noted, off-the-cuff blurbsters were paid or not paid according to individual agreements but are now in line for full guild rates on a per-day basis and for residuals.

Spokesman acknowledged that "testimonial" ads had had some effect on thesps' employment in teleblurbs.

Larry Kilty, biz rep for Cartoonists IA Local 839, said that while only 10 or 15% of his membership is regularly dependent on commercial employment, within group, the "hidden camera" blurbs had effected some loss of work. He observed, however, that types of commercials regularly go in and out of vogue insisting that present "I-am-a-real-person" pitches were "about played out." He foresees trend back shortly to animated and other standard blurb varieties.

Desilu's Dinsmore Cites H'wood Vidpix Abroad as 'Making Friends'

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Hollywood telepix have made friends for this country wherever they're shown in the foreign markets so all this talk about damaging our image abroad is a lot of nonsense. This is the assessment of globetrotting Richard Dinsmore, sales veepee for Desilu, whose coinage of "esperantovision" he traced to the broad implications of its impact. "While languages around the world are different but many of the pictures are the same."

"Desilu happens to have produced the one show ("Untouchables") that politicians, and I'm afraid some of our competitors, use as an example of the type of show that makes America look bad to a foreign audience," saids Dinsmore. Desi Arnaz called it "a documentary of a period in our history."

Importance of the world market is minimized by too many producing companies who should be and aren't peddling their wares in the foreign markets, commented Dinsmore, and cited that in 62 foreign countries there are 1,030 tv stations compared to 575 in U. S. "Either we get out and get the business or else we'll be swamped by foreign competition. If you think the British are finished, just take a trip around the world as I've done and see what they're doing in India, Singapore, Hong Kong, Australia, New Zealand, Africa and almost any place you can name."

Desilu as well as other tv producers, are helping to improve the American image overseas and will help to make American products and American ideas easier to sell through Esperantovision, he concluded.

Merle Harmon's Pact

Kansas City, Jan. 28.

Merle Harmon, longtime sportscaster here, has signed to do play-by-play of the Milwaukee Braves teamed with Tom Collins there for the 1964 season. His baseball experience dates back 12 years, beginning with Topeka in the Western Association, and including the former Kansas City Blues in the American Association and the Athletics in the American League from 1955 for seven years.

He leaves a post with KCMO-AM-FM-TV, and is due to begin in Milwaukee next month.

Feature Pix Repeats In Big Mpls. Payoff (Rating & Sponsors)

Minneapolis, Jan. 28.

Twin City television station heads say they're finding that if one of the movies on their shelves is of especially high quality they can keep on repeating it from time to good audience rating results and considerable financial benefit to themselves.

Accordingly, it's not all uncommon to have video reruns of motion pictures in this area, increasingly so now that the Hollywood films backlog is dwindling.

For example, on a recent Saturday night at 10:30 o'clock 20th-Fox's KMSP-TV not only programmed "Witness for the Prosecution" (UA) for its third time in two years, but also forked out considerable moolah to advertise it in the newspapers.

As opposition to "Witness," Time-Life's WTCN-TV resurrected for a third time, too, one of its movies, "The High and the Mighty" (WB), which on two previous occations has stood it in excellent stead ratingswise.

"This seems the thing to do from time to time," explained Don Swartz, KMSP-TV general manager. "We're convinced that we can keep on rescheduling a movie such as 'Witness,' especially in view of the fact that for its third showing we had no difficulty in lining up commercials to go with it."

Jersey Station on Carpet, Hanky-Panky Alleged

Washington, Jan. 28.

FCC told WNJR-AM, Newark, N.J., it faces a $1,000 fine for failing to report a sale of broadcast time to a time broker.

Commission said the station for several months broadcast the program "Celebrity Time" under contract to Celebrity Consultants, a New York advertising agency.

The consultants, acting as time brokers, resold the time, collected proceeds from the sales and supplied talent and advertising to the station, FCC said.

WNJR received a flat weekly rate from Celebrity, none of which was reported to the Commission.

Station has 30 days to contest or pay the forfeiture.

Boston Symph In New Syndie Cycle

Seven Arts Associated has made a deal with the Boston Symphony Orch for another series of 13 one-hour concerts batoned by Erich Leinsdorf. WNEW-TV, N. Y., and other Metrodmedia stations, have bought the second Boston Symphony package.

Seven Arts is reissuing internationally the first group of 13 Boston Symphony programs which were placed into distribution originally in 1962. This series was sold in over 40 markets in the U. S. and Canada. Previously offered for one-showing only, it is now being sold for multiple telecasts.

UA-TV's Reissues

United Artists Television now is packaging selected reissues for sale to tv.

Package, called "Seven Premiere Reissues," includes such pix as "Along Came Jones," Gary Cooper, Loretta Young; "Woman in the Window," Edward G. Robinson, Joan Bennett, Raymond Massey; "Tomorrow Is Forever," Claudette Colbert, Orson Welles, "The Stranger," and "Belle of the Yukon."

Sponsors Set For Douglas' 'America'

One of the few first-runners in syndication, Jack Douglas' "America," is off to a healthy start with two key Coast regionals. The half-hour series, distributed by CBS Films, locked up Whitehall Labs (American Home Products), for 11 markets and California Oil for 20 cities.

Two key regionals puts the series in a virtual sold out position west of the Rocky Mountains. Slated for telecasting in the fall, series is available in both color and black-and-white.

Series described as an "open studio" of sights, sounds and people in America, has separate subjects dealing with such topics as Cape Cod, Hollywood, Florida Everglades, Las Vegas as seen through the eyes of a showgirl there, a state fair, and other facets of Americana.

ITC 'Jungle 4' Sales In 19 More Markets

Independent Television Corp. has sold its "Jungle 4" feature pix in 19 more markets, bringing total markets sold to date to 58.

New sales include WTCN, Minneapolis; KLZ, Denver; WKRC, Cincinnati; WHEN, Syracuse; WTIC, Hartford; WBEN, Buffalo; WHAS, Louisville; KHVH, Honolulu; and WTEV, New Bedford.

Four pix in the Lippert Films group include "Thunder Over Sangoland," "Phantom of the Jungle," and "White Goddess."

WMCA's Ciggie Bounce

WMCA, R. Peter Straus' New York radio station, became among the first stations in the country to take the initiative in restricting cigaret advertising. In a letter to advertisers posted yesterday (Tues.), Straus said that after Jan. 31, no cigaret advertising will be accepted in the B. Mitchel Reed show which runs Monday through Saturday from 7 to 11 p.m. Move was dictated by the fact that Reed's show accents pop rock 'n' roll disks with special appeal to the coke set.

Straus said, however, that WMCA will continue to accept cigaret advertising in all of its other commercial programs with predominantly adult audiences. He said the station had no objection to advertising which "seeks the patronage of adults who have chosen to continue smoking despite the warnings about health." He also said that the station will continue to study further developments in research and marketing of tobacco products in evaluating its commercial policies "in harmony with the best principles of public service and responsible broadcasting."

SHAKER & THE CHI SHAKEUP

The 'Red' Quinlan Formula

Chicago, Jan. 28.

For a commercial-minded broadcaster with an eye on the profit sheet, Sterling "Red" Quinlan, who guides the destinies of Chi's enterprising WBKB-TV (and seemingly guides it very well, considering its enviable billings performance among all the ABC o & o's in '63), he has managed to cling to an idealism and a public service consciousness that's becoming a major topic of Windy City conversation. As a champion of lofty, ambitious programming designed to render good for the community, he is unique among his kind. He can match any rival's Nielsen with "Red"-fed respect.

At a time, indeed, of major concern within the industry itself over the perpetuation of standardized and "formula tv" and a recognized lack of creativity, initiative and experimentation, whether on a network or a station level, Quinlan's WBKB in recent months has been demonstrating a programming flair that puts it head and shoulders above most operations and, from a standpoint of quality, equals—and has sometimes surpassed—many a network contribution emanating from the N.Y. and Hollywood precincts.

If Quinlan senses some homeoffice discomfiture over the beyond-the-call-of-duty effort and outlay that is bringing distinction to the station (though in reality, when weighed against the creative aspects, the drain on fiscal resources has been minimal) he's not one who's likely to backtrack. Perhaps the last of the Chi mavericks, both colorful and individualistic, if Quinlan thinks what he's doing is good for Chicago and for the station, no amount of pressures, homeoffice or otherwise, can convince him otherwise.

Still baffled by last year's intervention of City Fathers who forestalled WBKB's presentation of his "Chicago" documentary made by Britain's Denis Mitchell (though subsequently hailed in its BBC exposure), Quinlan has nonetheless uptempoed his output, sparking an excitement of sorts that hasn't flourished hereabouts since the early days of Dave Garroway, Studs Terkel, et al. He's surrounded himself with a staff of producers-directors and program personnel components (notably in director Bill Friedkin he has one of tv's potentially hot talents) that has generated an enthusiasms from within and an expanding share-of-audience from without.

The "new excitement" has found expression in multiple showcasings (both in the realm of entertainment and public affairs) spanning such items as "The Glass House" (a visualization of the day-to-day cheating and chiseling by the American public); "The Fourth Man" (a study of a Negro family, their hopes, fears and aspirations on their move up to Chicago); the "Tale Of Two Cities" (a look at London and Chicago through the eyes of the "Second City" and "Establishment" performers and which Quinlan has sold to BBC-TV for $4,000). It's evident in the series called "Home Again", a sort of "Chi revisited" confrontations (still awaiting exposure) with Ben Hecht, Red Grange, Carl Foreman; in the "Second City Reports" half-hour displays, and even in the imaginative station-break promos.

As a model for tv skill, enterprise and inventiveness, WBKB merits the hosannahs it is now beginning to reap from the Chi citizenry.

Tennessee's Dapper Gov. Clement Scores Big Hit With State B'casters

By MATTY BRESCIA

Memphis, Jan. 28.

Tennesse's articulate and handsome Governor Frank Clement scored a twin-victory here recently with the state broadcasters and telecasters when he went all-out for radio-tv editorializing and a state-wide educational tv network.

Speaking before a recent session of the TAB here, the glib state chief executive laid it smack on the line when he stated: "I think, without any reservation, that your devotion to news—your fairness and the large amount of time in radio and tv you dedicate to comprehensive coverage has helped in a very real way to make Americans the best informed people on earth." Clement told the packed audience, "and what's more, I certainly think, as the purveyors of this excellent service, you broadcasters and telecasters are as much entitled to editorial comment as any newspaper." This no-punches-pulled barrage drew a standing salvo of applause for the Volunteer State's Governor.

Handling his text as a pro and at times ad-libbing like a show biz

Liston-Clay Special

An hourlong special produced for telecasting prior to the Feb. 25 Sonny Liston-Cassius Clay bout, will be distributed overseas by Fremantle International.

Special includes footage of prior fights of Liston and Clay, with Joe Louis commenting.

97-Station Roster On Wolper Specs

Another 12 stations have joined the roster of outlets telecasting the series of six Wolper documentary specials, distributed by United Artists Television. New deals brings total sales of 97 stations.

New deal include: KTVB, Boise, Ida., KHOL, Kearney, Neb.; KETV, Omaha; WGAN, Portland, Ore.; WDBJ Roanoke; KROD, El Paso; WTCN, Minneapolis; WFBM, Indianapolis; and WJAR, Providence.

The United States Bank of Eugene, Ore., is sponsoring these specials in both Eugene and Medford, Ore. Other sponsors include Oklahoma Natural Gas, Tulsa; Liberty Mutual and Twin Cities Federal Savings in Minneapolis; Bank of Indiana for Indianapolis; and Providence Gas and Kelly & Picerne Real Estate for Providence.

UA-TV and David Wolper Productions plan to get together again next season for the production-distribution of at least another six documentary specials.

MacQueen's Spot Slot

He reports to Art DeCoster, the Chi sales manager.

468G Grant For L.A. Educ'l TVer

Washington, Jan. 28.

A whopping $468,790 Federal grant was issued to establish an educational television station on Los Angeles channel 28.

Announcement of the grant—the largest yet for etv—was made by Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Anthony Celebrezze.

Coin was issued to Community Television of Southern California which has estimated the total cost of the etv project at $1,041,756.

Eleven grants have been dished out by HEW since the coin became available last May.

QUINLAN, ABC-TV FACE SHOWDOWN

By LES BROWN

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Either this week or next, the case will come up in "Judge" Si Siegel's AB-PT court that will determine to what extent Ted Shaker, as prexy of the ABC-TV owned stations division, can preempt the authority of the local station veepees. More to the point, the decision that Siegel hands down will cue the direction that the ABC television properties will take: whether to proceed on their present course as originally charted by Leonard Goldenson or to go full-steam-ahead with Shaker's program to remake the five-station fleet in the CBS image. If the latter, then farewell to the old crew.

Shaker has been gaining power over the stations an inch at a time ever since forcing the ouster of WABC-TV viceprez Joe Stamler in New York last April. He's now about to test it against his key obstacle, Sterling (Red) Quinlan, the maverick veep of the Chicago outlet, WBKB, who after a series of clashes with Shaker has called for a showdown before Siegel. If Shaker wins this bout, if he can press a veteran scrapper like Quinlan into submission, or force his resignation, then the rest of "Leonard's Boys"—Elton Rule in Los Angeles, Dave Sacks in San Francisco and John Pival in Detroit—will surely get the message that their patron saint is looking the other way while the era of local autonomy for the o&os comes to an end. Up and down the echelons of the owned stations, there's a not unfounded feeling among the veterans of not being wanted.

It seems obvious that Shaker desires this showdown with Quinlan, and that he had deliberately pushed matters to a squaring-off stage. First there were the "made in New York" program decisions, somewhat of a new wrinkle at WBKB; then the firing of Quinlan's sales manager, Bob Adams (despite his increases in business), and the installation of Shaker's man, Don Bowen. Then there was Shaker's "gift" to Quinlan of a new general manager, Tom Miller, who with no previous station experience relieved Quinlan of half his title; then the tampering with the ad-promo-publicity department and Shaker's placement here too of his own man.

And finally, last week, there was the unexplained demotion of Quinlan's longtime program director Dan Schuffman, ironically at just the time he was receiving national recognition for his creativity. To compound the insult, Schuffman's newly appointed superior was not someone from New York but an asst. program director from another local shop, Phil Mayer of WGN-TV.

In the formal press release the moves were attributed to Miller, but he obviously hasn't been in the general manager's chair long enough to have assessed either Schuffman's or Mayer's qualifications. Clearly the act of demoting the veteran p.d. (with no other title given at the time) was Shaker's own. As for the appointment of Mayer, it was unquestionably divined by Shaker's own program director Ed Warren, who once had worked for WGN-TV as Schuffman's vis-a-vis and as Mayer's immediate superior. The choice reflects the Shaker regime's enjoyment of the spoils system, for the distribution of responsible jobs to former associates—and particularly the old CBS gang—has been a pattern in both divisions that Shaker presides over, spot sales and owned stations.

Miller and Bowen both moved to WBKB from ABC-TV Spot, and by no coincidence both are alumni of the CBS-TV Spot Sales organization who came with Shaker when he was setting up the ABC chapter in 1961. And the background of Tony Bachman, promotion man soon to join WBKB from a Sacramento station, traces to the old days with Shaker at WXIX in Milwaukee, when the division prez

Syndication Biz Hobbled by Absence Of Trade Organization; Need Spark To Top $100,000,000 Annual Gross

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

As the years roll on, syndication in the U.S., bumping along from one crisis to another, is feeling the effects of not having a trade organization, according to some vets in the biz.

Those favoring a trade organization, designed to handle the domestic American front, are of the opinion that a unified agency could deal fruitfully in a minimum of ways relating to research, technical and promotion areas. A stronger trade organization, if receiving pledges of support by member companies, could deal in such thorny and provoking issues as network option time.

Those close to the syndication field are witnessing a growth in the foreign market, a growth receiving the support of two foreign tv trade organizations, Television Programs Export Assn. and the tv committee of the Motion Picture Export Assn. The assist in expanding the foreign market extended by TPEA and MPEA is no small factor in the upward climb of foreign syndication.

Domestic syndication, on the other hand, is viewed as being in the doldrums. While the fortunes of particular companies rise and fall each year, the overall syndication gross of $100,000,000 in '63 isn't considered anything to shout about. There was a time when the old Ziv company boasted of 100-man sales force. That 100-man sales force now practically encompasses the total sales manpower of the significant syndication houses. It could be argued that the nature of the biz has changed, but there isn't a body or research built up over the years to trace that change. On the contrary, most everyone relies on their individual impressions.

After years of intra-trade squabbling, it was the shoddy treatment of the National Assn. of Broadcasters which brought syndicators together for the limited purpose of holding a film exhibit in conjunction with the NAB meet. This year, though, when TFE-'64 gathers at the Pick Congress Hotel in Who'll Make It 56?

WCBS-TV, N.Y., in an editorial, warned viewers "If the city is forced to yield to the pressure being put on it to abandon its policy of free tuition (at city colleges), New York City voters will have no one to blame but themselves.

"They have been indifferent to politics in Albany and to the action of the people they have elected. If you want to preserve free tuition in New York City, and to see that our colleges get their fair share of state aid, write to this station and we will see to it that your views are forwarded to the appropriate legislators in Albany."

Editorial was broadcast Wednesday (22) after the Robert Trout News. That segment received a rating reaching 750,000 homes. By Monday (27), station received a grand total of 55 letters.

AFTRA's New Pact On L.A. Base Wage

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

AFTRA reached its goal of a base wage of $200 a week for 75 staff announcers at ABC, CBS and NBC tv and radio networks in L. A. in an agreement reached here, thus avoiding a national strike by the union.

Claude McCue, exec secretary of AFTRA's L. A. local, said the new wage base for announcers amounts to a $20 hike, payable over a three-year period. Mikemen will get a $5 hike the first year, another $5 the second year, and $10 the third year.

Peace was agreed on in a week of negotiations aimed at averting the threatened national strike. New deal provides for additional substantial uppances on "inshift" fees for announcers. Overall increase on tv and radio fees for commercial programs is about 8%, AFTRA said.

Hikes ranging up to 28% for fees for participating programs were also obtained, McCue said. A dispute about clarification of the airing of news bulletins was resolved. Complicated issue now clarifies when an announcer is to be paid "inshift" fees for news broadcasting, and when he is not

WABC-TV Gets Nod For Pooled Coverage On Hot School Issue

As a result of its intensive community relations campaign over the past six months, WABC-TV, N.Y., was given the nod to produce the pooled coverage of the N.Y. City Board of Education's announcement today (Wed.) of its timetable for school integration. WABC-TV will carry Board of Education prexy James Donovan's talk in full, starting at 6 p.m., and other stations will be able to patch into the WABC-TV lines. WNBC will carry the report simultaneously with WABC-TV while the other N.Y. stations have scheduled it for later hours.

The Donovan report is a hot local story because it could precipitate or deter a long threatened boycott of the public schools in Harlem and other areas.

The 6 p.m. deadline for the report has made it an exclusively television story. It's understood that the afternoon dailies have squawked loudly that they have been needlessly blocked out of a story by the tv scheduling.

'Gunsmoke' Going Into Syndication

"Gunsmoke," all 250 half-hour episodes, representing eight years of production, is being made available for general syndication for the first time. CBS Films will distribute.

Skein was the first series ever to win what was called "electronic syndication" on CBS-TV. For two years, web telecast the half-hour "Gunsmoke" under the title of "Marshal Dillon" in the Tuesdays at 7:30 slot. The reruns were fed to affils for local sale. "Gunsmoke" in the hour version remains steadfast with the web, as a Saturday night staple.

The two-year rerun ride on the web barely skims the total number of episodes produced. Timing of CBS Films' distribution of "Gunsmoke" remains up in the air. Subsid, though, expects to gross some tall coin with the entry. Coming in the wake of "Have Gun, Will Travel," which already has grossed well over $2,000,000, CBS Films in '64 could have one of its most prosperous years.

BBC's O'seas Sales

London, Jan. 28.

During 1963, BBC-TV Enterprises sold more than 6,400 programs overseas. And during the year, the web distributed film to 105 countries.

Figures compare with the web's 1962 sales thrust when it shifted 3,500 programs to 85 nations.

THE LID'S OFF THE TV GRID

Did BBC Bring Coals to Newcastle?

Newcastle-on-Tyne, Jan. 28.

Indignation has been caused in this northeast England area following a BBC-TV program "Gallery," in which scenes showing unemployed youths collecting pieces of coal are alleged to have been faked.

According to the Sunday Sun, a local weekly sheet, published by the Roy Thomson Organization, three boys used in the program were driven by the BBC to a waste-heap at Wreckenton, one of them was not out-of-work, and the coal had been purchased by the BBC and sprinkled on the heap.

A member of Parliament for the area, Norman Pentland, plans to contact the British Postmaster-General and ask him for a full investigation. He will raise the matter in the House of Commons if he gains no satisfaction.

He will probe whether any advance efforts were made by the "Gallery" team to acquaint themselves with conditions in northeast England and whether they consulted the BBC locally.

A BBC spokesman said: "The program team saw some boys coal picking, which is known to be a normal activity of unemployed lads in the northeast. For this item the team used three boys who did it regularly. One of the boys brought along a sack of coal so that there was something to pick at during the filming, because the ground was hard and snowy. The producer thought this was a legitimate piece of reconstruction."

Monte Carlo TV Fest Gets Off To Lively Start With 22-Nation Entries

By GENE MOSKOWITZ

Monte Carlo, Jan. 28.

The fourth Monte Carlo International Television Festival started in the tiny principality of Monaco Wednesday (22) and will run through Saturday (1) after showing 40 hours of shows from 22 countries via 58 programs.

Previously frowned on by the Eurovision countries, who recognised only the Prix Italia and Cannes Eurovision Fest, these nations finally came in last year. But French tv got peeved at a special prize inaugurated for news programs this year and decided to boycott the fest only to come around at the last minute.

So this fest now ranks a completely international affair with adherence from almost all tv countries. Besides teeing off the fest season, be it video or features, fest gives a good world's eye view of general levels of tv programming. The seven Golden Nymph Awards will go to the best pic contributing to understanding between nations, best original script or adaptation of tv, best direction, best news show, children's program, best actor and actress, plus some special honorable mentions.

Documentation and organization are excellent and a specially set up Festival Palace, which will henceforth service conventions, has over 38 sets for the press, jury and public. Admission for the latter is free and turnouts big. Programs are on a closed circuit.

This year translations via headphones in English and French also eased matters. About 75 journalists, producers, manufacturer reps

Laud French TV 2d Web Previews

Paris, Jan. 28.

Consensus among local tv critics and vid people is that the second web previews, now going on every weekend till it officially starts next April, are fairly promising if not outstanding in the type of programs.

A few hours each weekend are beamed only in the Paris area so far and will cover the main key cities in April. But it will take some time before the whole country is covered. Sets that can get the new channel, and attachments for old ones to receive it, are selling briskly but it is no landslide.

New offerings are mainly in the entertainment groove and have shorter programs and less announcers. A lot of importance is being attached to skeins both from here and from the U.S. So far it is felt it complements the existing station but is emerging with a personality of its own. Full scale operation in April, about 23 hours per week, should put the final touch on the new web.

Dick Berg Status Upped

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Dick Berg, who has been producing the Bob Hope-Chrysler series at Revue studios, has been upped to exec producer of the NBC-TV show.

Berg has acquired two original scripts, one by Rod Serling called "Slow Fade to Black," the other by Howard Redman, entitled "The Game With Glass Pieces." Both are penning the teleplays of their originals. Serling story is about the pix biz, and Hope may play himself in the film.

No Ciggie Scare For German TV; $40,000,000 Tab

Frankfurt, Jan. 28.

Although all the major German dailies carried reports of the American cigaret and cancer study, there is no change contemplated in the West German radio and television advertising for cigarets.

Both First and Second German Nets are planning to carry cigaret commercials just as before, without any restrictions on copy. However, the West German Cigaret Industry Association agreed among its members, in 1962, that no cigaret commercials would be aired in the commercial time prior to 7 p.m.—but the ads will still continue to be carried during the 7 to 8 p.m. commercial slots. (The 7 p.m. time period, of course, barely dents into the watching group, with only the tiny tots tucked away in bed early enough to avoid these commercial spots).

Germany's stringent advertising regulations also prevent any cigarets from advertising comparatively regarding health, so no cigaret, based on the results of the study, could be advertised as "less injurious" due to lower tar or nicotine content.

West Germany's stringent Health Minister, Dr. Elizabeth Schwartzhaupt, has long been urging the German Federal Parliament to clamp down on advertising of health and medical preparations on radio and television, but has just announced that her department does not plan to propose any new legislation which would prevent smoking or smoking commercials, since this would probably be impossible in a democracy anyhow.

Oddly enough, there is a strange paradox in the cigaret field here, in that the money raised from the sales tax levied on the cigarets is used in an anti-cigaret campaign. Last year, the West German cigaret makers spent $40,000,000 in advertising their

STATIONS FOREGO COMPENSATION

By GEORGE ROSEN

Jim Aubrey, who is well remembered by both his fellow Princetonians and Ivy League opponents as the "boniest" end of the 1939 and 1940 eastern collegiate gridirons, returned to his "first love" last week to perform the most spectacularly-executed feat of his football-oriented life and career.

Aubrey, who loves to spend his autumn Sunday afternoons watching the N. Y. Giants from his Yankee Stadium 50-yard line box (usually with one of his friends from show biz) is equally at home in the entertainment or sports realms. And it was to the latter that the CBS-TV prexy turned his primary attention last week as he spent countless hours—in collaboration with CBS-TV sports director Bill McPhail—to compute the minimum bid which would secure the next two years of NFL for CBS and, at the same time, return a tidy profit.

Before he did this, however, Aubrey carefully scouted the enemy NBC and ABC camps to detect whatever cleverly concealed signs might indicate what sums of money the NBC and ABC board of directors, which would have to approve such gigantic bids in advance, might have been asked to authorize their networks to offer. In effect, he simulated his competitor's thinking, to compute what each of them—from their own competitive position—would dare gamble within the limits of prudent risk-taking of RCA and AB-PT stockholders money.

In this connection, his intimate knowledge of how Leonard Goldenson, Si Siegel and Tom Moore—each of whom he worked with when Aubrey was program head of ABC—think through such approaches enabled him to pre-estimate the ABC bid of $26,106,000 to within narrow limits of accuracy. On the NBC bid ($21,500,000) Aubrey's forecast was high—he was even fearful that RCA (for "color" considerations) might subsidize a portion of the NBC bid up to as high as $30,000,000. But Aubrey tempered this dread with his experience-born theory that if NBC set its bid a few days in advance of submission to NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, Bob Kintner would most likely find it difficult to reconvene the NBC Board on short notice.

Thus, while Aubrey regarded Kintner as a fixed target—locked in by NBC Board action—he regarded Goldenson, who sometimes summons a quickly called Board meeting or gets approval from Board individuals by phone—as a "moving" target. And Aubrey had the Goldenson movements clearly focussed in one eye while he was trying to divine the Kintner strategy with the other.

But the solid basis of the CBS-TV $28,200,000 bid—whose unprecedented levels exceeded all advance trade speculation including even that of Rozelle and other insiders—was firmly rooted to the good business considerations of how CBS, in the face of known desperate competitive efforts to wrest the games away from it—could reacquire the NFL games for two more years and sell them to co-sponsors at a handsome profit. In this connection, Aubrey had devised two innovations which insiders now believe had not occurred to NBC or ABC.

No Stadium Compensation

First, he secretly arranged—through the CBS Affiliates committee in its last meeting in Puerto Rico a few weeks back—to have all affils forego station compensation from time charges should CBS-TV be the high-bidding network in '64-'65. Thus, CBS alone of the networks eliminated the multi-million expense entry of station payment in its NFL cost structure. (Next step, two years from now, as one agency wag put it on hearing of the Aubrey maneuver: "will be to get the affiliates to pledge their own money to augment the network's bid by ac-

FCC's Defense of Programming Freedom in Granting Renewal Of Pacifica Foundation Licenses

Washington, Jan. 28.

In a strong defense of programming freedom, FCC unanimously granted renewal for three Pacifica Foundation radio stations and initial license for another outlet.

Okayed for renewal were KPFA-FM commercial, KPFB-FM noncommercial educational, both in Berkeley, Calif. and WBAI-FM commercial in New York. Granted an initial license was KPFK-FM, noncommercial educational in Los Angeles.

FCC said it realized the Foundation's provocative programming may offend some listeners, but those offended cannot use the Commission to knock such programs off the air.

"Were this the case," FCC said, "only the wholly inoffensive, the bland, could gain access to the radio microphone or tv camera."

"No such drastic curtailment can be countenanced under the Constitution, the Communications Act or the Commission's policy," FCC said.

The stations and Foundation were under fire earlier from the Senate Internal Security subcommittee for alleged left-leaning and for letting Communist Party spokesmen on the air.

Commission said on the basis of its inquiry and information from Government sources it did not find evidence warranting further probing of the Communist affiliation issue.

As to the station's airing of Red spokesmen, FCC noted Pacifica presented the whole spectrum of political talk from the Communists to Birch Society.

Commission maintained its function "is not to pass on the merits of the program—to commend or frown."

Referring to Pacifica's controversial program on homosexuality and complaints about "filthy" shows, FCC said the stations judgments "fall within the very great discretion which the Act wisely vests in the licensee."

Commission also noted these programs were aired after 10 p.m. when a minimum of small children would be listening.

Observing it was under a mandate for "promoting the larger and more effective use of radio in the public interest," FCC said it must take "every reasonable precaution"

TV and VD

London, Jan. 28.

A London County Council report recommends that television should become a stand-in for shy parents.

It suggests that the tv webs—and especially BBC-2—could be used to tell tennagers about the dangers of veneral disease.

NABET Calls For Strike in Bogdown Of NBC, ABC Talks

Complete stymie in new contract negotiations between the National Assn. of Broadcast Engineers & Technicians (NABET) and the NBC and ABC webs resulted in a strike authorization by the union's membership over last weekend. Talks for a new pact, however, will continue in San Diego as they have been since Jan. 13 without any yielding of positions on either side. Current deal ends Feb. 1.

Union execs, who have made job security against the inroads of automations the central issue, charge that both NBC and ABC are trying to break the union's jurisdictional control by a take-it or-leave it stance. It's claimed that management has only scoffed at the union's demands for pension plans, increased vacations and higher pay without presenting any reasonable counter-proposals.

NABET not only has jurisdiction over the ABC and NBC engineers and technicians but of the office workers. For many years, the webs have been preparing against the eventuality of a technicians' strike through program of training its exec staff to take over specific assignments.

Meantime, negotiations between the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists and local stations owned by the three networks have also not been making much progress for the past couple of weeks. Wide differences separate the union and the webs over announcer and newsmen scales although the rest of the local code appears to be near settlement.

Webs, GOP Sked Meet On Coverage Plans

News execs of the three major networks will be meeting with the Republican National Committee Feb. 3 in San Francisco to talk over coverage of the party's Presidential nomination convention in that city in June. Webs have been pressing the Republicans for several months to discuss the ground rules.

Meeting in Frisco will also give webs execs and their engineering staffs to survey the physical site of the convention for camera positions and remote pickups.

Aussies Yen U.S. Fare

Sydney, Jan. 28.

Survey shows that U.S.-made shows are still tops with Aussie viewers and sponsors.

Key commercial ATN, Sydney, continues a strong U.S. lineup with such faves as "Fred Astaire's Premiere Theatre," "77 Sunset Strip," "Naked City," "Beverly Hillbillies," "Wagon Train," "The Defenders," "Alfred Hitchcock Hour," "The Deputy."

'Roller Derby's' $10,000,000 Suit

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.

Leo Seltzer, who owns most of the patent rights connected with "Roller Derby" has filed action in the United States District Court of the Southern District of California against National Skating Derby, Roller Skating Champions, Herb Roberts, the Los Angeles Athletic Club, the Olympic Auditorium, Eileen Eaton, Paramount Television, Barney Balaban, KTLA TV, Will & Griffith and Maywood-Bell Ford.

Seltzer claims he has been damaged to the extent of $10,000,000 because the defendants allegedly infringed on his copyrighted product and presented unfair competition.

In his complaint filed by the law firms of Bernstein & Silen of San Francisco and Friedman & Cons of Beverly Hills, Seltzer said, "Defendants have unfairly competed and contemplated to so unfairly compete in the future . . . and appropriated to its use the plaintiff's (Seltzer) original format for Roller Derby." The complaint goes on to list film clips and film on tv that tend to confuse the public because it was done in "the exact manner that the plaintiff has so presented the same on television."

(The Crunch)
With Harry Andrews, Maxwell Shaw, Wolfe Morris, Anthony Bushell, Peter Bowles, Carl Bernard, John Gabriel, John Cazabon, others
Producer: Stuart Burge
Director: Michael Elliott
Writer: Nigel Kneale
60 Mins., Sun., 9:35 p.m.
Associated TeleVision, from London

The last few months have been a sorry period for local tv drama. Signs of despair have included BBC-TV switching its "First Night" skein so that it does not conflict with the commerical web's peak-hour Sunday drama, and including in its brief legit adaptations that can hardly be called preems. Now Associated TeleVision has redubbed its "Drama 64" hour as "Studio 64," announcing that a group of directors and writers, under command of producer Stuart Burge, will work as creative twosomes, starting together from scratch. The teams include some of the liveliest talents in tv drama, with writers like Clive Exton, Giles Cooper, and Keith Waterhouse and Willis Hall, and directors like Ted Kotcheff, Silvio Narizzano, and Donald McWhinnie.

The new skein opened with a play written by Nigel Kneale, responsible for the famous and first-rate sci-fi skeins called "Quatermass." His director-cum-collaborator was Michael Elliott. It wasn't a good advertisement for the skein's avowed aims, for it seemed to display a lack of sympathy between writer and director. Kneale's plot hinged on an attempt by a fanatic President of an ex-colonial country to blow up London with a nuclear device, installed in the Embassy. It was written in terms of absolute realism, although the situation was resolved in supernatural terms.

Elliott's direction, however, was full of gimmicks that got in the way of conviction. It was also technically faulty at first, with sounds of tanks, radios, and panic-stricken traffic drowning the dialog. Characters battled against background mush to establish themselves, and often did not succeed.

Prime Minister Goddard (Harry Andrews) directed operations on the spot, and agreed to the mad President's demand for half a billion dollars, recompense for the minerals removed from his country during the British rule. But this did not end matters. For the President had one of those shoulder-chips, and insisted on blowing up London willy-nilly. His ambassador, trained in mystic control of his physical responses, saved the day by needling the President into shooting at him until all his ammunition was spent, he remaining on his feet the while, albeit somewhat shaky.

The idea was intermittently gripping, fluently written, but finally disappointing. There was a glibness about the Oriental characters that jarred, and there were some gaping improbabilities in the plotting that destroyed belief. Harry Andrews, Maxwell Shaw, and Anthony Bushell were okay, and Wolfe Morris hammed it up as the President. Otta.

MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT
With Barry Jones, Gary Raymond, Ilona Rodgers, Richard Pearson, Anna Middleton, Rosemary Knight, John Quentin, Jeremy Burnham, Tom Watson, Peter Bayliss, Michael Bilton, Alex Scott, others Producer: Campbell Logan
Director: Joan Craft
Writer: Constance Cox
25 Mins., Sun., 4:55 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

BBC-TV maintains a splendidly high level of fidelity and skill in its adaptations of fiction classics, and this new 13-week condensation of Dickens's "Martin Chuzzlewit" is up to the mark in expertise. Constance Cox, who has proved herself practised and tasteful with other Dickens novels, tackles a more arduous job with this one, for the ramifications of the plot are greater and fewer viewers are familiar with the original. But the tale incorporates such wellknown types as Mr. Pecksniff and Sarah Gamp, it embodies, in later segments, the author's view of America, and it is full of rich and vivid portraiture. Enough came through in the slightly tortuous initialler to encourage steady ratings.

Miss Cox expertly reduced the confusion attendant on introducing a host of characters, and the segment took the tale from young Martin's leaving his grandpa's home up to the moment when he was about to join the architectural office of the hypocritical Pecksniff. The theme of the novel is greed, and this was acidly established in the grotesque gallery of Chuzzlewit relations, who meet to gloat, like crows, over the family inheritance. Gary Raymond, as young Martin—the only Chuzzlewit with honorable pretentions—barely appeared in the opener, but seemed a likely and well-judged hero. Richard Person was admirable as the sly Pecksniff, oily and grasping, and John Quentin registered as Tom Pinch, due for more action later. Other excellent cameos were forthcoming from Barry Jones, Peter Bayliss, and Tom Watson, and immense care had been taken with the casting throughout.

Similarly, Joan Craft's direction of Campbell Logan's production was steeped in period flavor, helped by fine sets from Susan Spence, and she pulled off some notable visuals, such as a memorable close-up of the avaricious Chuzzlewits in full envious cry. Otta.

BON SOIR, KATHRIN!
(The Caterina Valente Show)
With Petula Clark, Little Peggy March, Bibi Johns, Erich Brenn, Johnny Buchhardt, Boy Gobert, Georg Thomalla, others.
Director: Michael Pfleghar
Choreography: Paddy Stone
60 Mins.; Sat., 8:45 p.m.
West-German TV, from Stuttgart

There are several superlatives used in connection with Caterina Valente. She was really the first female headliner to have a show of her own on German video. She is the only German recording star who has become really known outside her home-grounds and her tv shows are always more "showy" than the other domestic programs.

This show featured the talents of Petula Clark, a top flight name in the European disk biz, America's Little Peggy March, Sweden's Bibi Johns (back on German tv after an absence of nearly two years) and other such popular native comedians as Georg Thomall and Boy Gobert who now belongs to the ensemble of the famous Viennese Burgtheater. Also on the bill was the Paddy Stone Ballet that has become well known via the Lou van Burg quiz shows.

"Bon Soir, Kathrin" came from Vienna (a German-Austrian coproduction), via Stuttgart, and must have pleased the bulk of her fans. The more demanding viewer might have objected to some of the jokes and gags being a bit on the banal side, but, after all, the songs were the thing. And they came off beautifully. Miss Valente has a likable personality and she knows how to sell a song. Among others, she gave out with a series from Irving Berlin's "Annie Get Your Gun." Her voice can be sweet, vital and very brassy if required.

Little Peggy March proved a good bet for the show and she too has many admirers in the country. Others in this production also turned in good jobs, but it's a pity that the jokes furnished by the script were only so-so. Hans.

LES RAISINS VERTS
(The Green Grapes)
With Michele Arnaud, Millicent Martin, Dick Sanders Ballet, Dionne Warwick, Michel Galabru, Hubert Deschamps, Sacha Briquet, others.
Director-Writer: Jean-Christophe Averty.
Choreography: Sanders.
60 Mins; Mon; 8:30 p.m.
RTF-TV, from Paris.

For his fourth monthly variety show entry, Jean-Christophe Averty, bad boy of French tv, showed he still packs verve, invention, sharp and savory nonconformism, in the guise of macabre humor, to remain one of the few talents in tv here.

Show used black or white backgrounds which gave it a tangy physical look. The many singers got smart showcasing via some quick cutting sometimes playing up a lyric or comparing one singer to another. They were mostly young chanters of the rock school but Michele Arnaud displayed her dramatic engaging looks and pipes for more intellectual songs.

Interspersed with the performers were sudden quick bits, which contained the dark humor. Since many critics complained about the time a little celluloid doll was put in a meat grinder, he had 10 grinders each with a doll inserted, but they were not ground up.

After this tease he had a Santa Claus figure grinding up little Christmas trees which came out as matches. Averty's way of protesting the overdoing of Christmas cheer and not allowing much of it in everyday life. He also had a crib rocking and a child's voice mumbling and the mother promising the sandman will come. Finally the crib was covered with falling sand.

Show also had some inventive ballet numbers by Dick Sanders. One had a man trying to talk freely about sex get a hand clapped over his mouth. Censors, you know. Titles were given by a girl in a confessional booth, obviously ill at ease mentioning the names. It turned out she had been talking to the Devil.

Yank singer, Dionne Warwick, and an English singer, Millicent Martin, both pert and palatable, did their songs in English without any explanations. Averty is expecting some comment about not having subtitles.

Averty's lowdown, and sometimes sadistic, humor, always saved by taste and risibility, has given tv a lift here. Tv heads have given him the green light and it is a good thing for all concerned. Their show was preceded by an inane story of family life and followed by an interview with an old woman who collects ink wells. If a gag sometimes misses, the show still remains consistently good and way above average here. Mosk.

ABC RADIO SALES ON LISTON-CLAY BOUT

ABC Radio has so far sold three-quarters of its blow-by-blow coverage of the Sonny Liston-Cassius Clay heavyweight championship fight Feb. 25 to Cities Service Co., Pepsi-Cola and Schick Razor Co., General Cigar Co. bought shows before and after the fight broadcast from Miami Beach Convention Hall. Howard Cosell, Les Keiter and Rocky Marciano will man the ABC microphones.

Fight, which will also be seen on pay-tv screens, is expected to draw about 60,000,000 radio listeners. The first fight between Liston and Floyd Patterson drew 67,800,000 listeners. Price for the radio rights to the latter fight was about $400,000. But Liston's reputation for kayoing his opponent in the early rounds has kept a lid on prices for his fights.

A REQUIEM FOR JOHN BROWN
With Carl Low, R. A. Jordan, John Robert Crawford, Sally Chamberlin, David Hooks, Rex Everhart, Louis Gosseft; Robert Burr, narrator
Producer-Writer: Robert Herridge
Director: Arthur Forrest
60 Mins.; Sun. 9 p.m.
WNEW-TV, N.Y.

Robert Herridge, who's turning out six shows for the Metromedia group, has been striving to create a unique television form in which to make large statements relevant to our times. He has not yet succeeded, judging from his first effort in this series.

"A Requiem For John Brown" had a surface experimental look through its free use of narration blended with dramatized vignettes and its skeletonized stage settings in which light, as Herridge would put it, carves space out of darkness. Compared to conventional tv drama, this was indeed a departure from the naturalistic idiom. It was not a real thrust towards a new dramatic form, but rather an adaptation of old theatrical devices which, as in the case of the WPA Federal Theatre in the 1930s, were born chiefly out of tight budgets rather than artistic demands. The stark simplicity of Herridge's "John Brown" also suggests that he was attempting to make a virtue out of necessity.

The central failure of "John Brown," however, was not its dramatic form, but the quality of its writing. Herridge told the story through a mixture of his own and Brown's words. The total effect, however, was that of a monotone in which Brown emerged as a fanatic, half-inspired and half-insane, but without any human qualities.

To sustain the structure of this production, since it did not have any realistic ribs, the drama required some incandescent poetry or some dazzling dialectics about slavery and freedom. Instead, the script was marked by a prose style, which was either too flat or too florid, and had a tendency to repeat arguments which were already too simply stated the first time around.

The performers were firstrate, most of the cast being required to handle multiple parts as narrators and participants in the dramatic vignettes. Carl Low, in the title role, was handicapped by a lack of scope in the role's conception, but he declaimed like a man possessed. R. A. Jordan and John Robert Crawford, as Brown's sons, were more sympathetically drawn, while Robert Burr handled the narration with a proper intensity. Herm.

SCIENCE ALL-STARS
With Don Morrow, host
Exec Producer: Steve Carlin
Director. Lloyd Gross
30 Mins.; Sun. 4:30 p.m.
MINNEAPOLIS HONEYWELL
(BBDO)

"Science All-Stars" has the potential of being an interesting and instructive survey of American teenagers' expertise in contemporary science and technology. But while the basic ingredients are present, they are not dished up with the sharpness and clarity demanded by the subject.

The show provides an opportunity for youngsters in elementary and high schools to demonstrate some project on which they are working. Last Sunday (26), a 15-year old 10th grade student from New Jersey showed off her homemade maze in which she has been testing some educational theories on white rats. It could have been a fascinating excursion into animal psychology, but there was time only for a 60-second workout by a rat before the youngster was sidetracked into a conversation with Col. John Paul Stapp, chief scientist of the Aerospace Medical Division. Stapp's sequence could have been turned into a whole new sequence by itself, but cramming it together with the maze experiment helped neither.

Two other youngsters, one a 12-year-old and another an 18-year old, brought along their homemade computers. Here again, more time could have been committed to explaining the binary system of number notation and the functioning of the electronic circuits. Instead, a Harvard U. professor turned up to talk about his translation machine. The exchanges between the students and the experts are too conspicuously rehearsed to be convincing.

Don Morrow registered as an affable host. Herm.

LIFE TO LIFE
Producer: Fred Dravland
Director: Jim Lennon
60 Mins.; Sun., 9 p.m.
Participating
KLZ-TV, Denver

Prepared by such network shows as "Dr. Kildare" and "Ben Casey," the audience of this Time-Life station may be toughened up enough to sit through this harrowing nonfiction medico entry while munching on some icebox goodies. For those with steel nerves and cast-iron stomachs, this report of a kidney transplant operation on a 15-year-old boy was a fascinating lesson in internal anatomy.

Nothing was spared to the imagination in this show's close-up on the latest surgical techniques. It showed the knife piercing the outer skin, folding back the fatty tissue, penetrating into the cavities of the body and then pinching off the diseased organ. It came out well—for the patient, that is.

This show raises the serious question of the educational value for the layman in this type of presentation. Does it inform him of the great advances that have been made in surgery over the past two decades or does it frighten him that human life is suspended so delicately in the surgeon's hands? Each viewer can make up his own mind on that score. Herm.

CBS Reports

Independent, probing documentaries, which examine seamy aspects of our establishment, remains very much in style on "CBS Reports." Most recent example was "The Business of Heroin," telecast last Wednesday (22) night, a fascinating account of dope traffic, which had an impact comparable to last season's "Biography of A Bookie Joint."

Electronic crime reporter Jay McMullen, who did the "Bookie" expose, also produced the "Business of Heroin." He labored two years on the hour documentary, shooting footage in six different countries. He meticulously told his harrowing story with pictures, using hidden cameras to catch the dope traffic on a Harlem street corner, following the web of suppliers, from Turkey to Syria to Lebanon to Italy, France and then to this country.

It all was in the factual vein, but, as fashioned by that laconic Scotman McMullen, it contained many melodramatic elements found in the "Untouchables."

Law enforcement agencies in Washington and New York were questioned and they said, in effect, that their forces are insufficent to meet the size of the dope problem. McMullen, who acted as reporter-narrator, concluded that as long as the addict is around, there will be the illegal supplier.

That may be the awful reality, but it leaves many issues begging, issues such as how is crime going to be successfully combatted, if a good chunk of U.S. crime is committed by addicts. People living on the corner of 118th Street and Madison Ave., the Harlem corner captured in the documentary, must be living in a state of "cold turkey" in relation to most of America. The tie between the dope traffickers and the police was denied by police officials, but the seemingly open traffic raised questions about possible pay-offs and corruption.

One masked heroin wholesaler in N.Y. told of $500,000 in profits yearly, leaving greenbacks galore for corrupting officialdom. It was ironically amusing to hear one police official after another in the mideast say it was always the police on the other side of the border who were corrupt—as the documentary followed the path of heroin from Turkey to that Harlem street corner.

The hour traced the role of the Mafia, Corsican gangsters, American pushers, French chemists, all the key elements in the illegal traffic, both the high and low. The subject should not be forgotten, but should be reexamined again, perhaps with another perspective, for it touched on many areas which are crying for correction. Horo.

INSIDE SPORTS ON THE NEW ABC

The story of ABC's exclusive coverage of the IX Winter Olympic Games, the coming Summer Olympic Trials, and network television's most extensive year-round sports coverage-together with a note about "who's watching."

Starting tonight and continuing for twelve consecutive days, ABC viewers will have the next best thing to a front row seat for the Ninth Winter Olympics in Innsbruck, Austria.

From the symbolic lighting of the Olympic flame to the closing ceremonies, every event in winter's greatest sports spectacle is being covered, with the excitement and drama that only television can achieve.

A complete program of each day's highlights is being produced on the spot in Innsbruck—fed electronically to an ABC unit in Frankfurt—sped to New York by jet—and, in many cases, shown that very night on the ABC Television Network.

To accomplish this, ABC has fielded one of the greatest teams of technicians in television sports history. In Austria are a crew of over 100 men, 50 cameras and tons of additional equipment; and sportscasters Jim McKay, Curt Gowdy and Jim Simpson who will be assisted by Olympic experts Bob Beattie, Stan Benham, Art Devlin, Carol Heiss, Andrea Mead Lawrence and Willy Schaeffler.

Such complex assignments, however, are second nature for ABC Sports. Fifty-two weeks a year, viewers are treated to an ever-changing panorama of creative sports coverage. In football: the complete AFL schedule and championships, College All-Stars, North-South and Coaches All-Star Games, and, starting this year, the Blue Bonnet Bowl. In other sports: Professional Bowlers Tour, Challenge Golf starring Arnold Palmer with Gary Player, The Annual U.S.-Russian Track Meet and, every Saturday, ABC's Wide World of Sports—a program that roams the globe searching for the unique, the exciting, the crowd-pleasing sports events.

Starting April 4, ABC will cover the U. S. Summer Olympic Trials in 18 programs during prime evening time. Twenty-two teams will represent the U. S. in Tokyo next October. American audiences will see the selection of these teams—exclusively on ABC.

Aside to advertisers: As you might expect, lively sports coverage like this attracts equally lively audiences. Full details on how these audiences relate to your particular marketing pattern are available on request.

In sports, as in news and entertainment, the ABC emphasis is on fresh, imaginative programming for all.

VARIETY - ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top 10 network shows on a local level and offers a rating study of the top 10 syndicated shows in the same particular markets. This week six different markets are covered.

Both the network and syndication study features the total area homes reached and the metro area ratings on each show. The total area homes reached reflects the audiences on the basis of the total market area examined. The metro area ratings are based on the metropolitan markets within the total area examined. Top 10 shows, both network and syndicated, are listed on the basis of their showing in the total area homes barometer.

Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY Coupled with the rating performance of the top 10 network shows, on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every market in the U. S.

Shaker

was sales manager of that erstwhile CBS o&o.

Shaker has an obvious fondness for the "CBS type". In setting up the ABC Spot Sales division nearly three years ago, he staffed it around 75% with fellows who schooled in the Columbia system. There were Jim Conley, Fred Nottere, Dick Beesmyer, Jim Osborne, John McElfresh, Art DeCoster, Phil Gore and Bowen and Miller, among others. Interestingly, nearly all of the CBS contingent survived and moved up. The other 25% of the original staff, comprising men with NBC and ABC experience, pretty much got lost along the way.

Conley and Nottere are now Nos. 1 and 2 respectively in Shaker's Spot Sales operation; Beesmeyer became general sales manager of WABC-TV; and DeCoster assumed charge of the Chicago office when Miller got his promotion to WBKB general manager.

His stewardship of the Spot Sales division is seen as Shaker's big leverage in his drive for absolute control of the owned-and-operated stations. And his success with the sales outfit will doubtless cut a lot of ice with Siegel when the company's exec veepee has to arbitrate the clash with Quinlan. As for the Chicago veepee, his arguing strength derives from a handsome profit picture that is topped only by the New York outlet in the ABC o&o division. Furthermore, his station and KGO-TV, San Francisco, were the only two outlets in the division whose sales improved last year. And finally, and perhaps most important, Quinlan is closely identified with the Chicago market and very popular there.

In the end, Siegel may be guided in his decision by the company's desperation to recoup at the station level what it will have lost at the network level in another poor season. Whether that would tend to favor Quinlan or Shaker remains to be seen.

Syndie Biz Hobbled

Chicago, there will be the defections of Metro TV, Independent Television Corp. and Embassy Pictures. There still will be from 14 to 15 syndicators under the banner of TFE-'64, enough for a successful affair.

In relation, though, to long-range, general needs, TFE is hardly the answer. There are some hard, realistic reasons syndicators don't move in the direction of a trade organization. They're hardly as free in the U.S. to promote their self-interest as they are abroad.

What makes them less free is that the major syndicators also are in the biz of selling to the networks. It would be hard for such majors to fight the networks on the option time issue and then, at the same time, try to curry the good graces of the networks for the sale of web series.

In the not too distant past, United Artists Television, which acquired Ziv, complained bitterly in Washington about the network option time situation. That was when UA-TV was striking out on the network level. UA-TV now winning on the web level might prove a different Washington witness.

In other areas, though, that conflict of interest doesn't exist. When a syndicator wants to know what slice of the total syndication market his firm accounts for, there's no body of research to draw from. There's also no body of research which all trade organizations build, which would trace rises and falls in the biz, barometers which could spark new plans and ideas.

What are the minimum technical standards for film, the minimum standards for promotion material to send to stations? Different syndicators, if asked the question, would respond differently. A trade organization, it's argued, could help establish such minimum standards.

A backlog of success stories which the entire industry could draw from also is lacking. There's NAB, TvB, MPEA, TPEA, and for syndication, a vacuum.

Fresno — Ethan P. Bernstein, formerly sales manager, has been named to the newly-created post of station manager of KFRE, Triangle radio station here. Bernstein has been with the station as sales chief since July, '63.

VARIETY-ARB's weekly chart offers a day-by-day analysis of the top feature evening slots in a particular market. On Saturdays and Sundays, daytime feature slots compete with nighttime pix periods for designation as the top feature slot of the day. The analysis is confined to the top rated feature slots in the ARB measured period, broken down by days in the week. The ARB measured period usually covers three or four weeks. Other data such as the time slot and total area homes is furnished. Top competition and competitive ratings also are highlighted.

NAB Florida Meet

Triangle Stations; and Lawrence Rogers, Taft Broadcasting Co.

In attendance at the code meet, Collins said, "I think the amendment is a very constructive position and one that I can support very heartily."

The Board's move to cut down on piggybacks was termed "a very important" step in removing the appearance of overcommercialization by NAB Code Authority Director Howard Bellum.

He said the amendment "will greatly strengthen" the Code's ability to move against commercial "clutter."

Of course LeRoy Collins is a continuous topic of talk in the corridors of Sarasota's Far Horizon Hotel.

The issues of Collins tenure as NAB prez were raised earlier by the executive committee and then dumped on the joint boards for resolving this week.

Going into the meet, Collins received declarations of public support from radio board member Ben Sanders, KICD, Spencer, Ia., and Donald McGannon, Westinghouse Broadcasting topper.

McGannon is also chairman of the Broadcast Ratings Council, which will be another subject of board discussion. The spate of NAB's past and promised ratings and research action will be reviewed by the boards.

Lid Off Grid

tually paying for the attraction.") In the meantime, Aubrey has advanced to middle ground by telecasting the first sponsored network series in tv history for which the stations agree to accept no money.

Second, according to insiders, Aubrey developed a plan whereby, on certain dates, many CBS-TV stations will carry not one, but two, of the seven regionally-televised games played each Sunday afternoon. Thus, apparently, Aubrey expanded the NFL pool of commercial minutes (16 to 18 per game) needed to recoup his heavy outlay and add a commensurate profit.

In any event Aubrey has already posted the SRO sign on his newly-reacquired NFL series for 1964. They're sold out at a two-year recoupment (based on about $67,000 per minute) of some $40,000,000. Thus, with $6,000,000 going to the agencies to cover their 15% commissions on the lush billings (there's a possibility some of this $6,000,000 may be rebated by the agencies to their clients), CBS is left with $34,000,000.

And that's a "cushion" of $5,800,000 above the $28,200,000 NFL "rights" fee to cover pickups, loops, connections, announcers' fees, salaries and travel expenses of technical staffs and that little item which Aubrey (or for that matter Bill Paley or Frank Stanton) never forget—PROFIT.

to avoid inhibiting station programming experimentation and diversification.

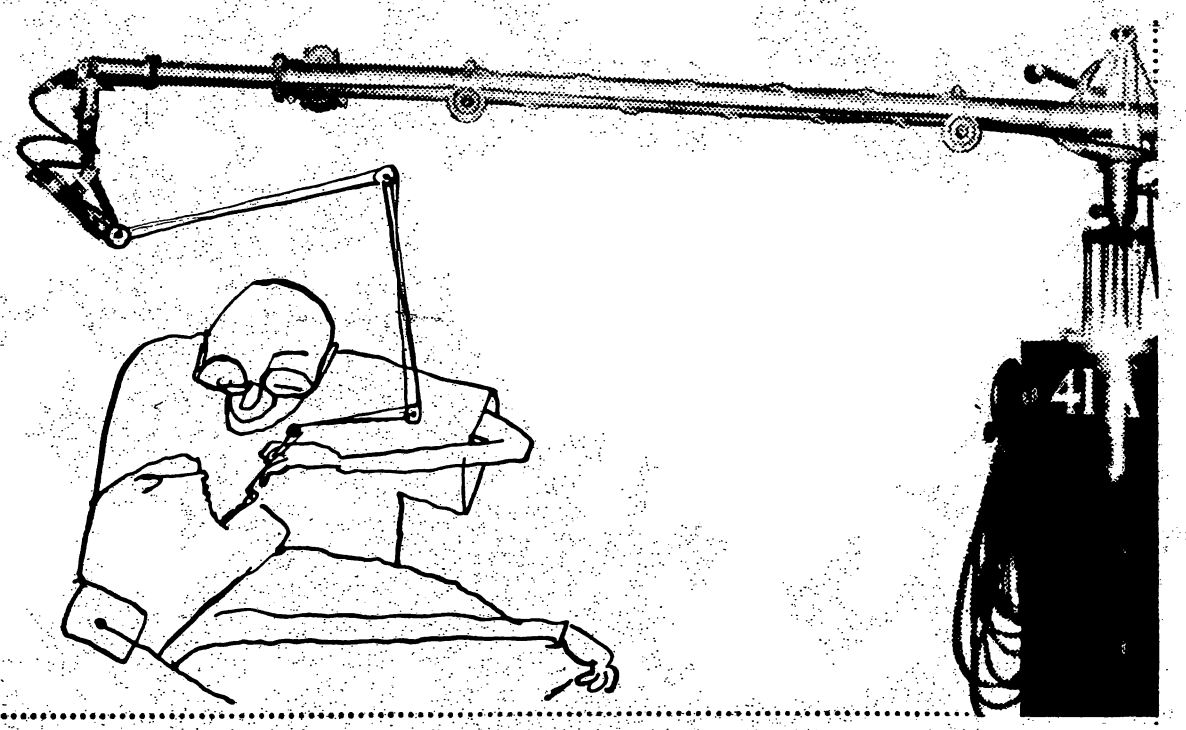
On the issue of unauthorized transfer of control on Pacifica's Board of Directors, FCC said the group did not try to conceal or misrepresent facts and that the failure to report the change was excusable.

Issuing a concurring statement, Commissioner Robert E. Lee raised objections about the format of the homosexual program—a panel of eight homosexuals discussing their experiences and past history.

"A microphone in a bordello, during slack hours, could give us similar information on a related subject," Lee said.

While not objecting to the subject being discussed on the air by doctors and sociologists, Lee said the Pacifica program "was designed to be, and succeeded in being, contributory to nothing but sensationalism."

Backing the Commission statement were Chairman E. William Henry and Commissioners Rosel Hyde, Robert Bartley, Frederick Ford, Kenneth Cox and Lee Loevinger.



At night we're really lowering the boom. Just to fill you in: of the 40 programs reaching 10 million or more homes, we have 21. While the second network has ten and the third network nine, we have more than both combined... and it doesn't hurt a bit.

Muggeridge Back to BBC-TV As TRI Documentarians Break Up

London, Jan. 28.

Boycotted by Granada-TV, and its contract with Associated Television running out, Television Reporters International is now losing five of its founder members. They are the "commentator" directors of the firm, namely, Malcolm Muggeridge, Lord Francis-Williams (vice chairman), Ludovic Kennedy, Robert Key and James Mossman.

Formed 18 months ago, TRI looked set for success having tied to exclusive contracts some of tv's key commentators. Right off, ATV pacted to take 19 half-hour and 40 one-hour documentaries. But ATV has not followed through with a contract renewal—despite on time delivery of shows which got good notices, etc.—and Granada-TV's flat refusal to take documentaries produced outside when it had its own documentary-producing forces precluded a full network deal. Now, financial directors of TRI have been unable to come up with fees large enough to keep its commentators on an exclusive basis.

Result is that Malcolm Muggeridge is rejoining BBC-TV to work on a series of documentaries and the others are fixing jobs at the networks as and when their contracts with TRI expires.

Norman Dickson, a director of the company, says: "There is no question that the company will go on. We are in the process on lining up further program projects. It is our hope and our intention to use the top commentators in television and we hope at least to include those with which we started."

TRI has been in talks with BBC about documentaries for BBC-2, but the dickers are not at the contract stage yet.

TV Newsfilm Workshop Sets a 'Learn-By-Doing' Theme on Okla. Campus

Norman, Okla., Jan. 28.

Fourth annual Television Newsfilm Workshop, co-sponsored by the National Press Photographers Assn., Field Enterprises Educational Corp., the Univ. of Oklahoma and the U.S. Air Force, is set here on the campus for April 19-25.

A faculty of working tv news and motion picture production vets will spend the week supervising a "learn by doing" course. Cameramen will be sent on assignments and their footage will be analyzed by the vets.

Bob Shafer, news director of WRCC-TV, Philadelphia, who is staff chairman for the workshop, says the NPPA Workshop "gives the newsfilm cameraman an opportunity to become more immediately involved with effective photographic representation of actuality than he is with merely satisfying the requirements of competitive illustration."

Shafer added: "Tv newsfilm is maturing and we must rid ourselves of the notion that whatever we point a camera at makes a picture of something for television and that—once adequately exposed and reasonably developed—sequences of pictures can be patched together any old whichaway and justifyably presented to a television viewer as something about something that happened today."

Froke Named B'casting Director at Penn State

Univ. Park, Pa., Jan. 28.

Marlowe Froke, former radio-tv newsman turned prof, has been named director of broadcasting at Pennsylvania State University. As such he'll head up the university's educational tv station. An FCC construction permit for the facility which will operate on Channel 3 is expected momentarily.

Froke was a news editor at WGN and WGN-TV, Chicago in 1954-55.

He joined the Penn State journalism faculty in 1959, specializing in radio-tv news. He'll continue to hold his academic rank of associate professor in the new post.

sales. It's figured, moreover, that the Allen show has a 75-market potential. The Douglas show, originating in Cleveland, gained a major outlet last week with the signing of ABC-owned KABC-TV, Los Angeles. KABC-TV will be running the Douglas show in an early afternoon period based on the early return of a half-hour of network time to local stations. Recent Douglas sales have also been made to KTVT-TV, Fort Worth, and KPHO-TV, Phoenix.

Westinghouse, meantime, is considering the production of another afternoon show from the Steve Allen Playhouse in Los Angeles. This would be an economical utilization of an already existing production facility.

Also in the works, in conjunction with Allen, is a Westinghouse comedy programming project designed for a network sale.

ABC-TV also have given Bob Drew a standing order for three one-hour shows under the umbrella heading of "The Daring American." These shows will revolve around the careers of Peace Corps workers, an oil fire-fighter and a doctor in the Public Health Service engaged in stemming tropical epidemics. First show will be ready in April, but it's expected that the series will be held up until the 1964-65 season.

Documentary scheduling on ABC-TV, as on other webs, will be complicated next fall by the large amount of political telecasts and in January, by the Presidential inauguration and the organization of the new Congress.

Inside Stuff—Radio-TV

FCC Commissioner Robert T. Bartley will be among the featured speakers at the 17th annual Western Radio & Television Conference to be held Feb. 26-29 at the Jack Tar Hotel in San Francisco. The conferences are designed to give the commercial broadcaster an opportunity to exchange views with educational groups and other noncommercial broadcast operators.

Other speakers at the sessions will include Richard Pack, Westinghouse programming v.p., Mrs. A. Scott Bullitt, board chairman of KING Broadcasting Co.; Jules Dundes, CBS Radio v.p. and president of the San Francisco Radio Broadcasters; and Harold See, KRON-TV general manager.

Board of directors of Storer Broadcasting, at meeting in Miami Beach last week, declared a regular quarterly dividend of 45c per share on the common stock payable March 9 to stockholders of record Feb. 21. It's the 41 consecutive dividend paid since the stock went public in 1953. The board also declared a quarterly dividend of 12½c on its Class B common stock, which is not listed.

'Victory at Sea' To Brit. Westward-TV

London, Jan. 28.

Westward-TV, commercial tv station operating in South West England, has picked up "Victory At Sea" from NBC-International. It is pencilled in for a Saturday 11 p.m. slotting from Feb. 8. Westward is the first indie to take the show following its 26-episode run on the entire BBC-TV network.

Notwithstanding its national exposure on BBC, Westward is planning to drumbeat the show. "And why not?" said an NBC exec here, "after all the show has run 11 times in New York.

might be forced to sell the station in the event of his death unless the station had the $200,000 in insurance cash for taxes. Reynolds bought $1,208 worth.

Senator John J. Williams (R., Del.) claimed he may soon make public other correspondence reportedly supporting Reynolds' side of the story.

Videotape Prod. Claim Vs. Talent Associates Ordered to Arbitration

N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Arthur Markewich has directed Videotape Productions, of N.Y., to submit its complaint against Talent Associates-Paramount to arbitration. Complaint grew out of TA-Paramount's plans for a syndicated "Command Performance" anthology series, under which Edward Albee's "American Dream" was to be telecast.

According to the complaint, plaintiffs and defendant entered a contract to produce the "Command Performance" vidtape series and that the series would be available for at least one showing in U.S. cities, without any additional payments. Plaintiff said it invested $14,850 for the initial program, Albee's "American Dream," which Videotape Productions did.

Complaint charged that defendant breached the contract by failing to contact the author for permission to have program televised in the U.S. Other alleged breaches also were listed in the complaint.

Austin—James C. Hagerty, former press secretary during President Eisenhower's administration, will speak here at the U. of Texas during a series of lectures, Feb. 13-14, on law and the free society. Now an executive with ABC, Hagerty will speak on Feb. 14 and will discuss "A Government and the Public's Right To Know."

U.S. Telefilms In Britain

which often results in even-steven ratings, give or take a few points.

One industryite believes that as the U.K. is a buyers' market with the pick of the best American shows, the practice of pitting one topline Yank show against another almost invariably means each will acquire a "substantial" audience, but neither will snatch a rating big enough to elevate it to top 10 prominence.

Changing role of the American show in the British market has also been brought about by the regional stations on the commercial web. They now pick up shows from U.S. distribs (as opposed to taking the U.S. skeins on the network) in order to juggle schedules to suit themselves. This factor more than any other has resulted in a multiplicity of American shows playing the indie web. End result is that now no American series gets a full network showing on the commercial web.

This means that they are precluded automatically from the national top 20 list, fact which invalidates that particular chart as a guide to the success of American shows on these shores. More indicative of their popularity are the region-by-region listings which, on average, sport about one Yank show in the top 10 of each area.

BBC-TV's American buys, however, automatically get national exposure but, currently, the commercial web is running so far ahead of BBC on most nights of the week that U.S. series along with local shows on the Corporation outlet kick off with a No. 2 status handicap.

In some industry circles it is even suggested that British tv'ers are employing a deliberate policy of keeping foreign shows out of the rating lists because not only does this allow local shows to pile up prestige points (which set well with the Independent Television Authority) but also keeps the price of Yank vidfilm stable.

Indie major, Granada-TV, it's reported among vidfilm salesmen is one of the toughest customers on the indie web. Operating in the belief that almost any American-produced tv show will get an audience, it seldom offers top dollar. Rather, Granada slots a lot of its foreign quota product between 6-6:30 p.m. Monday to Friday, just prior to the big rating time. Station does, nonetheless, take one or two U.S. programs for prime time "troubleshooting" as, for instance, "Naked City" which opposed BBC-TV's onetime toprater "Maigret" and "Burke's Law" which is brought in to "equalize" BBC's "Z Cars."

Notwithstanding the fact that almost invariably Yank programs are opposed by the toughest competition available, or are out of prime time, or get a weak lead-in, or the fact that they are mostly outnumbered five to one in prime time on both webs, the American tv series is still delivering a healthy audience.

Picking a week last month at random, in the most keenly contested market, London, the American products rated thus:

Following a 20 lead-in from "Adventure" BBC's "Defenders" at 8:15 p.m. on Mondays pulled up to a 27 rating against the commercial web's "Ho Hiding Place." Latter averaged a 56 after being handed a 62 from "Coronation Street," one of the hottest shows in the U.K.

On Tuesdays, the 9:15 battle between BBC's "Maigret" and the indies' "Naked City" saw the former show, previously in the top 10, held to a 41 rating by "City" which dropped only four rating points from its 39 handover from the newscast. Earlier "The Lucy Show" on BBC cued in a big switchover from commercial network to snare a 42, the second highest rating of the night.

Wednesday's "Z Cars" — "Ben Casey" scrap finds "Casey" holding the local cops 42-37, though the BBC program gained dramatically from its poor 26 lead-in.

The "Kildare"—"Empire" clash on Thursdays resulted in a 34-43 rating score respectively while, later, "My Favorite Martian" cut back BBC's "Sportsview" lead (gained against the local "This Week" show) to score a 31.

"Burke's Law" on commercial tv Fridays, hold's BBC-TV's "Dr. Finlay's Casebook" at bay 51-26, following a 50 handover from "Emergency Ward 10."

The hotsy American show on Sunday nights is undoubtedly "Beverly Hillbillies" which in its 10:30 p.m. berth scores anything up to a 50 rating for the commercial web. Though the mighty Palladium show (53) is still undaunted by "Perry Mason," which is in opposition for BBC, the latter still scores a 23.

In less fiercely contested markets, the Yank shows do even better with rating in the 50s. And thus they provide a "solid middle" block of rating earners all over the nation.

But perhaps the best indication of Yank programming's worth in the U.K.—in it's new "solid middle" status—is the fact that there's not one station here running a minute under its quota ration.

They are even stepping in to buy U.S. documentaries which, because of their educational value, can be screened under what is known as the "outer quota"—that is the difference between 14% of total output and eight hours.

and vid people have showed. If selling is not a major point, it has been brulted that a special interchange and packaging of the prizewinners between the countries involved, and ready for rental to others, may be in the offing.

Suffice it to say that the general level during the first part of the fest is good with some outstanding ones making up for the few lacklustre ones that go in. Over 140 programs were sifted to get the programs competing. Last year's fests, both film and tv, suffered from an overall quality dearth. This may bode a better vintage for '64 if the level maintains its early promise.

The International Catholic Assn. of Radio and TV will give its UNDA prize this year via a special jury and, for the first time, the International Committee for the Propagation of Arts and Letters by Film will give its CIDALC prize to a tv program.

Fest jury consists of a 15-man international group from 11 countries. Tetsuro Furukaki, formerly head of Japanese tv and radio and recently Japanese Ambassador to France, was unanimously elected president. In an acceptance speech, he made it clear it was a great honor to be elected in a year when the Olympic Games will be held in his country as well as a mark of acceptance into the western community since this is the first time an Asian has headed an international fest jury.

Rest of the jury has Cecil Smith, L.A. Times tv editor, Yank actress Jessie Royce Landis, Italo composer Renzo Rossellini, Italo stage and screen star Gino Cervi, Edouard Hofman, director of tv film production in Czechoslovakia, Marcel Achard and Marcel Pagnol, well known French playwrights and authors, Viatcheslav Chernichev, veepee of state committee on radio and tv in Russia, Istvan Dobos, Hungarian TV council head, Constantin Prisnes, a veepee of Rumanian video, Heinz Von Plato, Eurovision director for German tv, French tv and govermental rep Emmanuel Bondeville, Belgian TV University head Theo Fleischemann and Monacan rep Arthur Crovetto.

Dann Digs Those TV Drama Series Vs. Anthologies

Reasons no anthology drama series will be found on CBS-TV next season, according to programming v.p. Mike Dann, is that the form no longer attracts the required mass audience, as measured by the Nielsens, nor does it win the critical acclaim, as in years past.

Dann held out some of the critical acclaim won by such CBS-TV entries as "East-Side, West Side" and "Defenders", against the kudos that newspaper reviewers afforded to anthology series on other networks, in the current season. Preponderance of critical acclaim went to series, he maintained.

As to the Nielsens, there hardly remains a question, with rating after rating going to those dramatic shows with continuing characters, i.e. series.

The shortage of good writers was held to be one reason for the demise of CBS anthology series. Dann contended that a series, as opposed to an anthology showcase, made it easier to attract good writers—many of the characters and situations being set, for example.

From five to six writers could form the major cadre of a series. An anthology series, Dann said, such as "Studio One" or "Playhouse 90" required from 12 to 15 writers.

He acknowledged that a series writer could fall into cliche situation after cliche situation, with the same characters going each week. That's the challange of the series form, though, according to Dann. The good series writer must learn not to lean on stet characters and situations, but must hit that creative ring, if he and the series is going to succeed.

As to serious subject matter, Dann maintained non-escape themes get an airing on many series. "Novak" had an episode dealing with anti-semitism; blacklisting was an issue tackled on "Defenders," and issues dealing with racial discrimination come up time and again on "East Side, West Side" and on "Nurses."

CBS-TV's program topper dismissed the nostalgia associated with the "golden age of drama" on tv. Dann maintains only one out of five dramas in an anthology series in years past was above average, while one out of every eight or 10 was considered excellent. In Dann's opinion the batting average of episodes in current drama series is better than that.

middle, sang a medley of pop love songs, with only a music stand as a prop.

Unfortunately, the setting and the repetitousness of Como's delivery were dulling. There was some charm and nonsense in the Texas Boys Choir. Dorothy Provine was so-so in her vocal and dance numbers and Russ Tamblyn did a silly dance turn themed at stamping out a fly.

It wasn't until the final segment that sparks began to fly, when Jimmy Durante took over for a solo and some funny biz with Como and the rest of the Company.

Chrysler Theatre

"The Seven Little Foys" was family entertainment with a small f. Melville Shavelson's script (an adaptation of his original screen play) stripped the cob clean for this NBC-TV-Chrysler musicomedy in the tradition of those show biz theatricals of the 30's.

Based roughly on the life of vaudevillian Eddie Foy and his loaded kid act, the show none-theless didn't lack for a certain dilapidated charm. Most of the latter was supplied by Mickey Rooney, in his foregone roll of George M. Cohan, and Eddie Foy Jr., who somehow managed to string together an hour of one-liners into a rather cohesive and convincing characterization of his late father. The Osmond Brothers (4), joined by a younger brother and Christie Jordan and Suzanne Cupito, were less successful in the kid roles. Okay support came from George Tobias as the Foy's agent, Elaine Edwards as a school teacher, Naomi Stevens as their aunt and Peter Hobbs as President Woodrow Wilson.

Plot revolved around some nonsense about the kids retiring from show biz to get an education, all of which was glued together rather flimsily by vet film director David Butler.

Host Bob Hope was around briefly for intros and commentary.

master's degree while working as a babysitter. She conceived idea of Linwood while working at Children's House in Washington, D.C., and eventually acquired a 200 year old colonial mansion which today, houses the children whose clouded minds, she and her staff are attempting to clear.

The WJZ-TV team spent most time at the home, training cameras on children as they worked with instructors and catching, on occasion, children as they erupted under the strain. It was sympathetically handled, the arrangement was effective and the quality in film and sound were very high.

WJZ-TV plans to do six documentaries of this sort. If they are almost as successful as "Miss Simons" they will be successful enough.

GORGEOUS GEORGE WAS AN OLYMPIC CHAMPION

Los Angeles.

Editor, VARIETY:

Somewhere up in that great Grunt & Groan Valhalla, a man with an orchid robe and peroxide hair is taking mighty exception to your description in VARIETY that he was an "inferior athlete." I refer to Gorgeous George who, as George Wagner, was the Olympic middleweight champion in 1936 and the light heavyweight champion of the world when he was still wrestling under his proper name. His flying headlock, according to such authorities as Dick Lane (character actor turned announcer for the wrestling here on KTLA), was one of the most devastating and clever holds ever known to the grappling game.

I am suggesting this correction with apologies because, since Wednesday night out here on the Coast is somewhat stronger on tv—what with Dick Van Dyke and Danny Kaye—I am no longer the parlor authority on wrestling as I was in the days when Grunt & Groan was practically all we had on the idiot box and I was a rapt devotee, believing 100% every grimace and crunch of the bones.

NBC Sings Along

Nielsen report covering the two weeks ending Dec. 22 (national book), Miller had captured the timeslot with a 31.8 share against 28.8 for "East Side, West Side" and a 25.2 for "Breaking Point." In the Dec. 23 30-market Nielsen, "Sing" leaped to a 47 share, but that figured to a degree because of the Xmas special which was in its third rerun and which always grabbed an audience plus. Soon after, "East Side, West Side" was preempted by a CBS special on the Pope's Holy Land junket, and Miller lost out to "Breaking Point" as the "East Side, West Side" audience jumped to the ABC show, taking agony over Godliness apparently. But the last 30 market had Miller out front again with George C. Scott ("ES,WS") runner up.

Anyhow, the hysteria has subsided, and Miller figures the one "missing ingredient" in the early days of the season was that direct, on-air promo viewer guide.

DRAMA—EXPERIMENT II
(Long Distance)
With Jan Miner, Jackson Beck, Claudia Morgan, Mildred Clinton, Grace Keddy, Virginia Payne, William Griffis, Jane Amar, Abby Lewis, Karl Weber, Bill Grey, Frank Thomas Sr., Norman Rose
Producer-Director: Kenneth MacGregor
Writer: Harry W. Junkin
30 Mins., Sun., 6:30 p.m.
NBC, from N. Y.

This was NBC Radio's second experiment to see if the public would like a return of radio drama (the first drew more than 4,000 listener responses). Harry W. Junkin's "Long Distance," a 1948 stanza from the "Radio City Playhouse" reproduced for the experiment, was a taut little piece of melodrama that might be standout in a tv adaptation dropped into the middle of video's nightly series grind. But, at least in the New York market, where radio drama (what's left of it) is mostly highly sophisticated stuff on FM, it seemed an anachronism.

Themed to a woman's attempts to reach the proper authority by phone who could stop the execution of her husband, "Long Distance" in its day was derivative of the famous and often repeated, "Sorry, Wrong Number," which starred Anges Moorehead "Long Distance," none-the-less, brought Harry Junkin from Canada to NBC and prominence as a radio dramatist of the late '40s (he's now in London scripting on the "Saint" tv series).

As the frantic wife trying to reach the judge who at the last minute could delay her husband's execution on the strength of new evidence, Jan Miner was first-rate in the role which demanded a frantic pitch from beginning to end. Support was all minor, but competently handled by the large cast. The phone bits were realistic enough to draw a number of complaints from New York operators after the show, according to an NBC radio exec Bill.

BREAKFAST AT THE NEW ENGLANDER
With Paul Baker, Abe Najany
Producer: Baker
45 mins., Wed., 9:15 a.m.
PARTICIPATING
WLAD, Danbury, Conn.

With Danbury's big New Englander hotel-motel pouring orange juice and coffee at 25c. a head and Wonder Bread contributing the bread for the toast, WLAD is building a community attraction in its midweek matutinal session.

For the housewives at the tables as well as for the at-homers it's a palatable session of aural knicknacks ad-libbed by Paul Baker and Abe Najany, both longtime area radio standbys. There are dozens of prizes, as well as trading stamps, many of them contributed by the 20-odd participating sponsors. ("Shop at the Store with the WLAD Mike on the Door.")

From attendance of less than 20 at the initial "Breakfast" turnout has now grown to almost 200. Elem.

Col Pictures' Music-Disk Wing Maps Major Drive Into Films, TV & B'way

Don Kirshner, exec veepee of the music and record division of Columbia Pictures-Screen Gems TV, has mapped a campaign for a major drive into the film, tv and Broadway musical areas. The branchout, incidentally, will not divert from the Screen Gems-Columbia Music activities in the pop field.

Kirshner is already planning to use the young composers on his roster, whenever possible, to provide music for such tv shows as "Grindl," "The Donna Reed Show" and "The Farmer's Daughter." Marvin Cane, Screen Gems-Columbia Music's veepee, revealed that a group of the firm's writers will go to Hollywood in February for a series of conferences with Lou Adler, veepee for Coast activities, and studio exec Jonie Taps to discuss potential film and tv assignments.

Currently, Screen Gems-Columbia Music staffers are auditioning properties in a search for legit vehicles for their writers. Several producers have already engaged in huddles with Kirshner and indications are that the publishing company will be actively represented on Broadway before the end of this year.

In the film area, Kirshner's youthful writing staff has already produced a title song for "Where The Boys Are" and "Does Goodnight Mean Goodbye" from the score of Carl Foreman's "The Victors." The firm is now working on the music for other pix now being produced both in the U. S. and abroad.

Meantime, the operations on the pop level continue to swing under the aegis of director Charles Koppelman, talent coordinator Don Rubin and artist and production coordinator Al Gordon. Also, the firm recently set up a Nashville operation under the direction of Tony Moon.

ROY BERRY TO REIN CAMPBELL CONNELLY

London, Jan. 28.

Roy Berry, general manager of the Campbell Connelly publishing group, has been elected to the company's board. Following the death last September of Reg Connelly, Berry now officially takes the reins of the company, a role he filled during the interim.

Also upped are Miss L. Young, longtime personal secretary to Connelly, and George Seymour who becomes a director of Cinephone Music, in addition to his directorship of Harrison Music.

Berry has instituted what he calls "a new progressive policy" which is paying off in the shape of Dave Clark's Beatle-shifting hit, "Glad All Over." Berry plans to visit the U.S. in April for dickers with his Yank rep, Mike Gould. He'll also visit Chicago, Nashville and Los Angeles to pick up fresh material.

British '63 Disk Sales Hit $98,000,000 Jackpot

London, Jan. 28.

Financial sources reveal that the British wax boom hit a new high in 1963 with a yield expected to top $98,000,000 for the year. Of this, it is estimated $14,000,000 will go to the Treasury in purchase tax.

Figures compare with 1962 totals of $91,000,000 in disk sales and $21,000,000 in PT (operating at a higher rate).

Honolulu, Jan. 28.

Five singers will fly in to appear in the Honoluolu Symphony Society's opera festival, which will consist of three performances each of "Rigoletto" and "Die Fledermaus."

Coming here as guest artists will be tenor Frank Porretta, sopranos Elizabeth Cole and Olivia Bonelli, baritone Benjamin Rayson and contralto Leonore Lanzillotti.

Beatles' 'Offspring' Wax

Capitol Records, which is now riding high with The Beatles, a British import, is spawning some Stateside stuff along similar lines.

The U.S.-originated Beatle-angles songs to be released by Capitol are "My Boyfriend Got A Beatle Haircut," song by Donna Lynn and "The Beetle" by Gary Usher, who is making his debut on the label.

UA Talent Into Carnegie Hall, N.Y.

United Artists Records is moving into New York's Carnegie Hall with two of its artists scheduled for concerts there on consecutive Saturdays. Riz Ortolani, the Italian conductor-composer-arranger, will make is American debut there Feb. 8 with his singer-wife Katyna Ranieri, and Shirley Bassey, singer from England, is slated for a Feb. 15 appearance there.

Ortolani and Miss Ranieri arrive in the U.S. on Feb. 1 and will be involved in extensive tv, radio and press interviews. Ortolani will also discuss future album product with UA toppers.

Ortolani, who composed the score for the pix "Mondo Cane" and "Women of the World," recently signed an exclusive recording deal with UA and an exclusive composing contract with Unart, the UA music publishing affiliate.

Miss Bassey is due in New York Feb. 8 and will also do the tv-radio guest route. Her Carnegie show will be conducted by her husband, Tony Osborne. Plans are under way to record Miss Bassey at Carnegie for a future UA album release. After the Carnegie date, Miss Bassey flies to Hollywood for a tv guest shot, then to Australia for nightclub appearances.

Cap Grooves New Orig Cast LP of B'way 'Fringe'

Capitol Records has put the latest edition of the Broadway production, "Beyond The Fringe" into the original cast album groove. The new edition produced by Alexander H. Cohen and tagged "Beyond The Fringe 1964" premiered Jan. 8.

The diskery put the new edition into the groove Monday night (27) at a special performance at New York's Judson Hall. The new LP will be totally different from the original "Fringe" package which Capitol issued in November, 1962.

In the "Fringe" cast are Alan Bennett, Peter Cook, Dudley Moore and Paxton Whitehead. All have been with the show since its inception in England three years ago except for Whitehead, who replaced Dr. Jonathan Miller.

Dave Axelrod to Cap As LP & Singles Prod.

Dave Axelrod has joined the artists & repertoire department of Capitol Records as an album and singles producer.

Axelrod has been a freelance producer since 1961 and for three years prior to that was a&r director for Hi Fi Records. According to Voyle Gilmore, Cap's a&r veepee, Axelrod will be active in all areas including pop, rhythm & blues, and jazz.

Gilmore indicated that a number of artists currently on Capitol's roster would be assigned to Axelrod this week.

TOP SIX LABEL STIRS BRIT. MKT.

By ROGER WATKINS

London, Jan. 28.

In an unprecedented move which could spur local diskeries into new spheres of waxtivity, Pye Records is about to launch nationally a platter which "covers" six numbers in the local disk best-sellers. It will be marketed for 94c, the same price as a regular single and will be backed with extensive radio-tv promotion.

Called Top Six, the label will be released on a monthly basis. First six-tracker, which will be distributed throughout the country from next Saturday (1), covers the following hits: "Glad All Over," "I Want To Hold Your Hand," "I'm The One," "Needles And Pins," "Hippy Hippy Shake" and "24 Hours From Tulsa." Songs have been cut by anonymous artists, but the arrangements, "sound" and "atmosphere" of the numbers in question are almost exactly identical with the originals.

Pye's decision to move into this field (also currently being explored by one or two small labels) follows an approach by indie producer Bill Wellings who launched the Top Six label last April and has been marketing it through a book publishing company.

Pye Eyes 100,000 Sales

Via this publishing network and, later, through certain record stores, too, Wellings has been racking up sales as high as 25,000 for his one-a-month releases. Pye now anticipates to hike the sale to 100,000 over the whole country.

One of the main reasons Wellings is able to bring his six-track waxes out for the same retail price as the normal single is his absence of overhead. He now records at Pye's London studios and beyond an initial agreed payment, artists get no residuals from the disks.

According to Wellings, Top Six's national release will not necessarily affect the sales of singles. "Our records are issued," he said, "when the originals have shot their bolt saleswise." Market for Top Six disks, it's claimed, is the section of the public which likes pop music but does not follow the star names as do the kids.

Stores Back Plan

Disk stores' attitude to the new label, as presented by the Gramophone Record Retailers Assn., is that Top Six will not cut across normal sales but may bring in additional business. According to Harry Tipple, general secretary of GRRA, projects similar to the Top Six enterprise have been tried by other record producers who have marketed through newsagents, confectionery stores and other non-diskstore outlets with a fair amount of success.

"We go along with Pye on Top Six," he said, "because they are going to be made available to bona fide record retailers and not through shops outside the business."

Within the wax industry, comment on the Pye Top Six venture is mainly reserved. However, it is generally thought that success of the scheme lies in the producer's ability to anticipate the bestsellers quickly enough to enable him to set up sessions, produce the disks and distribute them in time to catch the market.

Success of the Top Six banner, however, could easily precipitate other such "cover" labels from the main record companies. It will be remembered that Pye launched the lowpriced album on the British market, The Golden Guinea series, which was subsequently followed up by Decca and EMI, the two major waxworks.

C-P's 13c Divvy

The board of directors of Cameo-Parkway Records declared a quarterly dividend of 13c per share on Jan. 22, payable March 10 to stockholders of record Feb. 15.

This is the sixth consecutive quarterly dividend declared by the company.

Victor's Sholes Beating Talent Bushes To Win Ideas & Influence More Biz

Varga: A Needed Hero

Honolulu, Jan. 28.

George Barati, conductor of the Honolulu Symphony, faces the cancellation of his own new Cello Concerto when Bernard Michelin wired his unavailability because of an injured thumb. Desperate search for a substitute cellist in New York and Paris were fruitless but Barati ran down Laszlo Varga of the N.Y. Philharmonic (for 11 years) in San Francisco.

Varga agreed. Stayed up all one night familiarizing himself with the concerto, then flew to Honolulu and performed. Had a pronounced success.

Crescendo, L. A., Wins Tooter Cut

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

AFMusicians' Local 47, which for years has had a quota of a minimum of eight musicians applied to Crescendo has relaxed its ruling to four men, following appeal by nitery owner Shelly Davis.

Argument advanced by Davis was that many acts playing spot carry own sidemen, and in other instances certain singers demand specific number of backstoppers in contracts to play Crescendo. Recently, Davis pointed out to the union, Wayne Newton brought three accompanists with him when playing club, and also demanded 10 additional sidemen.

In brief, Davis argued, nitery would average, over a year, about eight tooters weekly, but for some bills would need only four. Union agreed, when noting that such an act as the Village Stompers (nine instrumentalists), booked March 4-29, would not require eight house tooters on bill.

For first two weeks of Stompers' stand, Vaughn Meader plays Crescendo, at $2,250 per frame, and for last half another comic, Wes Harrison, is on bill.

One facet which possibly weighed in Davis' favor in his appeal to Local 47 is that union had feared when he opens new spot, Whisky A Go-Go (formerly The Party), he may not use tooters, as spot's primary appeal is stereo disked music. However, Davis has signed Johnny Rivers Trio to supply live music between stereo sets (45 minutes live to 15 wax) between 10 p.m. and 2 a.m. Stereo solos from 4-10 p.m.

Mills Bros. and Bobby Vinton, current with Don Sherman at Crescendo, carry own guitarists.

Realm Records Invades Jazz Mkt.; Sir Distribbing

Realm Records Corp. of America is the latest label to move into the jazz field. The diskery, which will be based in New York, is headed by Jackson Leighter, who is also president of Sir Records.

Realm's first two releases are "Jazz For Bach Buffs" by the Baroque Jazz Ensemble" and "Lullabies In Jazz" by pianist Dave McKenna.

In most markets, Realm will be released through Sir distributors. In the distrib field, Sir has just appointed Music Suppliers (Boston), M. S. Distributing (Chicago), Walter Slagle & Co. (Denver), Roberts Records (St. Louis), and Bold (Hialeah).

LONDON'S 'BED' ALBUM

London Records has latched on to the soundtrack album rights of the Italian film, "To Bed Or Not To Bed."

The score is by Nino Olivetti and is being published by Frank Music.

The talent picture at RCA Victor will be broadened by tapping new diskers from such other show biz sources as tv and pix. That's the plot being blue-printed by Steve Sholes, diskery's division veepee who recently took over the pop artists & repertoire department.

According to Sholes, tv and film exposure can be an important plus factor in launching a new artist and eliminates somewhat the "terribly expensive" outlay it takes to kick off a new artist without credits in any other area.

Sholes pointed out that you can't wait for artists to come from other labels although occasionally you can pick up talent that can score on a major label from an indie company. (It's recalled that the prime example of this was demonstrated by Sholes himself when he brought Elvis Presley to Victor from the small Sun label in 1956.)

Already Under Way

Sholes already has a program under way to tap the tv-pic areas for recording talent and admits that he's just about ready to take off with the first such acquisition. He is keeping the name of the new Victor pactee under wraps for the time being but admits that the disk newcomer has a strong show business name and background.

In addition to the development of new talent, which, by the way, Sholes said, will not effect the continual concentration on the company's "backbone artists," there will be a steady search for new ideas and material for singles and albums.

"Creativity is the key," says Sholes, "and I'm keeping open all avenues of approach to publishers, managers and anyone with a recording idea."

Complex Business

Sholes pointed out that the business has become so complex that nobody can come up with all the ideas needed to keep the product flowing. "An a&r man today," he said, "must be somewhat of a brainpicker and that's where the music publishing people and managers can be of help."

Sholes' operational theory will be carried over to Victor's creative areas in Nashville and the Coast as well as in New York.

To further his drive for new ideas, Sholes recently set up a "special projects" deartment in

LAWRENCE, EX-COLPIX, SHIFTS TO ROULETTE

Ray Lawrence has joined the sales department of Roulette Records. He'll function as the diskery's field sales representative for the label, working with distributors, rack merchandisers and one-stops.

In his new post, Lawrence will be responsible to Bud Katzel, the company's general sales manager. Immediately following the diskery's sales meeting in Miami, Lawrence left for his first sales tour during which time he'll be concentrating on the label's January sales program.

Lawrence comes to Roulette after a stint as national sales manager for the Colpix label. Prior to the Colpix assignment, he was branch manager for Cosnat in L.A.

Nero's Far East Tour

Peter Nero, disker on the RCA Victor label, has been set for his first personal appearance tour of the Far East. He's scheduled to appear in a group of theatre and tv concert engagements in Japan in late summer.

Nero will appear in Tokyo and several other major cities playing a repertoire ranging from pop to jazz to the classics. His appearances there will coincide with the release of "Sunday In New York" pic in which he debuts as an actor and soundtrack score composer.

Welk's 'Songs,' Astronauts' 'A-OK,' Martino's 'Life,' Williams' 'World,' Tillotson's 'Lips' Top New LPs

"LAWRENCE WELK PLAYS SONGS EVERYBODY KNOWS" (Coral). What is there to say about Lawrence Welk that hasn't already been said. He has long been a continuous success on both disks and tv, making his "champagne music" a household word across the country. For this album he puts his familiar sound, along with his w.k. vocalists, to work on a set of tunes known to almost everyone except the most ardent rock 'n' roller or folknik. As with previous Welk sessions, this one should enjoy considerable favor. It has all the ingredients of past clicks, plus the nostalgia of the music itself.

THE ASTRONAUTS: "EVERYTHING IS A-OK!" (RCA Victor). The Astronauts took off several months ago with their first album, "Surfin' With The Astronauts," and have been riding high ever since. In this package, the boys continue to play up their surf music beat but the added attraction is the enthusiasm they whip up in their audience. It's all captured here in this on-the-spot recording of a date at the Club Baja in Denver. The boys sing and play a flock of melodies that fit easily into their exciting musical style. Among them are "Bo Diddley," "If I Had A Hammer," "Shortnin' Bread" and "Big Boss Man."

AL MARTINO: "LIVING A LIE" (Capitol). In the past year Al Martino has come up with a string of single clicks and each has been used as the peg for a successful album. Latest is "Living A Lie," a strong singles entry and now a natural as a lure for a big sales takeoff in the album market. The Martino baritone is as forceful as ever and once again he's picked up a strong repertoire to get his vocal points across. With the help of a flavorsome orch under the direction of Peter DeAngleis, Martino scores with such memorable items as "Mexicali Rose," "Vaya Con Dios," "That's My Desire," "Don't Cry Joe" and "Are You Lonesome Tonight." All are spinning winners.

"THE WONDERFUL WORLD OF ANDY WILLIAMS" (Columbia). Andy Williams, who's done all right by himself in the disk field for the past several years, has brought his family into the act for this new LP outing. It's a delightful package of faves amiably sung by Williams, his brothers, Claudine Williams and the entire Williams family. Andy Williams still leads the way, though, soloing neatly on "This Is All I Ask" and "A Fool Never Learns," or working with his brothers on "Dream" or dueting with Claudine Williams on "Let It Be Me" or with the whole group on "First Born." It's a happy occasion for all.

JOHNNY TILLOTSON: "TALK BACK TREMBLING LIPS" (MGM). Johnny Tillotson joined the MGM label only a few months ago and took off quickly with his first single entry "Talk Back Trembling Lips." Now that it's been made the title of his first album, there should be no trouble in getting him going for the label in the LP market as well. The title song is the big lure, of course, but he gives such other clicks as "Blowin' In The Wind," "Blue Velvet," "Danke Schoen" and "I Can't Stop Loving You" a beat and an interpretation of his own that makes 'em worth hearing again.

"FOUR DAYS THAT SHOCKED THE WORLD" (Colpix). With the help of United Press International, Colpix has put together a memorable disk document of the voices and events surrounding the asassination of President Kennedy in Dallas (Nov. 22) to his burial at Arlington (Nov. 25). The LP uses actual radio reports from stations around the nation and they remain as intriguing and shocking as the initial broadcasts. The narration is Reid Collins of WNEW Radio News and the insert booklet, "The Murder of a Young President," is by Merriman Smith of UPI.

MARTY GOLD ORCH: "FOR SOUND'S SAKE" (RCA Victor). The accent is on bigness here (12 violins, three violas, three cellos, four trumpets, five trombones, three French horns, four reeds, bass, drums, etc.), but Marty Gold keeps it all under control. He produces a big sound pegged for the disk's Dynagroove techniques but he never loses his melodic way in the audio push. "Baubles, Bangles and Beads," "All The Things You Are," "September Song," "Moon Indigo" and other tunes of such standard ilk take on fresh audio colors in Gold's handling.

"A PROFILE IN COURAGE/ JOHN F. KENNEDY" (Regina). There's apparently no letup on the disk tributes to the late John F. Kennedy. This latest package follows the pattern of many of the earlier entries with excerpts of speeches made by the President and eulogies delivered after the assassination. The lavish album cover of black felt and gold type should work in its favor and lure the buyer who wants some Kennedy memorabilia.

BIG TINY LITTLE: "HONKY TONK HOOTENANNY" (Coral). Honky tonk pianist Big Tiny Little turns his attention to the folk scene and, backed by a chorus and a guitar plus his regular combo, delivers several familiar items with enthusiasm. The honky tonk piano's tinny sound fits surprisingly well into the folk groove, having somewhat the effect of a banjo. The chorus and instrumental backing assure the folk of coming off. Several fave pop-folk tunes like "Green, Green," "Tom Dooley," "Walk Right In," "Greenback Dollar" and others score solidly.

EDIE ADAMS: "BEHIND THOSE SWINGIN' DOORS" (Decca). This is a nice outing for singer-comedienne Edie Adams. She handles a varied repertoire here, mixing some unfamiliar items with w.k. tunes and swings from ballads to uptempo numbers with facility. Her expressive style is held in simple, yet effective control, and the result is a pleasing platter. There's a warmth on the ballads and a driving quality on blues and swingers that puts the LP over with savvy and appeal. Backed by her bi-weekly tv show, this solid session should get some deserving attention.

"THE ROMANTIC PIANOS OF RONNIE ALDRICH" (London). Backed by the strings of the London Festival Orchestra, pianist Ronnie Aldrich displays his ability to present familiar tunes in a rich and romantic style. The result is a smooth and sophisticated tour of such tunes as "Deep Purple," "I'll Never Smile Again," "I Have Dreamed," "September Song," "If I Loved You" and more. The performance is enhanced by London Records' "Phase 4 Stereo" process which projects the pianist and the string orch with clarity and full tones. The LP should find a solid reception among "good" music programmers and customers alike.

ROBERTA SHERWOOD: "THE COUNTRY SOUND WITH SOUL" (ABC-Paramount). Roberta Sherwood's belting power is excellently suited to the "Nashville Sound." She takes to the country music catalog with a fervor of the hill-born folk and she does 'em all just as potent. Her natural-born pop flair is still apparent, though, which should give a wider spinning range to the likes of "Slipping Around," "I Walk The Line," "Trouble In Mind," "Careless Love" and "Walk On By." Cliff Parman's arranging and conducting helps authenticate the Nashville mood.

THE SERENDIPITY SINGERS: "SERENDIPITY" (Philips). The folk boom has given birth to countless groups of instrumentalists and vocalists. Latest vogue seems to be the development of large-size units, and the nine-member Serendipity Singers are one of these. Their style is to take full advantage of their size for maximum impact. Arrangements are clever and compact, giving individuals the spotlight occasionally, then rising to a full-range chorus cresendo for punctuation. At other times the full-bodied sound is used throughout for big, lusty effect. This should be a successful platter debut.

Top Singles Of The Week

(The 'Best Bets' of This Week's 100-Plus Releases)

BARBRA STREISAND — I AM WOMAN
(Columbia) . . . . . People

Barbra Streisand's "I Am Woman" (Chappell), from the upcoming musical, "Funny Girl," is a standout piece of material which this powerful song stylist belts all the way home. "People," (Chappell*), from the same show, is a slow-tempoed entry with a striking idea handled very effectively.*

LOUIS ARMSTRONG . . . . . HELLO, DOLLY
(Kapp) . . . . . A Lot of Livin' To Do

Louis Armstrong's "Hello, Dolly" (E. H. Morris), legit musical title song, gives this great performer an okay, if strictly conventional, number to work over with his usual vocal savvy against a Dixieland background. "A Lot of Livin' To Do" (E. H. Morris*), from "Bye Bye Birdie," has an easy swing to it.*

THE BEATLES . . . . . MY BONNIE
(MGM) . . . . . The Saints

The Beatles' "My Bonnie" (p.d.) gives this British combo a frantic showcase in the groove which has catapulted them into international phenoms. "The Saints" (p.d.) is another oldie fashioned into an above-par rocking slice with definite Elvis Presley overtones. These sides turn up on the MGM label via its hookup with the German Polydor diskery.

BROOK BENTON . . . . . GOING GOING GONE
(Mercury) . . . . . After Midnight

Brook Benton's "Going Going Gone" (Gil†) clicks as a solid ballad conception with a well-written lyric delivered with a slow, but firm beat that'll grab plenty of spins. "After Midnight" (Raleigh-Bendayt) is a blues-styled ballad, also vocalled in excellent form.

MARV JOHNSON . . . . . UNBREAKABLE LOVE
(United Artists) . . The Man Who Don't Believe In Love

Marv Johnson's "Unbreakable Love" (Edlock-Stride†) shapes up as one of the best rocking tunes which this singer has had in some time and could bring him back to the bestseller lists. "The Man Who Don't Believe In Love" (Jobete†) is an okay ballad also aimed at the teen set.

SOLOMON BURKE . . . . . HE'LL HAVE TO GO
(Atlantic) . . . . . Rockin' Soul

Solomon Burke's "He'll Have To Go" (Central Songs†) is an arresting rhythm ballad which this blues singer delivers in potent commercial style. "Rockin' Soul" (Cotillion†) is a shuffling rhythm instrumental that'll get the teenagers hoofing.

GWEN STACEY — AIN'T GONNA CRY NO MORE
(RCA Victor) . . . . . Give Thanks To a Friend

Gwen Stacey's "Ain't Gonna Cry No More" (Dragonwyck†) is an arresting ballad in a rocking idiom which this songstress delivers sharply with a fine instrumental assist. "Give Thanks To A Friend" (Dragonwyck†) has some offbeat angles to give it a special edge with a juke set.

THE MAJORS . . . . . I'LL BE THERE
(Imperial) . . . . . Ooh Wee Baby

The Majors' "I'll Be There" (Rittenhouse-Travis†) shapes up as a swinging rocker with a typical teen message delivered by this high-pitched combo in ace style. "Ooh Wee Baby" (Rittenhouse-Travis†) is another good rhythm entry in a familiar pattern.

DICK & DEEDEE . . DON'T THINK TWICE, IT'S ALL RIGHT
(Warner Bros.) . . . . . All My Trials

Dick & Deedee's "Don't Think Twice, It's All Right" (Witmark) is a bright folk-styled number by Bob Dylan which this duo delivers in standout style for strong potential. "All My Trials" (Odin*) is a good version of a traditional number popularized by Joan Baez.*

IAN & SYLVIA . . . . . SOME DAY SOON
(Vanguard) . . . . . You Were On My Mind

Ian & Sylvia's "Some Day Soon" (Witmark) is a melodic folk-styled ballad which this duo handles in a style which should have broad impact. "You Were On My Mind" (Witmark*) is another fine folk item with chances.*

PAT BOONE — I LIKE WHAT YOU DO
(Dot) . . . . . Never Put It In Writing

Pat Boone's "I Like What You Do" (Witmark) registers as an appealing soft-shoe ballad with a nifty lyric dished up in commercial style. "Never Put It In Writing" (Spoone*), pic title song, is a good rocking idea also aimed at the teenage market.*

CLAUDE KING . . . . . THAT'S WHAT MAKES THE WORLD GO AROUND
(Columbia) . . . . . A Lace of Mantilla and a Rose of Red

Claude King's "That's What Makes The World Go Around" (Gallico†) shapes up as a rhythmically catchy number tailored for this fine country-flavored singer. "A Lace of Mantilla and A Rose of Red" (Painted Desert†) is a topnotch south-of-the-Rio Grande number, also projected to the hilt.

NANCY HOLLOWAY . . . . . CHANTE
(London International) . . . . Big Noise From Winnetka

Nancy Hollaway's "Chante" (Merrimac†) is a striking performance in French by a rocking songstress who could turn this one into a novelty hit. "Big Noise From Winnetka" (Bregman, Vocco & Conn) also turns up in a driving Gallic version which adds new values to this swing standard.*

JACKIE WILSON . . — HAUNTED HOUSE
(Brunswick) . . . . . I'm Travelin' On

Jackie Wilson's "Haunter House" (Merrimac†) is an interesting torch ballad with an original lyric projected in ultra-dramatic style for solid impact. "I'm Travelin' On" (Merrimac†) is an okay rocking performance in a familiar groove. — Herm.

Lotsa O'seas Names Team with Italo Singers as San Remo Festival Nears

By ROBERT F. HAWKINS

San Remo, Jan. 28.

Everything is set—or almost—for Italy's most-publicized musical events of the year, the San Remo Song Festival, which this year establishes precedent via the import of a large roster of foreign names to team with Italo performers on locally-penned new songs.

Inevitably, there have been some more last-minute changes in the roster, due to failure of Bob Azzam to free himself from dates, with the Cetra Quartet dittoing in the Italo sector. Azzam's two songs will now be sung respectively by Peter Krauss and Marina Moran, newest Cetra recruit, while the Cetra Quartet stint will get a fill-in by Aurelio Fierro.

There's also some last-minute doubt about presence of Tony Renis, a previous winner here, who may not get Army leave for the tree San Remo "days": Thursday (30), Friday (31) and Saturday.

11 Nations Participating

This gives San Remo participation by U.S., British, French, Canadian, German, Swiss, Israeli, Mexican, Argentinian Moroccan and Brazilian artists, as well as the score of local singers.

For a time, there was danger that the whole foreign participation might be endangered when an Italian artists union, CISL, entered a formal complaint about foreign performers infringing on local territorial rights. It asked ATA, the San Remo organizers, to drop the entire foreign roster, to be subbed by Italos as in the past.

Threat apparently did not reach effectiveness. (Several French performers had previously dropped out. But for other reasons, previously detailed, reputedly having to do with Gallic "jealousy" of the Italian event.)

With Mike Bongiorno and Giuliana Lojodice emceeing, San Remo also gets full RAI-TV and radio exposure on all three nights, with a Eurovision link slated for Sat. (1), the windup evening. RAI is taping show on first night, and perhaps second, to allow regular weekly program staples to run off on sked, with S.R. reruns inked in at later hours.

Italo singers, for the record, are: Claudio Villa, Domenico Modugno (both three-time winners looking for their fourth triumph here), Tony Dallara, Emilio Pericoli, Tony Renis, Aurelio Fierro, Pono Donaggio, Fausto Cigliano, Cocki Mazzetti, Little Tony, Giorgio Gaber, Gino Paoli, Milva, Jula de Palma, Nicola Arigliano, Fabrizio Ferretti, Piero Focaccia, Roby Ferrante, Laura Villa, Remo Germani, Bobby Solo, Lilly Bonato, Bruno Filippini and Gilgliola Cinquetti.

24 Songs Competing

Some 24 songs are in the race, and one orchestra will play under direction of various batonners. The voting system is new: only the winning tune will be announced; runners-up all theoretically rate the second spot.

Pre-race favorites are Paul Anka with Roby Ferrante's RCA platter, "Ogni Volta" (Every Time); Claudio Villa and Peggy March, both singing "Passo su Passo" (Step by Step); Domenico Modugno, teamed with Frankie Laine on his own "Che M'Importa a Me" (What do I Care); Pino Donaggio and Frankie Avalon on Donaggio's "Motivo D'Amore" (Love Tune), Tony Renis and Frankie Avalon on "I Sorrisi di Sera" (Smiles at Night).

Also rated are Umberto Bindi's "Ieri Ho Incotrato Mia Madre" (I Met my Mother Yesterday), which Antonio Prieto also sings (both for RCA); Milva in "L'Ultimo Tram di Mezzanotte" (Last Tram at Midnight). But the field is pretty wide open, and the usual dark horse may emerge.

LONDON JUKEBOX CO. AXES CIGGIE COM'LS

London, Jan. 28.

J. B. Marketing Ltd., outfit which in London has 300 jukeboxes running teen-aimed commercials between disks, has decided to nix cigaret advertising.

Step was taken after considering the growing strength of medical evidence linking ciggies with lung cancer. Company exec Ronald Ratcliffe sees this as a clear case of where "commercial advantage must bow to social responsibility."

Drayson Exits L. P. Sales To Form Hope Records

Harold Drayson, presently veepee of L. P. Sales Corp., has formed his own diskery to be known as Hope Records. Drayson will resign from his L. P. Sales post Feb. 1.

According to Drayson, his new company will concentrate on special services and record promotion to the disk industry.

L. P. Sales Corp. is national distributor of Riverside Records and affiliated labels.

Robbins Rejoins Cap

Larry Robbins has rejoined Capitol Records as director of policies and procedures. For the past three years, Robbins has been manager of policy development for the Aero Space Division of Boeing Aircraft in Seattle.

Before joining Boeing, Robbins had been with Cap for several years in policy and procedures. His first task is to update corporate policy and procedures manuals.

Victor, Atco Reps En Route to Fest

RCA Victor diskers Peggy March and Paul Anka took off for Rome and San Remo last week where they will participate in the 1964 San Remo pop music festival which begins tomorrow (Thurs.) and ends Saturday (1).

In addition to the two U.S. RCA entries, Victor will be represented by two local Italian artists, Gino Paoli and Roby Ferrante and also two Latin American artists, Los Hermanos Rigual from Mexico, and Antonio Prieto from Argentina.

Over this past weekend, Dario Soria, division veepee for RCA Victor's international record activities, flew to San Remo to coordinate with Guiseppe Ornato, general manager of RCA Italiana on the RCA Victor worldwide participation. Plans to release the winning songs in many languages are under way and will be completed at RCA's Rome studios.

Atco's Representation

Atco Records, a division of Atlantic, will also be represented at San Remo with Ben E. King and Nino Tempo & April Stevens.

After King's participation at San Remo, he'll go to England for a 30-day tour of Great Britain. His disks are released in Italy through SAAR and in England via London Decca.

Tempo and Miss Stevens, brother and sister, will spend several days in Milan after the San Remo fest conferring with the officials of SAAR, who release their recordings in Italy. It is then expected that they will fly to London for radio and tv appearances.

By DAVE JAMPEL

Tokyo, Jan. 28.

"Jazz was never really big in the United States and now there's almost nothing left," said impresario Norman Granz in explaining why he hasn't promoted one of his trademarked "Jazz at the Philharmonic" concert tours in the U.S. since 1957.

A resident of Switzerland since 1959, Granz is credited with having lifted jazz from the cellars to the concert halls on a wholesale basis and with giving the music and its players a dignity that had hitherto been elusive. No less important, through his tours and Verve recordings, he provided regular employment for a generation of top jazzmen.

Except for the abnormal years of 1948-51, when people were seeking release from wartime emotions and there was no competitive music for young people, jazz never really had a commercial vogue in the U.S., noted Granz, who is here with Ella Fitzgerald as the singer's personal manager. "That was the peak for what it was," he said.

Granz asserted that the general conception of jazz having been a commercial rage in America is false. He pointed to the prewar big-band era, to which people look in retrospect as having been flourishing for jazz, and said, "Benny Goodman and Artie Shaw were not really jazz as such. They were basically jazz bands. Kids were going to luxurious ballrooms."

He also disparaged the validity of impressive statistics of record sales during the period as a claim for jazz supremacy. "I don't care what figures anybody may cite about the sale of records in those days," Granz said. "They're talking about records costing 35c.

Granz Made Money

"I'm the only one who really made money on jazz," he added. "And when I had my last 'Jazz at the Philharmonic' tour in the U.S. seven years ago, jazz was already finished.

"The festivals had a lot to do with it," he explained. "In my kind of tour we had to play 50 cities, although 15 cities would subsidize the rest of it. You had to play that long to get a Gene Krupa to break up his band and come with us. You would have to sign him for 10 weeks. You would not only hit Detroit, for example, but Flint, Saginaw and the other cities nearby. But now if there's a festival in the area, it kills the whole territory. And festivals are finished too. It's sufficient evidence to note that no festival supports itself.

"Jazz blew it in terms of young people," Granz opined. "They have turned to things that have the beat. So there is no new crop of fans. And since that's been going on for some years, there are few young adult fans."

Musicians to Blame?

Asked if the musicians themselves are not at least partly to blame for the depressed state of jazz for having allowed the music to get too esoteric, Granz replied, "Subjectively, I think yes. I rather think that the kind of music being passed off today as good jazz has not attracted as many people as it might have. Also, folk music has drained off a tremendous amount of the potential jazz audience."

There was a time when Granz had just about all the major modern jazz artists under contract, giving him a virtual monopoly in concerts and records. The Verve diskery, which he founded, would sell more jazz records than all the other labels combined. But in line with his defection from the U.S. market, Granz sold Verve to MGM Records in 1960 and was contractually committed not to make records for seven years. "And by that time I'll be almost 50 years old and I don't intend to be in the record business," he said. The only exception to the pact is that Granz is permitted to continue producing Miss Fitzgerald's disks.

Outside of the U.S., Granz remains active as a jazz impresario. He promotes four or six tours a year in Europe, having started there in 1950. In Japan he pioneered with a "Jazz at the Philharmonic" visit in 1953. He also presents jazz packages on tour in South America.

Cap Inks Pete Brady; Gold-Udell Join Merc; Lulu Porter to Decca

Singer Pete Brady has joined the Capitol stable. Though subsequent recordings will be made under the direction of producer Bill Miller, Brady's first LP for Capitol was one he produced himself and which was purchased by the label.

Brady's album is as yet untitled and has not been assigned a release date. The backing is by Shorty Rogers. Brady, incidentally, doubles as a talent agent.

Mercury: Geld-Udell

Mercury Records has signed the Geld-Udell producing team in a deal which also brings singer Brian Hyland to the parent Philips label.

In addition to writing for Hyland, the Peter Udell-Gary Geld unit has also penned numbers for Jackie Wilson, Joni James, and Linda Hopkins.

Decca: Lulu Porter

Lulu Porter, 23-year old singer who represented the U.S. at the International Song Festival in Poland, has been signed to the Decca roster.

Currently scheduled for an extensive cross country promotional tour in conjunction with her role in U-I's "The Brass Bottle," Miss Porter recorded her first sides last week for Decca under supervision of Coast artists & repertoire staffer Bud Dant. The first single couples "The Brass Bottle" and "Parasolki" (Parasol), the Polish song with which Miss Porter won top honors at the Polish fest.

Atlantic: Little Esther

Little Esther (Phillips) has been signed to an exclusive longtermer by Atlantic Records. The diskery is now conferring with the singer to plan her first recording date. It's expected that she will cut her first in about two weeks.

Last year, Little Esther's recording of "Release Me" on the Lenox label, clicked on a national level. Previously she had recorded for the Savoy label.

Del-Fi: Pierre & Anne-Lyse

Pierre and Anne-Lyse, concert performers from Switzerland, have been signed to a five-year contract to the Del-Fi label, a Coast operation headed by Bob Keene.

The first single by the brother-and-sister team back-to-backs "Tourne-Toi" and "La Petite Souer." Both sides are in French, which is not so unusual, anymore, since the click of "Dominique," which had no English sub-titles, either.

Tin Pan Valley

By RED O'DONNELL

Nashville, Jan. 28.

Plans for Columbia's new recording studio have been okayed. Construction of the estimated $200,000 project is due to start this spring.

Faron Young is expanding. The Mercury artist is producing 26 weeks of country music radio shows (more than 100 15-minute programs). Texas writer Billy Deaton will handle sales and distribution. Young will host all shows; use top country and western artists as guests.

Singer-writer Curley Putnam named assistant to general manager-executive v.p. Buddy Killen at Tree Music.

Don Gibson moved to Nashville; resumed appearances on "Grand Ole Opry."

Flatt & Scruggs guesting on ABC-TV's Hootenanny, Feb. 8 and March 14.

Jud Collins, veteran broadcaster, upped to assistant g.m. of WSM-TV. He'll report to manager Irving Waugh, and coordinate news, sports and public affairs.

Hank Williams Jr. set for 25 personal appearances in Texas, Louisiana, Florida and Alabama during February.

Eddy Arnold in Knoxville to tape a hootennanny appearance at U. of Tennessee; due for airing March 7.

SHORT SHOTS — World premiere of Jim Reeves' "Kimberly Jim" (filmed in South Africa) scheduled here March 2 . . . Jerry Lewis in for Smash disk session . . . Burl Ives & wife Helen coming in for week's visit . . . Lonzo & Oscar back from tour of GI bases in Germany.

Inside Stuff—Music

George Auric, managing director of the Paris Opera, has a theory about the business of "original language versions" of operas. When it's a gala performance, he says, or a "special" set of a few performances, they can and should be played in the original. But when they are intended to be part of the theatre's repertory they are better in the native, local language, he feels. This because the bulk of the company cannot be expected to sing in German, Italian or what have you; they know their stuff only in French. Also, he feels customer resistance is involved. One can find audiences for one or two performances of opera in German or other languages, but the bulk of the opera dueibces want to hear the shows in language they know. That's what the man says, and that's why there are only a half dozen performances a year at his theatre in languages other than French—though his program is printed in French, English and German.

AP dispatch from Aix-En-Provence, reporting the conviction of famed French songsmith-entertainer Charles Trenet on a morals charge, coincides with the burgeoning popularity of his newest international standard, "I Wish You Love." Trenet's "At Last, At Last," "The Poet's Dream," "Holding Hands," "La Mer," are among the better known Franco-American pop hits. The one year's prison sentence was suspended but the $2,000 (10,000 francs) fine must be paid. Trenet was not in court. Several young men were involved in the morals case. Trenet has been cited before on similar charges. International entertainer has been seen in the class boites in New York and elsewhere in the U.S. and Canada.

Evelyn Lear is an American singer whose successes keep her so busy in Europe that she still has not appeared in the U.S.A. She now will sing Mimi in "Boheme" and the Countess in "Capriccio" (Strauss) at U.S.A.) has contracted her for a Queen of the Night in Mozart's "Magic Flute" with Karl Boehm conducting and the page Oscar in "Ballo" the Berlin Opera. The Deutsche Grammophon Gesellschaft" (Decca in (Verdi) with Jess Thomas and Fischer-Dieskau.

The Broadcast Music Inc. affiliated publishing company of E. B. Marks Music Corp. has been awarded a Citation of Achievement marking its 70th anniversary. The presentation was made by BMI president Robert J. Burton during the Jan. 22 dinner honoring writers and publishers of 1963's successful pop songs. Herbert E. Marks, president of the publishing company, accepted the citation. In addition to Burton, Sidney M. Kaye, BMI board chairman, and Robert B. Sour and Theodora Zavin, BMI veeps, participated in the presentation.

Taking care of the pop end out of N.Y. will be Ben Rosner, the manager of the pop division, and producers Hugo & Luigi, Andy Wiswell, and the recently appointed Jack Somer. Also out of the N.Y. office, Joe Linhart will take care of the Broadway musical area and pic soundtracks originating in N.Y. and overseas. On the creative service end, Joan Deary has taken over such administrative details as liner notes and other aspects of packaging.

Victor's Nashville operations will continue under the direction of Chet Atkins, while Coast activities will be helmed by Neely Plumb. Latest addition to the Coast operation was Darol Rice who will take care of the religioso stuff.

'A Great Thing's Been Lost to R&R—The American Pop Song': Jo Stafford

By BILL GREELEY

Vet singer Jo Stafford is not bitter about the dominance of rock'n' roll music—just sad.

"A great, great thing has been lost—the American popular song," says Miss Stafford, recently in New York on a promo swing for her tv specials made in England and now slated for coast-to-coast syndication play in the U.S. It's the "Great God Money" that rules the record industry today, she says, not quality. Where once a lyric ballad like "Heart In San Francisco" was the rule, it is now the exception.

Miss Stafford's view of the market for the three-chord, boomchuck stuff is at great variance with the big-beat radio station execs who issue promo surveys which count the Cadillac-driving families in their audience. She says in her band-vocal days (early '40's with T. Dorsey), the kids that gathered around the stand to listen instead of dance were genuine teenagers. She figures the bulk of the r&r audience is preteen—8 to 12 years. The affluent society, she contends, has supplied these little musical primitives with the cash to support the pop record.

If the singer's conclusions are based more on instinct than research, so is her knowledge of today's pop music. For example, she's never heard England's hot gift to the genre, The Beatles, but she's seen a picture of the foursome, and can tell how they sound, mainly via those no-forehead haircuts.

At the same time Miss Stafford admits something every once in awhile "comes out of the bush," like "that Charlie Brown number a few years ago" (probably the sepia Coasters, an exceptional group with some really funny and well presented material).

She was bemused recently on a broadcast panel show when an r&r a&r man told her in dead seriousness that they were bringing back some good old hits and standards like, "You Belong to Me." "I thought he was putting me on!" But the big-beat disk peddler really didn't know that the tune was one of Miss Stafford's biggest hits.

She's amused by an older and hipper a&r man's sharing with her the shock of rock. He told it to the singer this way: "Into my office walks the four Tire Slashers. They are 13 years old. They are followed by their lawyer. He's 16—and ready to sue you at the drop of a hat."

Meanwhile, besides shaping up the English variety shows for U.S. tv, Miss Stafford is cutting a lot of records—LP's that is.

vet, Gov. Clement told the TAB that they knew how to handle situations of this nature. "I know it (editorializing) will be handled as you have handled every other responsibility with which you have been entrusted and I have not the shadow of a doubt that your opinions will be clearly labeled and fairly stated," he added.

Clement also got in a few healthy jabs for the commercial brigade of the industry when he said, "I am opposed to the arbitrary limitation by a Washington bureau of your advertising, your news coverage, the amount of music you can carry, or any other manifestation of the free enterprise system, and I will continue to be opposed to it," which clicked with beaucoup of "Hail Frankie" from the TAB crew.

Gov. Clement, who was a hit on the national tv and radio webs when he delivered the keynote address at the Democratic National convention in Chicago in 1956, then called on his fellow-state broadcasters for help in the educational field. The chief executive has been one of the forerunners in advocating educational tv. In fact, he has launched an all out campaign with the state readying a state etv web of seven stations in the offing.

"I cannot let this opportunity, when I am talking to unquestioned leaders of the television and radio industry in my state," Clement continued, "to pass without calling on you to help educate the people of our state. I am the Governor of 4,000,000 persons, nearly all of whom will be directly affected by what you do in radio and television and especially in educational television," the affable Tenn. Gov. commented.

To say that his etv campaign has clicked with practically all state educational leaders from grade schools to colleges and universities would be putting it mildly. In fact, both sides of the political fences have hopped aboard Gov. Clement's etv "bandwagon" and are all singing the praises of Gov. Clement from every hillybilly sector to the Main stems. One TAB executive told VARIETY following Clement's address: "This is a great good will and public interest program that our Governor is undertaking, we members of the TAB are in his corner right across the board. And what's more if this proves to be a potential vote getter for Gov. Clement—he deserves it in my book," he added.

Clement wrapped up his etv program by appealing to the broadcasters and general public for an allout support for the educational television program of the state.

VAN JOHNSON
Songs
45 Mins.
Queen Elizabeth Hotel, Montreal

No need to start back-stepping into how long Van Johnson's been around; suffice to point out that his lengthy film career and reputation as a song-and-dancer was enough to crowd the ornate Salle Bonaventure.

Youthful-looking as ever and attired in a smart-looking dinner jacket and his-by-now trademarked red socks, Johnson obviously requires reviewing under New Acts since what he's delivering is a turn with which he had no identification in those clean-cut-American, perfect-husband-to-June Allyson type flicks he's turned out over the years.

His act, to sum up at the start, is a sock example of that good combination of top material, superb presentation, excellent staging, and almost limitless rehearsal.

If anything and—the fault is really minor—there's evidence of a performance that's a trifle too studied; unquestionably this "stagey" will be eased out as Johnson pursues this "'new" career,, which is bound to be received in smash fashion.

His impact can be traced mainly to the fact that, as a personality, he's accepted easily in terms of the average person from the hip Manhattan boites, to the cosmopolitan atmosphere of Montreal, to a grassroots cafe in an Indianapolis or Philadelphia.

Next comes his performance, which is polished to a gleaming art—whether it's some humorous comment about his career; kibitzing a ringsider; an aside to the band in the direction of Gil Stevens, his musical director and Jack del Rio, his own bongo player; a group of well-chosen songs which land with solid effect, whether ballad or bounce; and finally, a smash wind-up with the "76 Trombones" number from "Music Man," in which he played the London lead.

The latter item is both smart and skillfully handled, a further tribute to Lyn Duddy and Jerry Bresler who wrote and produced the turn.

"The Music Man" number is actually the climax to a clever act which builds from the start. Johnson is seen in the w.k. bandleader uniform, the band moves on to the stage, and follows him around the club and into fadeout to heavy mitting.

"I'm a Ham" is a nice opener, followed by such Duddy-Bresler special material—all excellent—as "You've Always Been My Favorite Actor" and "You Don't Have to Ask More Than Once."

After that there are mixtures of staple and new tunes, including "Just One of Those Things," "J'Attendrai," Object of My Affections," interspersed with some soft-shoeing and little bits of terping, all of which add up to a bright, light entertainment package which can't go wrong. Laza.

NEW WINE SINGERS
Folk Songs, Instrumentals
50 Mins.
Chateau, Cleveland

New Wine Singers have developed enough polish and individualistic folksinging routines to get along on the plush nitery circuit. Up to now the group confined itself to Chicago's "Old Town" folksy cafe belt, where it operated its own Rising Moon club until the room burned down.

Recording quintet, including four young Cleveland men and a girl, sings with two-fisted vitality and harmonic richness. Voices of William Malloy, Robert Connelly, Art Lanza, Malcolm Hale and Elaine McFarlane from Peoria, Ill., are blended attractively in an unusually wide variety of diversion.

Each member gets a chance to shine in solos, trios and novelties. When team transforms itself into a Dixieland jazz band for satirically flashy finale, Paul A. Fanning, their publicist, gets into act with banjo and guitar to make it a sextet.

Light and wry satire is nicely accented by versatile crew in special arrangements. Punchiest ones were arranged by Connelly, specialist in old historical songs of Ireland's revolutionists and of American imperialism, which he recorded in Folkways albums.

"Union Miners," a protest song of depression era; the lamenting "No More Cane" and "Dusty Road" are rarely done pieces done here with evangelistic fervor. Ensemble's opening "Golden Dream" is also a rouser.

Lanza, Hale and Elaine turn romantically melodic in shading such ballads as "Black Girl," "Wild Mountain Thyme" and "Goin' Home." Subtle in mockery is Connelly in briskly voicing "We're Surrounded by Communists and Dupes," ribbing the John Birch followers; "Bold Fenian Men" and "San Juan Hell."

Mallow, the leader, gets in some amusing licks in "Hell-Fire Stare of Bishop Sheen." Group's cockney traversty of "Don't Go Near Lion's Cage Tonight" goes over better than the macabre wit in "The Kitchen."

Miss McFarlane has a scrubbed look, braided hair and a powerfully clear voice that draws good play. She belts "Bill Bailey" when the crew switches to instrumental takeoffs of New Orleans bands. Connelly doubles on cornet, Hale on trombone, Lanza on piano and Malloy on drums in illustrating the New Wine Singers' versatility with tangy robustness. Pullen.

JOHN WINN
Songs
45 Mins.
Le Hibou, Ottawa

This tall, rawboned ex-farmboy from Hannibal, Mo. (Mark Twain's birthplace) was with the Belafonte Singers till three years ago and has sung grand opera professionally. He described himself to the audience as "not really a folksinger but a minstrel" and he probably is about as close to the old minstrels as can be found these days.

John Winn's long face belies his sense of humor—as when he intro's Purcell's 17th-century tavern song "Man Is For the Woman Made" with a grave remark about its "Freudian symbolism." Actually, as the audience learns, its lyrics consist entirely of the title, repeated, plus "and woman made for man." Singing "Where Are the Goats?" in Welsh ("which sounds like a cross between Yiddish and Italian") he deadpanned an invite to the audience to sing along with him. He also, while praising Peter, Paul & Mary as "commercial—but they're good," took a crack at "the trend for folk groups to get bigger, like the New Misty Chrinstels (sic!) — 27 people and dancing bears. What all that has to do with folk music I don't know."

Winn specializes in old English tunes, blended with a couple of charming music-set poems by W.B. Yeats and Padraic Colum—winding, when caught, with an effective Spanish "Elvita." Most of them he does in a high, sweet but unmistakably masculine voice, which can go low and strong when required. In Ewan McColl's lovely "First Time I Ever Saw Your Face," he hummed a segment in counterpoint to his guitar—which, in one song ordinarily a quartet, handled the other three voice parts. An accomplished instrumentalist, he inserted a delicate guitar solo between stanzas of one of the Irish poems.

Winn also has a couple of bawdy songs, notably "an Elizabethan opera, 'The Chastity Belt,'" full of thinly veiled symbolism and very funny; but he could smooth its performance to advantage. He's a natural for java joints and a bet for some intimeries. Gard.

LENY ESCUDERO
Songs
35 Mins.
Olympia, Paris

Leny Escudero is a small, intense young man with hair practically down to his eyebrows. He also has an intense, husky voice that gives depth and meaning to his songs about love, desire and dramatic incidents in the Paris streets.

He appears a combination of the more classic popular French singers and the newer ones who belt out satiric or plaintive, but always dramatic, songs on usually one subject that's identified with them.

Escudero has mike presence and emerges a new singing find if his repertoire can be enlarged in scope. His resemblance to other top singers will be a drawback till he comes up with a more personal turn. But he has the solid stuff of stardom and a distinctive set of pipes.

He should do something about his long hair. With production lighting, it looks like he is wearing a beaver hat. If his longhair-do is a trademark, it can still be brushed up to enhance his appearance. He is on Bel Air records. Mosk.

RAY ANTHONY & DOUBLE BOOKENDS
Music, Songs, Comedy
60 Mins.
Riviera Lounge, Las Vegas

Looks like the Riviera has come up with another winner — this time a listenable and lookable show starring trumpeter Ray Anthony and featuring four femme "Double Bookends" — Diane Varga, Cindy Malone, Diane Wisdom, Carol Connor. Anthony was highly successful several years ago with his "Bookend" gimmick, but then he had only two—Annita Ray and Diane Hall. With the new act, he even adds a fifth femme, pianist Kellie Greene. As a result, the Riviera lounge has been packed with male oglers, which of course is good for the casino.

Anthony tosses comedy lines, does splendid trumpet soloing ("Granada," "Exodus," "Peter Gunn") and joins the Bookends on such songs as "How About You?" "Sheboygan," and "Whole World In His Hands."

Each of the girls is spotlighted on solo vocals, and Miss Varga does a sexy flapper routine in addition to her pleasant pipe work. Miss Greene solos "Love For Sale" and "Yesterdays" on the 88 to fine effect.

Med Flory, tenor sax sideman who stands 6-5, has recently been appearing in prominent tv roles, and clicks here as vocalist as well as instrumentalist. Other members of the group contributing to the good blending sound are Jimmy Price, trombone; Lloyd Morales, drums; and Fred Land, bass.

Anthony is an excellent showman (he wears different attire at each show; at the preem he wore a wild gold jacket trimmed in black velvet) and with smooth savvy guides a most entertaining miniature musicale. Duke.

JUDY PRESTON
Songs
15 Mins.
International, N.Y.

Judy Preston is a newcomer to the local cafe scene. She seems to have larger cafes in mind with her repertory and projection. The voice has a pleasant texture and is handled well in all phases. Her arrangements show some originality. Rendition of "Gypsy in My Soul," for example, is loaded with magyar moments.

Miss Preston works nicely in the accepted manner. She dwells on standards which she tries to provide with a degree of freshness. However, she's in need of some tunes that would put her in a more vital groove. Jose.

CAROLYN DAYE
Songs
30 Mins.
Dino's Lodge, L.A.

Although Carolyn Daye has and Reno and has just returned from an Australian tour, her current engagement at Dino's Lodge marks her local supper club debut. The very pretty blonde, whose high hairdo, long earrings and excellent posture make her appear taller than she really is, should be able, with a bit more exposure, to become firmly established in the nitery niche.

Only hint of a youthful addiction to rock 'n' roll is in her earier way with a jump tune. Singer can also deliver a well-turned ballad—her "Charade" is high point of act—but she has a tendency to slow the tempo down too much on others, possibly subconscious compensation for her more natural swinging style.

Program at Monday's opener varied from "Give You Anything But Love" to "Stay With It." There's a vibrant, bluesy quality in her voice, a bit like Roberta Sherwood, that she should retain. It's her best sound and could be basis for an individual style (without which any singer is only marking time).

Pianist Jack Elton, always good, outshines himself with his accompaniment for the "Charade" offering (he comes closest to capturing arrangement Henry Mancini did for the film) and Jim Hughart (sitting in for regular Steve La Fever for the night) provided a bravura bass, Robe.

MARIKA ROEKK
Songs & Dances
35 Mins.
Haus Imperial, Frankfurt

Fiftysix-year-old Marika Roekk, with a figure, face and legs that many teenagers would envy, is making her comeback in show business. The Hungarian-born blond beauty was the star of German musicals decades ago, and is now appearing in her own versatile song and dance show, backed with two young male dancers.

While Miss Roekk could use a new writer for her jokes, she's a very savvy showwoman with a beautiful face, an excellent singing voice that packs the kind of wallop that could carry without a mike, plus an amusing dance reprise, including cha-cha, Twist, right back to the oldies like waltz and Charleston.

Repeat of evergreens from her top musicals, like "Night In May" and "Everything Goes Away in Life," from the UFA musicals, draws a big mitt here. Her opening "Temperament" shows that all the Hungarian fire has not been dampened by the years, and biggest applause-getter is the Charleston done to "Yes Sir, That's My Baby" with the boys appearing as gawky girl Charleston stompers.

Miss Roekk drew standup applause for her comeback, and since she's multilingual, act could also be a good go for American television as another glamor girl a la Dietrich. Haze.

COLETTE DEREAL
Songs
50 Mins.
Olympia, Paris

Colette Dereal is a sleek blond who was an actress before she built herself into a singing name via operettas and records. However, in-person she still seems to be acting rather than projecting a definite personality through her songs.

The needed personal style, or the showmanship to allow for a pot pourri of different type songs are just out of her reach. Voice is pleasant and sometimes can build to belting emotion. But her pipes fail to show a distinctive quality.

Miss Dereal appears to be an accomplished performer who could be an asset in a musical comedy, although she lacks the personal spark for lone recital stardom. She has the class for posh boite bookings. She is on Polydor disks. Mosk.

MIKE MINOR
Songs
25 Mins.
Rendezvous Room, L.A.

Mike Minor indicates considerable pro work by his easy, relaxed and assured stance on the floor, but he will have to work harder to overcome vocal tones that often are tight, closed, weak and dull.

Handsome youngster comes on strong with solid beguine beat arrangement on "You and the Night and the Music," but, in show caught, progressively lost effect in delivery that pointed up his limitations. He has all the basic equipment — soft, mellow voice, good looks, virility and suave charm—but he has to have training if he wants to be a singer. Tones are generally back voice, clouded and often tight and strained, particularly in upper range.

He destroys his virility by reaching in soft, whispery falsetto; has much more to offer but needs to learn support. Dale.

EDDIE ALBERT & CO. (4)
Songs, Comedy, Dance
70 Mins.
Cork Club, Houston

This is the shakedown cruise for film actor Eddie Albert's nitery act, and with a few adjustments certain to make during the next two weeks he should have something.

Albert has personality that projects, a pleasing set of pipes and can tell a good story. Other talents are lesser, but added to overall picture it may be concluded that Albert is a well-rounded entertainer.

Few may remember that in addition to his screen work (nearly 50 films) Albert has impressive Broadway and television credits, or that he began his career as a singer and has recorded a couple of albums.

Star of show is backed by four attractive girls, The Earl twins, dancers, and vocalists Marlene Aragon and Caryl Rowe, and all are pluses.

Girls come on to open act and, in sing-song, review Albert's film credits. Then headliner comes on and at once displays pleasant pipes in a ballad. Albert shows to best advantage in such as "Tea For Two"—a song and dance with straw hat, and backed by girls — and "September Song."

"John Henry" may have been a mistake and possibly may be one of numbers dropped — much of material was tryout stuff—for Albert's pipes just don't have timbre for this type tune.

He gets top mitting for clever takeoff on "If I Had a Hammer," doing daughter's "If I Had a Formal" and son's "If I Had a Hot Rod." Story of fence-straddling senator gets many laughs, as does his Salvation Army bit with Misses Aragon and Rowe. Another cure for itching palms is his "Sweet Violets" limerick.

Albert come out surprisingly well in dramatic recitation of a western tale, and he's good in "Trouble in River City" from "Music Man," a part he has played, and a Rumanian song. He does "Trouble in River City" as it would be done by German, Russian and Japanese, and it's generally clever, but could stand a short snip of shears. Also, it does not appear full advantage is taken of Albert's comedy talents, for he tells a good story.

In other words, when show leaves here it should be ready for just about anywhere.

Al Jahn does excellent job of conducting the Mel Arvin Orch (11), one of better show bands around. Sidney Miller produced and directed show, and special material was one by Miller and Sidney Kuller. Bobby Van conceived choreography, and Jerry Dolan contributed orchestrations. Personal manager Shep Fields, the former bandleader, helped put show together.

Glen McCarthy's Cork Club house line, the George Arnold Dancers, open show with fine seven-minute presentation. Girls' looks and costumes are topnotch. Skip.

CERVA SCENA (7)
Marionette & Live Impressions
10 Mins.
Olympia, Paris

The Czechs previously displayed their mastery in mixing live action and films in their Magic Lantern Show, which played the 1958 Brussels Fair Czech Exposition and commercially in various countries. They now have come up with a provocative blending of live and marionette routines that make for a firstrate house act.

Objects are worked on strings, and also manipulated by black-garbed figures. There's participation by costumed and masked people who play out two little sketches that are fetching and eye catching.

A laundress puts panties and two pairs of men's drawers on a line and leaves. They come alive and the drawers duel over the panties. When the girl returns there is a happy couple and little pairs of panties and drawers. Phosphorescent coatings give this a luminous air of detachment.

Later a group of masked figures cavort with an object resembling a giant gas mask. Adroit sound effects, and the dancing of masks alone, all add up to a comment on war as well as a solid skit.

Cerva Scena, a young group of four men and three girls, comprises a unique act that could make for fine cabaret display in the U.S. as well as for tv variety show use. It's of the most novel vaude turns to come along for sometime. Mosk.

N. Y. FAIR DEALS 1-CARD UNION

Wildwood, N. J., Drops Name Binge As Resort's Manor Books Minsky Unit

Wildwood, N.J., a resort which several years ago bid up the price of talent beyond Las Vegas heights, is settling down this year. One of its top spots, the Manor, has started the non-name trend by booking the Harold Minsky cafe unit, "Minsky Follies" current at the Westchester Town House, Yonkers, N.Y.

Layout goes in for a minimum of six weeks starting July 3, with options up to Labor Day. Oscar Garrigues, the Manor's operator, also has nabbed options on the Minsky unit for the next five years.

The flight from name bookings was virtually forced on Wildwood spots by the presence of the Latin Casino, Cherry Hill, N.J., about 80 miles away, and by Atlantic City's Steel Pier. Previous failures in the area made top name bookings risky. However, that wasn't regarded by operators, nor talent agencies, as any reason why Wildwood shouldn't make another try.

But Wildwood niteries couldn't counter the influence of the other two spots. The Latin Casino, according to the agencies, would never stand for any act for which they paid Las Vegas salaries, playing for a lower sum in the same south Jersey area. Also, the Steel Pier, which pays top salaries too and sometimes draws vacationers from Wildwood, has a clause in its contracts forbidding their acts to play up to 90 miles away for 30 days. This automatically cut off Wildwood from a supply of names.

Agencies recall that a few years back Wildwood was the wildest as far as salaries were concerned. Three major spots, the Manor, the Diamond Beach and Bolero, bid up pay of names to a point where even Las Vegas would consider them outrageous.

Fanned by agencies that submitted a single name from one spot to the other, salaries reached impossible heights. Frankie Laine, for example, was booked for $41,000 a week by the Diamond Beach. It's not known whether he ever collected all the money because the spot folded soon after his date.

The Minsky booking represents another departure. It's been doing well at the Westchester site and it's been getting a lot of family trade, which it wasn't originally figured to do. The 24-performer unit was also a business getter in New York's International Theatre Restaurant.

Ste. Agathe Becoming Laurentians' Show Biz Hub Thanks to 1 Man

Ste. Agathe, Que. Jan. 28.

If there is one man who will set a trend in creating an important market for live talent in the Laurentian resort area north of Montreal, it is Joseph B. Laing, who for years has run The Manor House in Ste. Agathe des Monts in Quebec.

Laing's interest and attempts to take advantage of the proximity to Montreal—an area where live nitery talent is used in abundance—has resulted in Ste. Agathe, 60 miles from the big city, becoming the show biz centre of the Laurentians, even in a minor league way compared to what has happened in the Catskills and New England in the last quarter-century.

Interesting to note, moreover, that Laing's showmanship—not helped too much, incidentally, by the neighboring resort ops whose attitude is still very much bush league—began years ago when a young Montreal comic named Jackie Kahane who, at the time, doubled as a drugstore clerk, got his first start at the Manor House. Kahane has made good progress and has gone places over the years with a bright new style of comedy.

For reasons of appreciation as well as nostalgia, Kahane re-

Polish Terp Troupe Hits Big 40G in 3 Can. Keys

Winnipeg, Jan. 28.

Mazowse, Polish State dance group, ended the western Canadian leg of their 36-city North American tour grossing $40,300 for the week ended Saturday (18).

The 51-dancer group pulled $18,000 in Edmonton for three dates, including one capacity house at the 2,750-seat Jubilee Auditorium. The Calgary booking Thursday (16) grossed capacity $7,200. Dancers ended the week in Winnipeg, grossing $15,100 and drawing 5,600 to the 8,200-seat Arena.

All five dates were booked by Celebrity Concerts, Winnipeg, as part of their concert series in the three cities.

ABC-TV 'H'wood Palace' On Int'l Hunt for Talent

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Plans are underway to book the ABC-TV "Hollywood Palace." International talent hunts are to be instituted by the show's producers for a series of newcomers to be balanced off with recognized names for the teleshow.

Layout has been renewed for another cycle and producers are planning its new-faces approach to insure the future of the variety show into next year.

Starting next month, auditions will be expanded in a try to find new and fresh acts. Executive producer Nick Vanoff will go to Europe at the end of February on a scouting mission. There will also be auditions every Wednesday in Hollywood.

Elliott Alexander, show's talent coordinator, will schedule auditions in various cities throughout the country. He's slated to go to Detroit, Chicago and Las Vegas to dig up acts for approval by William O. Harbach, the show's producer.

According to Vanoff, Harbach, together with GAC which also aids in producing the show, will match well-known acts with new turns which haven't played American tv previously. As a result, they will have to find a major reservoir of talent immediately. Vanoff also plans to go to the Orient to carry out this aim.

The first variety act audition is slated for New York Feb. 10 under Vanoff's supervision. Site hasn't yet been selected.

Wallendas (Sans Net) Score in Return to Det.

Detroit, Jan. 28.

The Great Wallendas returned to the Shrine Circus, Detroit, last week and did their high act without a net to hefty mitting from a capacity audience. Plenty of ink had been spilled by the dailies building up the no net issue and a few politicians had got into the act, threatening to pass a law requiring use of a net.

Whole issue was raised because two years ago two of the Wallendas troupe were killed in a 35-foot fall from the wire, while a third is paralyzed as a result of injuries received in fall.

SHERATON'S WAIKIKI PROJECT

Honolulu, Jan. 28.

Sheraton hotel chain may reactivate a $4,500,000 hotel project on a site near its Royal Hawaiian hotel.

Chain is reviewing the plan now that it lost the former Outrigger Canoe club site to rival hotelman Roy C. Kelley.

AGVA, EQUITY AGREE ON TEST

By JOE COHEN

The long-sought-after goal of a one-card performer union may be partially achieved, but for the New York World's Fair only. The American Guild of Variety Artists and Actors Equity Assn. may work out a deal in which membership in one of these unions would qualify entertainers for any personal appearance job (except longhair concerts) at the Flushing Meadows exhib.

The proposal comes as a result of the dispute between AGVA and Equity on the Fair's jurisdiction, which the Associated Actors & Artists of America, particularly the American Guild of Musical Artists, is meditating. A series of meetings already held has had the disputants agreeing to the one-card for the Fair proposal. The details are to be worked out at another meet slated for today (Wed.).

Whether the one-card setup at the Fair will carry over to all fields within the 4A setup and ultimately be a permanent situation may be determined by the manner in which it works at the Fair. The Fair will be a working laboratory for a one-card union.

The Fair proposal came after AGVA abrogated its agreement with Equity on the Fair and industrial shows. AGVA felt that it wasn't getting its fair share of the jurisdiction, especially since 4A arbiters had been consistently giving Equity shows that AGVA believed should rightfully belong to them. The split came after "To Broadway with Love," the production to be done at the Texas Pavilion, had been awarded to Equity.

Producers Also Protected

The producers of the Texas show, together with AGVA, also protested the award. To them it meant a $200 weekly minimum for chorus instead of a $110 AGVA minimum and the budget had to be upped considerably.

This protest also triggered another reaction at the 4A's. Because of the scale differences, it meant that there would be producer pressure to get into the AGVA wing. This, the 4A's believed, would create more chaos in a situation

$10 Payment By PP&M Gives Pitt A Taxing Affair

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.

Peter, Paul & Mary's payment of Pitt's new $10 occupation tax caused enough uproar last week that all entertainers and professional athletes playing the city may not have to pay the new levy.

Intended as a tax against "anyone earning a living in Pittsburgh," the tax officials of the city dutifully called on the trio at Syria Mosque and informed them that they were the first out of town act to pay the new tax. Ed Sarkesian, the promoter, okayed the payment.

News of the action hit the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette city desk and reporter Alvin Rosensweet picked it up and pointed out how everyone would have to pay including the entire cast of "Boys from Syracuse" to nitery and burley acts and on ad infinitum through Richard Tucker and the countless lecturers who visit the city.

As a result of Rosensweet's story, the city council took action on the payment of Peter, Paul & Mary and instructed City Solicitor David Craig to eliminate visiting performers and athletes from the levy as "it was never intended that transients should pay the fee."

Craig will report back to council today (tues.) with his recommendations.

Blue Angel, N.Y., Abandons Act Policy To Lure Drop-In Biz With New Plan

After 21 years the Blue Angel, N.Y., is readying to abandon its act policy in favor of one which would permit drop-in trade with a musicrew predominating. One act may be showcased at midnight.

Max Gordon, who has been operating the spot, is set to put the new policy into effect around April. The Angel will be redecorated and redesigned. The partition separating the bar from the main room will be removed so that the Angel will be one large setup which will enable customers to see the main attraction just by having a single drink at the bar.

The initial attraction under the new policy is likely to be Bobby Short, who has been a regular here with occasional forays elsewhere. Short's last N.Y. date was the Sheraton East Hotel.

The new Angel policy is figured to be a blow to all agencies. It removes a site where both names and new talent are able to determine their value to uptown audiences. It also eliminates a valuable showcase for acts whose managers see them as potentials for either other cafes or other fields.

To many managers and agents, this was an ideal showcase. Not only was the spot intimate enough to reveal every attribute of a performer, but it was a room in which the talent had the audience directly in front of them and not to the side or to the rear. An entertainer had a built-in advantage when working there.

For years, the Blue Angel was a prime talent showcase. Many acts got their uptown start there. Gordon, who also operates the Village Vanguard, was able to shuttle acts between both spots until they were ready for the big money—far beyond that which he was able to shell out.

In one measure, the fact that many of his acts made good in the big rooms was partially responsible for the inability of the Blue Angel to get names. Because of the room's small size, the Angel was regarded as a showcase good only

RA Sets Pre-Lenten 'Carnevale' in Leone's

Restaurant Associates, the eatery chain, is continuing its policy of offbeat theatrical bookings on special occasions. Mama Leone's, the long-established Italian eatery, is installing a pre-lenten "Carnevale" starting Feb. 6 and continuing until the beginning of Lent, Feb. 11.

Spot has booked a retinue of musicians, clowns and singers for the event. It's the fourth annual pre-Lenten fete at the eatery.

RA, which operates the Hawaiian Room in the Hotel Lexington, where a fullfledged floorshow prevails, also stages one-day weekly Spanish shows at its La Fonda del Sol, N.Y.

Milw. Cafe Drops Names; Aims For 'Truckdriver' Biz

Milwaukee, Jan. 28.

The Holiday House nitery, last of Milwaukee's clubs regularly to book name talent, has dumped its star policiy and will switch its theatre-dining room to a banjo parlor this week.

John Volpe Sr., majority stockholder in the 11-year-old club, said he was angling for the "truckdrivers and stenographers" and would forget about "the millionaires we never could get anyway." New policy at the Holiday House, he said, would be "no cover, no minimum and no stars."

"The stars ruined the nightclub business for themselves," asserted Volpe. "They priced themselves right off the market and bled the owners white."

Tightened tax policy on expense accounts was only a "contributing factor" in the club owners' woes, Volpe said.

The last name act booked at Volpe's club was Rusty Warren, who completed a two-week stand—her second for Volpe—last November. Volpe had only kind words for Miss Warren, however. "I'd say she's the only act worth big money."

New entertainment in the banjo parlor, Volpe pointed out, will include five banjo players, a honky-tonk pianist and a bass fiddler. Volpe plans a Roaring '20s atmosphere, gaslights, singalongs, and silent films when the banjo players break.

Asked how he booked the banjo players, Volpe said:

"Easy. I just put an ad in the paper.

Genders New Ringling Mgr; Bundy to Aid Prez

Harold D. Genders has been named general manager of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, in a series of realignments following the recent ousting of Pat Concello as the big top's g.m. Rudy Bundy has been named treasurer and assistant to the president John Ringling North, and Dean McMurray was appointed assistant manager.

On the production end, Pat Valdo continues as general director, and Robert Dover, who was performance director with the three-ring show which recently toured Europe, will be in a similar post with the domestic version. Antoinette Concello continues as director of aerial displays and Merle Evans will again helm the band. Mae Lyons stays on as director of advertising and publicity for the circus which opens at Madison Square Garden, N.Y., March 24. Bill Doll will handle the N.Y. press.

Chi's Celebrity Lounge A Cafe Phenom: Packs 'Em in With Big Bands

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Hottest joint on Rush St. is a month-old spot that tradesters dismissed as an anachronism when it opened. It's a room that showcases big bands. On Chi's busy night life artery, it's the only place at this moment that's consistently packing them in, and it has a virtual corner on the after-midnight biz.

The Celebrity Lounge in the Maryland Hotel opened around Christmastime with Ralph Marterie for three weeks and did very well. Now, with Si Zentner and his 16-piece "modern sound" orch, it's got a smash.

Whether this is a harbinger of the long-awaited return of the big bands can't, of course, be known until the policy is time-tested and until imitators succeed. But for now, let the record show that Zentner is doing ropes-up biz in a room seating 160 persons at $1.25 per drink with no minimum or cover. This despite plenty of regular nitery competition all along the street.

Zentner, speaking from the authority of one of the hottest cafe phenomena in years in Chi, says that he's enthusiastic about the success of the policy, but not surprised. "The reason they haven't been able to bring back big bands," he maintains, "is because they were trying to revive the old bands as they were."

A lot of musical ideas have gone under the baton since Kay Kyser held sway at the Blackhawk Restaurant, according to Zentner, many of which have not been in-

Playboy Clubs to Kick Off European Chain with $1,000,000 London Setup

London, Jan. 28.

Victor Lownes 3d, who came to London a month ago to set up a Playboy Club in the centre of town, hopes to find suitably imposing premises within the next month and to have the first club operational by the end of the year.

The venture, involving an investment of over $1,000,000, is to be the forerunner of a chain of European Playboys, with other sites being prospected in Paris, Rome and Amsterdam.

There is also a possibility that Playboy will spread its wings to the provinces, and Lownes is planning to visit Manchester with a view to eying the possibilities of opening there at a later date.

Lownes, who is v.p. and managing director of Playboy Enterprises in Europe, is aiming at a membership of around 10,000 for the London venture. He already has received 79 applications. He envisages an entrance fee of around $28-$30, with an annual subscription around $25—higher than the current U.S. rate.

The aim is to attract the well-heeled, higher strata of London's cafe society. Membership in the London club includes rights to use any of the American Playboys, and vice versa.

Present plans call for club premises which will include three rooms featuring cabaret, a vip high-priced dining room and a more general eating room, where steak lunches and dinners will be available for around $1. These are the familiar features, but one major innovation will be the inclusion of a casino—the first time Playboy Clubs have ventured into the gambling arena.

Cabaret will follow the format already established in America, and shows will run for three weeks, with maximum use to be made of circuit bookings. With the eight Stateside clubs, plus the upcoming one in the West End, Playboy will be able to offer a 27 weeks' tour to artists. And, additionally, it's now working out a deal with a steamship line for artists to work their passages across the Atlantic.

The London club will have an estimated staff of 155, of whom 73 will be Bunnies.

Aside from launching the clubs, Lownes is investigating the possibility of printing the Playboy mag in Europe, where circulation has already reached 120,000.

Industrial Show Review

Westinghouse Show

Chicago, Jan. 24.

"Around The World in 74 Degrees" with Barbara Quainey, Stewart Rose, Bill McDonald; produced for the Westinghouse Air Conditioning Division by Don Higgins; written and directed by Don Driver; technical and musical director, Norman Dorr; art director, Bob Ceasar; stage manager, Bill McDonald; set by David Guthrie; lighting consultant, Hy Hilzon; costume director, Hal George. Presented at the Sheraton-Chicago Hotel Jan. 24.

As scripted industrial shows go, this is not a big one, but it is an amazing demonstration of how much can be done in a moderately-budgeted show with a lot of ingenuity in scripting and production and an exceptionally hard-working trio of experienced young actors.

There were a few minor technical bugs in its Chi launching upon a 14-city tour, but in the main "74 Degrees" is firstrate Don Driver has whipped up a briskly-paced 105-minute tab show with an engagingly hokey story line, a libretto unabashedly loaded with puns, and a batch of clever song parodies. The book makes its commercial point without belaboring it, and mixes occasional hip lines with scattered smoking-car gags.

David Guthrie's set consists of moveable panels on industrial exhibit piping frames. There's a good deal more imagination than money involved in it, and its flexibility is just right for the presto tempo of the uninterrupted show. A rear-projection panel was not used as effectively as it might have been and appeared to be having sequence trouble with the taped music and sound effects.

Driver's script and direction asks and gets a lot from the three performers. Stewart Rose is onstage virtually all the time, and his cabaret and legituner experience provides much of the polish of the show. Barbara Quainey is a pixieishly pretty and charmingly proficient young thesp, and Bill McDonald is a reliable anchor man, mugger and second banana to Rose.

Pearl Williams Cancels Crescendo, L.A., Stand

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.

Pearl Williams, by mutual consent, has been cancelled out of March 4-29 stand at Crescendo by nitery's operator Shelly Davis. Performer, who had been booked at $2,500 weekly, reportedly asked for date to be changed to facilitate offer in the east. Davis said he could not switch, hence cancellation.

Village Stompers (eight instrumentalists) replace. Meanwhile, Crescendo, which played Wayne Newton in December for 10 days, has re-booked singer, May 27-June 14.

Unique Deal For 'Forum' Happens On Way to Coast

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

Sammy Lewis has set an unusual contract with Music Theatre International licensing firm on "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," under which Lewis' Music Packagers Inc. is guaranteed show will not play California until after it has closed a Las Vegas run.

Lewis' company secured rights on "Forum" for March 2 opening at Riviera in Las Vegas on an eight-week guarantee and open end contract. Deal for tab version stipulates show will not be sold for other tab versions or for California production or allowed here on tour until after the Riviera show closes, Lewis stressed.

Tab version of "Forum" will mark first time a Broadway show will have played Vegas while it is still running in New York. Lewis has set deal for his company to rehearse three weeks, beginning Feb. 10, on the Alvin Theatre stage where show is playing in New York, using original set and also under supervision of George Abbott.

Producer Hal Prince also will aid with tab version, Lewis said, although Ruth Mitchell, who directed London and road companies, is staging the show and George Martin choreographing. Hal Hastings will repeat as conductor for rehearsals and for Vegas opening.

Ben Lessy so far is only performer signed for Vegas edition, with Lewis discussing Zero Mostel role with Stubby Kaye. Producer is now auditioning for six Amazon dancing girls to fit one new number being set for Vegas, although 35 minutes have been cut from Broadway version. Tab show now will run an hour and 20 minutes.

BERNSTEIN EXITS GAC FOR NEW BOOKING CO.

Sid Bernstein has resigned from the one-nighter department of General Artists Corp. to become part of a new concert booking concern labeled Theatre Three Productions. Partners in the venture are Walter Hyman, normally chairman of the board of Maxwell Industries, which is diversifying into theatre, and Hank Barron, who previously promoted several concerts.

The combine already has set three Carnegie Hall concerts. The Beatles will go in under their auspices Feb. 12 for two shows. Shirley Bassey is pacted for Feb. 15 and Tony Bennett and Count Basie for Feb. 21.

Bernstein was an indie concert promoter before he joined GAC. He had been partnered in several major ventures including the Newport Jazz Festival a few years back.

Wolfberg Exits GAC

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Lee Wolfberg has resigned as head of General Artists Corp's Chicago office and will move to Los Angeles, where he'll become Vic Damone's personal manager.

Wolfberg started with GAC in New York in 1955. He was transferred to Chi in 1957 and named branch manager three years later.

Plush Preem Planned for Honolulu's New Aud Complex Stirs Civic Battle

By WALT CHRISTIE

Honolulu, Jan. 28.

Show biz pros suspect the elaborate premiere(s) planned for the city's multimillion dollar auditorium complex won't be any more entertaining than the current strategy battle that involves a substantial cast of characters.

Lined up on one side are Mayor Neal Blaisdell and a 40-member laymen's committee headed by Hugh O'Reilly, a retired Army master sergeant and now a bank aide. On the other, for varying reasons, are most members of the city council. Their individual views can't be ignored because the council collectively is being asked to ante up $380,350 to underwrite the auditorium's opening attractions. The original asking price was $150,000, but it now turns out that this would be only the down payment.

Byron Trimble, who was imported a few months ago to manage the complex for the city, figures that boxoffice and concession income should add up to $335,850. This means the "angel"—i.e., the city—would drop $44,500 on the project.

O'Reilly later said the overall cost "should not exceed $44,500 and in no event more than $150,000." But, he added, "several experts in the entertainment field" have assured him the city actually might make money.

Six special mass appeal shows are planned, with such names as Ed Sullivan and Lawrence Welk mentioned. Supporting events over the two to three week gala would include three sumo wrestling programs, two kabuki shows, two "sporting events" not otherwise identified, two operas, two symphony programs, two ballet performances, a locally-produced play, a fashion show, and even a film festival.

Councilman Ernest Heen noted at a council meet that the laymen's group has earmarked only $7,000 of the requested $380,350 for local entertainers.

"Our local talent has been treated in a cheap way for too long," he scolded. "Why don't we start treating our local people decently? They've been exploited long enough. It's about time we let them in on some of the gravy."

The council is balking at the mayor's idea of holding the opening in September. Masato Doi, council chairman, feels everybody's going to be engrossed in the election campaigns and the Isle shows might lose local impact and mainland publicity value.

No matter how the premiere problems are resolved, one thing now appears certain: the entire operation is going to be on a deficit financing basis until such time when a steady flow of conventions can keep the lights burning.

Trimble agrees long-run revenues will depend to a great extent on convention biz but bookings to date are sparse. It is, however, only coincidental that the Hawaii Visitors Bureau's convention coordinator has just resigned.

JUST BACK FROM HONG KONG . . .

ELLA FITZGERALD

Tireless, Vital And Sincere

By Mary Visick

WHEN she arrived in Hong Kong Ella Fitzgerald is reported as having said she was tired. She was apparently tireless again by last night. She is—and one takes a deep breath before seeming to praise her extravagantly — probably the most amazing artist ever seen in the Concert Hall.

The voice we thought we knew from her records is even more splendid than I, for one, had supposed it was going to be. She has a quality of sheer beauty which comes from a wonderful natural quality and a sense of timing and rhythm which is shaped by discipline and control; she has indescribable vitality which makes words like "discipline and control" misleading if they suggest rigour or tension.

Her vitality seems to come from within and to issue in gestures, as apparently natural and unconsidered as those of a child; her humour, never strident, is part of it, so is—to use an over-worked word — her sincerity.

She seems to sing for herself, almost unconscious of the audience but vividly conscious of the Roy Eldridge Quartet who play with her. The five of them are absolutely as one, and when Ella and Roy Eldridge out-trumpet each other—he with his trumpet and she with her voice—or when Tommy Flanagan's piano touches in the most delicate of accompaniments the unity of the group is quite perfect.

ROY Eldridge himself has been called greater than Armstrong; but why make such distinctions at this level? He is a great trumpeter, whether he is playing a quiet and relaxed accompaniment or flaring out with the sheer power for which he has so often been praised. The other members of the Quartet match up to him, and what more can be said than that?

Ella Fitzgerald's breath control is dazzling. She seems to be tireless, unstoppable. Her embroidery of "So High the Moon" or her driving, sardonic "Mack the Knife" gave her a chance to "do" Pearl Bailey, Sophie Tucker, and Louis Armstrong with tremendous zest but also with great restraint—there is nothing corney in her satire. As for the undeniably corny pop songs she sings, she manages to transform their banality: in particular "Can't Help Loving That Man" came over as if it were something quite new and strange.

We came away with the feeling that everyone is slightly less than life-size. This great personality filled the City Hall Concert Hall without the slightest sense of strain, and yet one felt she could sing in a tiny night-club and still seem at home.

HER greatness as an artist makes her completely free from the little gimmicks of show-business. She simply walks in an sings. As she begins to feel the hall and the audience she begins to move more flexibly and rapidly. She uses the hand-microphone as if it were alive and responsive. She gives the impression that she could go on all night; she moves from one song to the next before the audience have got their breath —but she has got hers.

Nothing can be said of Ella Fitzgerald that has not been said already. She blows convention sky-high, and sets in its place something that—to use another overworked word—can only be called genius. She is quoted as saying that when you reach the top, that is the time to quit. We can only hope that she does not think she has reached it.

Fitzgerald magic hypnotises a packed house

by GEORGE LIU

The Ella Fitzgerald magic entranced and electrified a packed house of Honk Kong's jazz addicts last night at the City Hall.

The acoustics were appalling, the lighting was indifferent; shuffling latecomers and photographers' lightbulbs combined to create distractions.

But Ella just stood there and sang—luring, tugging and stampeding the audience into a trance.

There were no flashy floor-show-type hor d'oeuvres, big bands, spectacular dances or pretty-costumed girls. A small, skilful four-man combo backing her. She dominated the stage as she twisted a pink handkerchief and cast her spell over a wildly appreciative audience.

She sang for almost two hours. Old standards such as "Misty," "Cheek To Cheek," "Ain't Misbehaving," "A Foggy Day" and newer favorites like "Fly Me To The Moon," "Desafinado Bossanova" and "Like Someone In Love" were each given the full Fitzgerald treatment.

Critics have long raved about the purity of Ella's wide ranging voice, her immaculate phrasing and diction, and her "ear" for music which is so exact that musicians have tuned their instruments by her singing.

But the most impressive fact brought home to me last night, was that Miss Fitzgerald is probably more musician than vocalist. She uses that glorious voice not so much to sing jazz—but as an instrument to "play" it.

Drawing on her early experience in the middle 1930's when, as the late Chick Webb's vocalist in New York she spent hundreds of hours listening to, memorizing and imitating every phrase and note played by the band's instrumentalists, Ella last night was in turn a trumpeter, saxophonist and clarinetist.

Perhaps the best example of this unique talent was yesterday's wild "scat" rendering of the oldie, "How High The Moon." Lyrics here were only incidental, and often discarded.

What emerged was a rhythmic gibberish that sounded uncannily like the notes produced by a skilled jazz saxophonist. The ending, in which she teamed up uninhibitedly with the trumpet of Roy Eldridge, was such a fast-moving, harmonic delight, it brought the house down.

She repeatedly generated this musical excitement with the same unique technique in "All Of Me," "I'm Beginning To See The Light" and her own swinging version of "Mack The Knife."

But Ella is happiest singing ballads. She gives these special and loving treatment. Standing very still before the microphone, with eyes closed and twisting handkerchief stilled, she sang her heart out in "Can't Help Loving That Man," "Dream A Little Dream Of Me," "Everything Belongs To You," "I Love Being Here With You" (a tribute to her friend Peggy Lee), and many others.

Visibly Touched

The Fitzgerald magic was so strong the audience refused to believe the evening had come to end when the curtain was rung. They would not rise from their seats in the deafening applause, and Ella—visibly touched—gave two encores ("It's Wonderful," "Lady Be Good") and took four curtain calls before it was finally and regretfully over.

By next week, Ella will probably remember Hong Kong only as a dim, vague memory of a three-night stop-over on her current tour. But it will be a long, long while before audiences of yesterday's and tonight's concerts forget the world's best jazz singer.

It has been a rare privilege, Miss Fitzgerald.

Sinatra Jr. Scores in Beatles' Lair, But Dorsey Orch's Less Successful

London, Jan. 20.

Kicking off a three-week trek around the British countryside, this Sam Donahue package show seems assured of capacity business, if opening night at the Astoria is anything to go by. They were turning 'em away at this Rank circuit 3,000-seater and ticket scalpers outside underlined the sales potential of the Dorsey Orchestra and/or Frank Sinatra Jr.

Young Sinatra, however, is the highlight of a mainly mediocre show. Not so much for his as yet undeveloped voice, but for the sheer professionalism of his onstage presentation. For he has an ease of movement and technique which would credit a pro with far more than his experience.

The Tommy Dorsey Orch conducted by Sam Donahue; Frank Sinatra Jr., Helen Forrest, the Pied Pipers, Charlie Shavers; Jeannie Thomas; Harold Davison presentation at Astoria, Finsbury Park, London; $2.45 top.

It is understandable that he leans heavily on his renowned father for phraseology, approach and even numbers. But nevertheless it is a practice which invites direct comparisons with The Guv'nor and by these comparisons the youngster comes off second—but a good one.

While he needs to build his own personality, to his credit Sinatra Jr. makes tremendous use of the talent he already has and plies an assured and showmanlike image across the footlights. Granting that his tonal quality will develop with the years, he shows here that he has what it takes.

The hard work involved in portraying the lyrical ease of a Sinatra paid dividends throughout his act which included such tunes as "The Second Time Around," "Too Close For Comfort," "Nancy With The Laughing Face," "I Feel So Young," "I'll Never Smile Again," "I'll Be Seeing You" and "Night And Day."

Other headliner on the bill is the Dorsey Orchestra under Sam Donahue. Blowing with gusto and in reasonable harmony, the band is a pale comparison to the Dorsey records (by which Britons know the original crew) and Donahue's journey down nostalgia lane with a bagful of oldies is unsensational.

Charlie Shaver's trumpet, though, provides a highspot. Less impressive are the square renderings of singer Helen Forrest in a town where Beatlemania is rampant. Ditto the Pied Pipers, a group whose style and close harmony fails to stand up to the excitement of the beat age.

Jeannie Thomas, with the Donahue outfit, is a pleasant young thrush with inoffensive pipes. What she needs, however, is to come down off the standards fence and ditch the "Ain't Misbehaving"-"Yes, Indeed" routine for something more daring. Watt.

Friars' Luncheon For Nat King Cole a Not Too Ribald Ribfest

The Friars have a long history of informal gatherings which have provided showcasings for new talent. During the past few years, this type of audition has been the toughest inasmuch as prepared routines rarely go over. The man at the mike must spiel on topics germane to the occasion, and in competition with some of the smartest comedy minds in New York.

Sometimes singers are exempt from the barbs and bites of the competition. But on Monday (27) with Nat King Cole as guest of honor at the Friars' "roasting" at the N.Y. Hilton Hotel, Cole took a fair share of four-letters in what was probably one of the more gentle ribfests in recent years. It was a session with its quota of questionable words, but somehow the barbs were without rancor.

George Jessel, who toastmastered, started off with a high-level crack tracing Negro singer's beginnings from a choirboy on the east side known as Nathan Cohen. Jessel, incidentally, stated that he had to plane out immediately afterward for a dinner in Glendale (Cal.) that evening and would speak at a birth the followig morning. "The same speech will be given in all three places."

Jessel reversed the normal order of speakers, since the heavyweights came at the beginning. Nipsey Russel, the star of more than one of these fourletter fests, described Cole as the man who brought jazz up the river from New Orleans. "He couldn't get on a bus," and explained that NAACP meant "never antagonize Adam Clayton Powell." "And as George Washington said to his son, Booker T.—" and went off a major hit.

Henny Youngman came through with some funny one-liners such as, in talking to Gov. Faubus about Cole, the governor "couldn't understand how an ex-slave became a millionaire." He pleaded with the assemblage which paid $15 per

Playboy Sues Houston Club for Name Piracy

Houston, Jan. 28.

The Playboy Club here was sued in Federal Court Friday (24) for damages in excess of $10,000 by Playboy Clubs Inc. and Playboy Magazine for allegedly using the copyrighted name of Playboy and its registered trademark of rabbit ears. Named defendants are Durwood B. Gill and J. B. Gill, operators of the club.

The plaintiffs ask that the Houston Playboy Club be enjoined from further use of the Playboy name, the rabbit ear trademark and the bunny girl costumes for its waitresses. The local club's use of the name, according to the complaint, trademarks prevented them (Playboy Inc.) from expanding into this territory.

Las Vegas, Jan. 28.

Adams Wants No Bars on Free Int'l Exchange of Acts

Tokyo, Jan. 28.

"As long as it is reciprocal, I'm for letting all foreign acts into the United States," said Joey Adams, prexy of the American Guild of Variety Artists. Although Adams noted that there is no clear-cut policy in the U.S. regarding the import of foreign talent—a vagueness which has sometimes led to confusion—he declared himself in favor of international exchange of talent.

"The law says imported talent must be different, something we don't have in America. The acts must reflect something of their country," Adams said. "But I'm for letting them all in. You can't draw a line. If you do, you're doing what censorship does. And as soon as you have censorship, you're dead.

"Great Japanese acts in the United States can help keep the clubs and theatres open," continued Adams. "The big resort areas like Las Vegas and Miami are competing with each other. If the tariff gets too tough they should bring something else in. We don't have good Japanese acts in the U.S.

"I'm in favor of open ports on all sides and as president of AGVA I will insist on Japanese and other foreign acts being able to go to the U.S. without special visas," he added. "The more we exchange, the better. That's more important than diplomacy, than the guys sitting down with their pens and briefcases. What transgresses all barriers better than entertainment? That's the whole story."

Adams is here with wife Cindy, a reporter for North American Newspaper Alliance, en route to Indonesia where Mrs. Adams will spend three months writing a biography of President Sukarno for Bobbs-Merrill.

Adams, who has been prez of AGVA since 1959, thinks much can be done to provide protection and improved conditions for American

AGVA Delays Hearing On Fast Till Feb. 15

Hearing on Ernie Fast's eligibility to serve on the national board of the American Guild of Variety Artists has been postponed by the union until Feb. 15 to give Fast time to gather additional material which he says he needs for his defense.

Former national board member Vincent Silk charged that Fast is ineligible to serve since he has not been a dues-paying member for at least five years. Silk asserted that although Fast had been with AGVA since 1940, most of the time he had been a paid employee.

Fast had been AGVA midwest director for years. After his dismissal from that post, he was elected to the national executive committee. In addition, he's one of the five members of the interim committee governing AGVA in place of a national administrative secretary.

Lola Flores' Flamenco Show Bows in Madrid

Madrid, Jan. 28.

Following a two-week stand in Barcelona and an equally successful appearance in Zaragossa, Lola Flores opened her Spanish variety show last week at the Teatro Calderon.

Assembling a talented group of flamenco and folklore artists the stage and music hall singer presented Carmen Morta and Joaquin Robles in a group of flamenco dances. Also programmed were dancer Juan Quintera, la de Antonio Nunez, song starlet Lydia Palma and the flamenco hoofers from the Parrilla de Jerez.

N.Y. Travel Agents Battle State Atty. Gen'l on Pitch for Licensing

N. Y. State regulation of travel agents is being opposed by the New York chapter of the American Society of Travel Agents (ASTA) and its New York City branch. Latter is headed by Phil Schweidel, one of the larger packagers of combination tours which include transportation, hotel, cafes and theatre tickets.

At the same time, the organization has put its imprimateur on a pending Federal bill which would set up a regulatory code, most of which would be self administered under Federal supervision.

N. Y. Statae Attorney General Louis Lefkowitz has already held a series of hearings in his New York City office and it's expected that a bill to establish licenses for the various offices will be introduced in the N. Y. Legislature. Schweidel, head of Sutherland Tours, declares that licensing would force most of the group business into agencies in other states. On the other hand, he says, Federal regulation couldn't "create runaway offices because there would be no place for them to run to."

Schweidel asserts that the Federall bill is less onerous than State regulation, although he declares that there now exists sufficent regulation to keep all travel agencies in line. He notes that the Air Traffic Commission regulates the agencies' domestic activity and the International Air Traffic Administration regulates them on international travel. In addition, he points out that the agencies are bonded by various organizations in which the carriers are members.

The N. Y. State quest for the regulation of agencies, according to Schweidel, was sparked by the chartering activities of a California concern, which recently left a group of travelers stranded at the Idlewild International Airport (now Kennedy Airport), N. Y. However, adds Schweidel, since chartering activity can be conducted by a member of any organized group, the State law as presently proposed would not end that evil.

In recent years, travel agencies have become an extremely important cog in the entertainment industry. The rise of package tours has put the travel agencies in an advantageous position. As one illustration, the International Theatre Restaurant, N. Y., would have closed during the past summer and reopened in the fall. However, travel agencies guaranteed it enough business to make it worthwhile to stay open. It was a mutually advantageous arrangement since the agencies need three large niteries to make up their cafe tours.

Hotels have also come to rely on the travel agents as an important adjunct, especially as far as group business is concerned. The agencies today, for example, are getting commitments from the hotels for accommodations during the World's Fair. Travel agents have also been instrumental in keeping marginal legit hits going for a while, according to Schweidel.

N. Y. Fair Deal

that was already fraught with danger.

Details of what will be worked out haven't yet been revealed. One of the major problems is an elevation in scale for the shows that would normally go to AGVA. Whether this means that the "To Broadway with Love" salaries would be lowered, cannot be said. Unless this is done, there is some feeling that the Texas show is being penalized for having started work earlier on their project.

The producers may have had a considerably lower salary lineup merely by waiting and stalling before revealing their setup. "To Broadway's" salaries could only be lowered if Equity agrees to decrease its current scale.

Also to be determined is whether the deal to be worked out today will apply to Industrial shows. AGVA has similarly beefed on the method of awarding shows in this field before it abrogated the agreement.

Although the shotgun wedding of both unions in this field was born amid bitterness and rancor on both sides, it is possible that it can prove a one-card union is feasible. On the surface, all 4A unions have been in favor of an amalgamation, but every attempt to make them get together has met with considerable difficulty.

The history of attempts to go one-card goes back as far as the late 1930s when the old American Federation of Actors was dissolved by the 4As and replaced with AGVA. Around 1940, the 4As retained a firm of accountants to survey the performing unions.

The survey's conclusions, known as the Reis Report, recommended immediate establishment of a one-card setup and cited vast savings in number of paid administrators, attorneys, office rentals as well as increased efficiency along with more opportunity for actor employment in all fields. The recommendations were never acted upon.

Pitch for a one-card union was revived when television first burst on the theatrical scene and resultant dislocation caused renewed pressure in that field. Again it was successfully bypassed. This time, it looks like the 4As will try the one-card scheme on a limited basis. Whether it will spread elsewhere remains to be seen.

THE GREAT NEW CLUB ACT FOR 1964!

EDDIE ALBERT

DRAWS RAVE NOTICES IN PREMIERE ENGAGEMENT AT HOUSTON'S CORK CLUB

HOUSTON CHRONICLE, FRIDAY, JANUARY 24, 1964

Night and Day

Eddie Albert Review a Smasher

BY CHARLIE EVANS

THE BEST nightclub entertainment to hit the local scene in quite a spell.

That's the sparkling Eddie Albert Revue that blasted in at the Cork Club Thursday night for what promises to be a two-week treat for Houston night-outers.

Eddie Albert and four members of the distaff side join forces to turn out one of the freshest, brightest and most entertaining shows it has been our pleasure to see in some time. They bounce through 55 minutes of song, dance and comedy, with each segment rating a highlight spot in the evening's fun.

With Eddie in his first engagement with the new show are twins Ruth and Jane Earl, dancing up a storm, and Caryl Rowe and Marlene Aragon, who toss in a bit of chirping that is razor sharp.

Producer-director Sidney Miller, tops in the business, showed in this production just why he has that reputation. The special material written by Miller and Sidney Kuller is fresh, entertaining and funny.

The material on Eddie's interpretation of an 11-year-old and 15-year-old "folk song" lyrics caught the fancy of the first night crowd and his impersonation of a senator explaining his stand on "whisky" is a riot.

In a fast-paced and smooth-running production, Albert teams with Miss Rowe and Miss Aragon for a roaring Salvation Army take-off, then eases into a smooth-as-cream soft shoe with the Earl twins.

A smash closer is Eddie's version of "Trouble in River City," from Music Man, one of the many stage productions Albert has starred in. After the American version, he takes a trip around the world doing the same number with German, Russian and Japanese dialect. A clever and entertaining hit.

Mel Arvin's fine orchestra does an outstanding job on some tricky special musical numbers under the direction of Al Jahns.

If you think we went overboard when we caught the Eddie Albert Revue opening night, you are right—headlong! Better see it.

Exclusive Management: WILLIAM MORRIS AGENCY, Inc.

EST. 1898

Flamingo, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Jan. 23.

Jack Carter, Julie London, Inga & Rolf, Russ Black Orch (16); produced by Mitch DeWood; presented by Morris Lansburgh; lighting, Hugo Granata; $5 minimum.

Morris Lansburgh has a strong double bill with Jack Carter's comedy and Julie London's songs.

Carter, who surprised the casino bosses by doing only 50 minutes at the first show, comes in with a generous supply of new material, and proves again that he's one of the finest cabaret entertainers ever to play Vegas.

His delivery comes with overwhelming speed, rewarding him with many more laughs than are received by the average comedian. All of Carter's word pictures are potent yock-pullers, his ad libs are sharp, his impreshes are precise, and his song-selling blends into an overall package of superb showmanship, which coincidentally is the title of his sterling salute to fellow performers.

Miss London (100% billed with Carter) has an impressive act slickly staged by Jonathan Lucas, with very effective musical arrangement by Don Bagley, who, on bass, teams with her in a memorable toss of "Bye Bye Blackbird."

The singer has a conversation piece entrance—she comes in above the audience on a tram while lying on a polar bear rug, singing "Fly Me To The Moon." Her husky voice, with the sexy whispering quality, splendidly warms such numbers as "Send For Me," "Time Is August," "Trolley Song," "Man That Got Away," and her familiar "Cry Me A River," latter getting top applause of the evening.

The Casuals, a quartet of male singers (Bob Anson, Cal Sexton, Don McLeod, Ron Parry) blend with Miss London on many tunes for excellent effect.

The handsome acro-terping team of Inga & Rolf initial the festivities, backed with aplomb by the Russ Black orch (16) and spotlighted by Hugo Granata.

Pearl Bailey and Harry Richman open Feb. 20. Duke.

The Losers, L.A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Gene McDaniels, Mike Melvoin Trio, Billy Riley duo; two-drink minimum.

Gene McDaniels fits into the jazz frame of the Losers and, from the boffo biz he attracted during weekend opening, looks like a winner for the next couple of weeks. Liberty Records pactee appears to direct his concentration more toward a musicianly interpretation, challenging style and unusual arrangements rather than pleasant sound, although he also gets that.

Singer, in set caught, wasn't quite with it; much of his delivery cold and automatic and lacking the vitality and punch that would make it outstanding. Musical taste shows on solid arrangements of "I Believe In You" and "Green Dolphin Street." But he hits most receptive note on the simpler "Workin' on the Chain Gang," just an ordinary rouser.

McDaniels works considerably on high tones, often sound slightly off key, his intonation hazardous in the forced falsetto scat areas. Only his innate musicianship saves him in such instances.

Backing and fine inter-show jazz is by the Mike Melvoin Trio, with Billy Riley duo continuing as Intermission music.

Anita O'Day next on Jan. 21. Dale.

VIP-Madison, N.Y.

Three Suns with Betty Brooks; Betty Green; $4-$5 minimum.

The Three Suns' return to the New York talent centres recalls a day when small groups were made via recordings and when music publishers were the backbone of a cafe opening. It was another era in the music business, and a period that perhaps produced some of the greatest pops extant.

Their opening at the VIP-Madison restaurant is also a return to a yesteryear apex. The room, in a building designed by architect Stanford White, was once the Colony Restaurant before it moved uptown. It has an interesting and baroque decor with reds predominating. The operators, James Glover, Ben Gould and Peter Karas, have seemingly been doing well as a straight eatery, but are apparently attempting to hypo supper trade with this group.

The Three Suns are led by their vet organist Artie Dunn, Joe Vento, accordion, and Jimmy Kay at the guitar have replaced Al & Morty Nevins, the original members. The music hasn't changed appreciably. They still probe for both the romantic and the rhythmic aspects of a tune and provide a complete entertainment unit within their membership.

All have the opportunity to show skill at their instruments. For an added measure, Betty Brooks (Mrs. Dunn) is the femme vocalist. She's a knowing and personable singer who throws lines into the audience at times.

The group hasn't been in New York for some time but some of their disks have provided them with calling cards for years. The Three Suns are tops musically and their work carries applause winning merit.

Completing the bill is cocktail singer—pianist Betty Green who provides a lively note between shows. José.

Holiday House, Pitt

Pittsburgh, Jan. 24.

Vaughn Monroe, Lee Caron, Carter & Lynn, Ralph DiStefano Orch (8), Al Morell's Organ Trio; $1.50 cover.

There's an air of adult enthusiasm at John Bertera's plushery this week as Vaughn Monroe has brought out the middle-aged citizenry for a boff turn of exciting singing. In his 45-minute stint, the handsome baritone is a winner all the way but is most effective when he sings a medley of his disclicks.

Applause cascaded for such standards as "Tangerine," "Mr. Sandman," "There I've Said It Again," "Ghost Riders in the Sky," "Moon Over Miami," "Dance, Ballerina, Dance," then Monroe's clincher, "Racing With the Moon."

Lee Caron, an engaging comic who has been very successful in this area, sets up Monroe beautifully with a versatile display of well told tales and solid comedy bits. Caron is a new face and should be a natural for tv exposure or a musical comedy. At one point, he revives the ancient Stroviollo, the violin with a horn attachment, and gets big yocks with it.

Carter & Lynn, a terp duo seen often here, again display an excellent ballroom turn climazed by a well executed tango.

Ralph DiStefano's Orch (8) excellently cuts the show. Monroe had no accompanist, but sounded like he was being backed by the big 18-piece band he used to bring to town in concert. The DiStefano crew does a slick job for dancing along with Al Morell's Organ trio which plays the lulls. Lit.

Melody Room, L. A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 23.

Rene Paulo Quartet; two-drink minimum.

Fanciers of ornately dramatized top music, of rhapsodic arrangements that build to great crashing climaxes and emphasize ostentatious demonstrations of technique have a treat in store at the Melody Room, where the Rene Paula Quartet is current. Anchored for a minimum of four weeks, the Hi-Fi wax foursome should be a good draw at this racy room on the Sunset Strip.

Versatility appears to be a hallmark of the group, with leader Paulo reinforcing his 88 stylings with an occasional dabble on the clavietta or some southpaw slapping on the vibes and Hirt-sized bassist Edd Shonk trying out tram or vibes for size when the occasion demands or seems to. Fine rhythmic backstopping is supplied by guitarist Tomo Fukui and drummer Bruce Hamada in addition to Shonk.

But it's Paulo himself who takes charge with flowery keyboard treatments of such showy refrains as "Slaughter On Tenth Avenue," "A Taste Of Honey," "More," "Fire Dance" and "Hava Nagilah." Highlight of the set is his unorthodox arrangement of "Mack The Knife," which starts off in a classical vein and progresses into various musical grooves such as boogie, cha cha and twist.

It would be wise for Paulo to cut some of the between-numbers patter, particularly his comments of an editorial nature, which are unnecessary and only serve to mar his artistic image. It is not, for example, essential that he refer to "Mondo Cane" as a "gruesome" picture in order to introduce his version of its musical theme. Tube.

Basin St. East, N. Y.

Miriam Makeba, Bill Cosby, Stan Getz Quartet; $3.50 cover.

The natural habitat of the three acts on the current Basin Street East bill is downtown, and they make the move to this uptown, east side nitery with mixed results.

African singer Miriam Makeba gets a good response to her ethnic book and fiery vocal style, but doesn't strike the rapport with the businessmen that, she does with the younger folk at, say, the Village Gate (in Greenwich Village), where she is absolute monarch.

One tends to blame this on the Basin Street mob instead of the talent, because Miss Makeba's catalog, though folk, has passages of real sophistication both rhythmically and lyrically. Maybe she should throw in "Over the Rainbow." Aud did pick up especially on her "Forbidden Games" ballad.

If Miss Makeba has her small problems, jazz sax man Stan Getz is in real trouble. On opening night, the set caught was strictly background music to the audience chatter. Getz finally honked a couple of big notes (it sounded as though a diesel train were about to bust through the wall) to snap the crowd around. Too late.

Negro comedian Bill Cosby adapts better than the others. He lays off his hipper stuff, tosses in a string of his tv commercial parodies and emphasizes his talents for vocal mimickry. They dug it, and sat still for his w. k. "Noah's Ark" bit. Bill.

Basin Street West, L.A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Woody Herman's Swinging Herd (16); $2 admission, two-drink minimum.

Woody Herman's Swinging Herd (16) thundered into BSW on a rainy opening night last Monday (20). When Herman warbled "Stars Fell On Alabama" as a tribute to the late Jack Teagarden lotsa folks cried in the SRO house including June Christy.

This band dishes out sounds of Herman's herd of the late '40s, but they're embellished, updated and improved upon. "Caldonia," for example, is now incredibly fast—perhaps three times the original tempo—and a greater treat than ever.

Trombonists Bill Holman and Phil Wilson go wild during "Lonesome Old Town;" Wilson has a special "squeak" which comes out trumpet-style but executed without self-consciousness; Holman is terse, vivid and wide-open in his outpourings.

Sal Nistico and Carmen Leggio carry the sax section, while Bill Chase and Billy Hunt helm trumpets, with splendid assistance from Paul Fontaine. Drummer Jake Hanna, bassist Chuck Andrus and 88er Nat Pierce comprise powerhouse rhythm section.

Herd, together almost in entirety for two and a half years, is booked into 1965—and no wonder. It's a gigantic and great sound. Herman & Co. are in till Feb. 2. Joex.

Liborio, N.Y.

Marcelo & Spanish Ballet (8) with Manolo Leiva, Virgilio Blanco; Candido, Herman LeBatard & Pancho Cardenas Orchs; $5 minimum.

Some of the more interesting Latino acts are going into comparatively recently established niteries. The expansion of entertainment circuits catering to the Castilian elements appears to be more rapid in New York than elsewhere. These niteries have been enticing a much wider field of talent, especially on a qualitative basis.

The Marcelo Ballet, which had its first New York presentation at the Chateau Madrid, has increased its artistic standing considerably since its last local exposure. This imaginative dance troupe is excellent flamenco dancers. They're skilled and disciplined. The choreography is of the soaring variety, but held within bounds by tradition.

Marcelo has welded the troupe into a highly entertaining unit as well. Their depiction of the zapateado is one of the best about. This stirring footstomper utilizes most of the company and sets up the troupe as one of the more colorful outfits around. He follows this dance with a solo version, and again the premier danseur provides another dimension of excitement to the zapateado.

The troupe also has an excellent version of the jota. The costuming is rustic and the terps seem uninhibited. It's another colorful addition. The rest of the time is occupied with the stirring flamenco dances that call for startling displays of vigor and improvisation. The entire company is onstage. They contribute rhythmic handclapping and vocal asides that get response from the Latins in the pews.

Manolo Leiva is the solo singer. His wild tenor covers a multitude of notes carrying the half-tone runs of flamencoist. Virgilio Blanco is their musical director. The show opens with the house regular Candido, one of the better bongoists about. The house bands, Hermah LeBatard and Pancho Cardenas, do showbacking and the dance work. Jose.

Haus Imperial, Frankfurt

Marika Roekk, Artur Malus Orch (6), Line (7), Horst Winter; $2.50 admission.

Frankfurt nightlife usually leaves much to be desired, but about a year ago H. Buchmann decided to give the shoddy Mosel Street nightclub area a new look, and the chic, sleek Haus Imperial is the result.

House, which holds only about 200 in a dimly-lit, cozy and costly atmosphere, has been attracting the smart crowd via its policy of booking big names—starting with Josephine Baker, and now with former music comedy star Marika Roekk making her comeback.

Prices at the club are, by German standards, sky high—$2.50 for admission, plus $3 for a Scotch, and $20 for a bottle of German champagne. But the payoff is a standout show.

Opening night of the new program was taken over in a promotion with Columbia-Bavaria Films for a new picture made by Columbia in Germany and titled (in a good tiein with this club) "Full Heart and Empty Pockets." The German-Italian-French coproduction stars Thomas Fritsch and Senta Berger.

Bill's headliner, Hungarian-born Marika Roekk, once was a top musicomedy star of German films, and now at a lively 56, she's hitting the comeback trail (see New Acts).

Tenor Horst Winter, who also plays the clarinet, has a couple of good numbers. The seven house dancers, billed as the Champs Elysee Dancers, are attractive and well garmented. Artur Malus' smooth orch is a plus for the dancers.

Club has been paying big names upwards of $1,000 a night, and the sexy show girls allegedly get the best pay in town, around $500 a month. Result is that Frankfurt finally has a plush nitery instead of only the cheap, touristy joints. Haze.

Shelly's Manne Hole, L. A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 22.

Art Farmer Quartet; no cover, no minimum.

Art Farmer on flugelhorn (he recently switched from trumpet) opens with a quartet too mixed in quality to label. Farmer himself is limited in both range and ease of flow with the heavy horn, though he partially overcomes it in his avoidance of the harsh, piercing tones of the standard trumpet. For the most part, however, flugelhorn is a gimmick, serving no more purpose than Dizzy Gillespie's skybender—a conversation piece.

Guitar man Jim Hall, who is featured, is brilliant throughout. In "Stompin' At The Savoy," there's a two-minute passage during which he takes off in tempo (medium-fast) with no accompaniment at all, probably the most difficult things a guitarist can do.

Bassist Steve Swallow is uninspired, even unclear in opening number "Why Do I Love You" but recovers nicely during "Stompin'," the closer. The gaunt Swallow has a unique stroking technique—his index and middle fingers are together, almost crossed, thus giving him power he would otherwise lack. As set progresses, Swallow gains in impact.

Drummer Walter Perkins is okay with sticks but group-sound would improve if he used brushes during slower middle number, "What's New?"

Set caught went a stingy 33 minutes. Joex.

Sands, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Jan. 22.

Dean Martin & Friend, Francis Brunn, Harry Nofal, Copa Girls (12), Antonio Morelli Orch (24); produced & staged by Jack Entratter; choreography, Renne Stuart; stage direction, Harold Dobrow; $5 minimum.

The marquee reads "Dean Martin and Friend," and of course the "Friend" is Frank Sinatra, who is skedded to be in the act through Saturday (25).

With this bill, impresario Jack Entratter is doing the best biz in town. And oddly enough, guestar Sinatra, who any other hotel in town would gladly pay $50,000 a week, is working for free—as a favor to pals Entratter and Martin.

Martin opens the bash with his "Pennies (Bourbon) From Heaven" parody, and in his casual comedy manner glides through "June In January," "Slow Boat To China," "Volare," and "An Evening in Rome" before his Friend joins the party.

Friend Frank kids his recent dabble into fisticuffs ("I was a hit at Pebble Beach') and in excellent voice tosses "I Only Have Eyes For You," "Tears Out To Dry," "Talk To Me Baby," and "Luck Be A Lady." He gets laughs with his one-liners ("I read the cigaret report and got so nervous I started smoking." "How Can Liz Taylor divorce Eddie Fisher when she hardly knows him?") and brings Martin back onstage—with a rolling, well stocked bar—for a solid songalog plugging their upcoming "Guys and Dolls" Reprise Records album.

Ken Lane is at the piano for Martin; Bill Miller is 88er for Sinatra, with the Antonio Morelli orch (24) backing.

The seemingly impossible juggling feats of Francis Brunn ("The Jose Greco of the Jugglers") balance the bill. Curtain-raiser is holdover Renne Stuart production number with the comely Copa Girls (12) and the big voice of handsome Harry Nofal.

Martin's stand is for three weeks. Duke.

Harold's, Reno

Reno, Jan. 22.

Wiere Bros. (3) with Mildred Seymour, Jo Ann Hill, Don Conn Orch (8); no cover, no minimum.

The Wiere Bros., annual returnees at this intimery, essay much new material in this playback but retain that Continental style and their trademarked fun routines with the fiddles and the bowlers. Nicely balancing the freres' nonsensical offerings is songstress Jo Ann Hill, a blonde looker making her debut here.

The Wieres, normally black-suited, make their intro sans coats, with white shirts unbuttoned (a la Belafonte), with an incongruous (to their established image) hootenanny set built around three special-lyric versions of "Careless Love," with the last new interpretations accented to their frequent outings at Harolds.

New routine has the three giving their version of the reason they were asked to leave the fiddle section of the Vienna Philharmonic. Music is Beethoven's "Fifth Symphony," and the trio makes the most of it, both instrumentally and visually.

Included, naturally, are the bits where the brothers balance bowlers in tempo to music, flip the hats from one head to another, and generally get the derbies mixed as to proper ownership. Also new is a "Lawrence of Arabia' spoof.

Mildred Seymour, at the piano for the Wiere Bros. turn, shows her solo talent on Grieg's "Piano Concerto," and proves an amiable foil as the boys assay her charms in the exit routine.

Miss Hill, smartly gowned and simply (but attractively) coiffed, shows much poise and vocal knowhow despite her youth. Some first-night tenseness was evident but was quickly overshadowed by personable communication and the brief chatter bridging the titles.

Her striking good looks add to the stage charm. Opener is "You're Nobody Till Somebody Loves You," followed by "Best Is Yet To Come," a torchy "He Needs Me," and "She Loves Me," with he substituted for she. Miss Hill also includes a fresh interpretation of "Frankie and Johnny" in her catalog.

Show change set for Feb. 18. Long.

Desert Inn, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Jan. 21.

McGuire Sisters (3) Elkins Sisters (3), Arden Dancers (30), Carlton Hayes Orch (24); produced by Frank Sennes; presented by Wilbur Clark; $5 minimum.

The McGuire Sisters are in the new Crystal Room at Wilbur Clark's Desert Inn, and have revamped their act with much new, clever material. While the attractive trio wears dazzling red gowns with long gloves to match, the McGuire sound is lent to such evergreens as "Oh, How I Miss You Tonight," "All The Things You Are," "Daddy," and "May You Always."

Backed by eight fiddlers from the fine Carlton Hayes orch (24), they revive their memorable "I Love The Violin" number. With a new approach, they present their delightful "Sisters" bit, and at one point, embellished by good terping, Chris does an impresh of Sammy Davis Jr., Dottie tosses in Tony Bennett, and Phyllis is Dean Martin.

During "Baby Won't You Please Come Home?" Phyllis gets a laugh with Dick Shawn's famed line, "That's not him!" and solo on "My Ideal" she accurately carbons Judy Garland, Rosemary Clooney, Eartha Kitt, Louis Armstrong, and Ethel Merman. Murray Kane wrote and staged the turn, and Tony Riposo handles the batoning.

The Elkins Sisters (3) are held over with their fast tumbling-balancing routine; also overlapping is the plush Donn Arden production number, "Almost Paradise."

Jimmy Durante returns on Feb 18. Duke.

Franz Josef, Toronto

Toronto, Jan. 20.

Phyllis Arick; Aldo Montecone Quartet; $2 cover.

A Juilliard grad in operatic singing, Phyllis Arick three years ago added a nitery act to her accomplishments because she likes travel and the moola.

Her first visit to Toronto finds her at the posh Franz Josef Room of the Walker Hotel, where she was on 35 minutes when caught on the first of her twice-nightly appearances. The staid room has a 220-capacity, which was nearly filled on opening night last Monday (6).

Clad in a black silk sheath with lace skirt, the redheaded songstress opens with a bouncy "Young Lovers," segues into a torch of "As Long As He Needs Me," does a Lerner-Loewe medley of love songs, follows with a group of sexy Roman songs (in Italian) and begins off with a slow tempo "Little Star."

Miss Arick, showing an affinity for classical singing, can hit those lingering hi-notes, has excellent diction and bell-like tones. She just returned from a five-months' tour of African night spots, plus side jaunts to the Dorchester and Savoy in London, where she also appeared on BBC-TV. McStay.

Crescendo, L.A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 24.

Mills Bros., Bobby Vinton, Don Sherman; $2.50 cover, two-drink minimum.

In his booking of the Mills Bros. and Bobby Vinton, Shelly Davis has a surprisingly compatible blend of the old and the new, the traditional and the contemporary. Also on the bill, which runs through Feb. 2, is comedian Don Sherman. It's not an altogether satisfactory show, but there's something in it for just about any saloonatic, and the Crescendo figures to do fairly profitable business with this talent plate.

That sweet, mellow and unmistakable harmony of the Brothers Mills has remained intact over the years. This is an ideal act for people who love to keep reliving the time of their prime vicariously through the sounds and songs associated with their best years. There will, of course, be those who would prefer not to go trudging down memory lane for an anachronistic 40 minutes.

The lyrics of "Opus One," for example, are about as up-to-date as the zoot suit. Some other refrains revived by the smooth-working, low-pressure unit, who sing only tunes with which they are associated, are "Till Then," "Paper Doll," "Yellow Bird" and "Lazy River."

Vinton is a hard-working, energetic young showman who manages to endear himself to his audience almost by sheer manual labor.

But he belts to beat the band and, in the course of his act, also finds time to tap out several dance steps and get in some hot licks on clarinet, sax and trumpet. His material includes a medley of his wax clicks, a game go at "Trouble" from "Music Man" and a haphazard Jolson medley.

Don Sherman gives impression of being a provocative, topical comedian but actually he stays within pretty safe territory and tries hard not to offend. If his material isn't especially cutting, jarring or daring, it is at least amiably uncomplicated and goes over well with the customer who likes to hear funny comments about modern topics so long as they don't hurt or make him think too deeply.

The Bob Armstrong orch (8) backstops commendably. Tube.

Square East, N. Y.

"Open Season At Second City" with Severn Darden, Bob Dishy, Barbara Harris, Ben Keller, Dick Schall, Avery Schreiber; directed by Paul Sills and Arnold Weinstein; music composed and played by Tom O'Horgan; designed by Ralph Alswang; $3 admission.

Three years and five previous editions have not taken out any of the sting or humorous bite that have trademarked the "Second City's" activities. Once again they have put together a happy potpourri of sketches, blackouts, improvisations and just plain nonsense to make the stay in this Greenwich Village barn quite enjoyable.

The madcap group (five boys and a girl) are loaded with talent and are often much better than the material. But they manage to pull through the lulls and hit high funny points in the two-act session more often than not.

The biggest charge throughout comes from Barbara Harris, an authentic comedienne with a style for whacky antics that leaves an indelible mark.

The boys in the company are no slouches, either. Severn Darden, Bob Dishy, Ben Keller, Dick Schall and Avery Schreiber are frantic and funny and help put the targets in proper perspective. Among the targets shot during the course of the evening are American influence in South Vietnam, the Japanese Kabuki theatre, academic life, voting machines, truck drivers, the South and modern opera.

It's a wide-ranged affair with most of the components falling into place with a humorous bounce. The program note says "Everything is subject to change ... with or without notice" so the company has a free hand to edit some of the sketches and sharpen others to keep everything running at a neat clip and without a letup.

But, even as is, it's a nifty little cafe revue with compliments due all hands including Tom O'Horgan, who composed the background music and plays it on assorted instruments, and Paul Sills and Arnold Weinstein, who directed. Gros.

Slate Bros., L. A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 23.

Damita Jo, Timmie Rogers; $1.50 cover plus two-drink minimum.

"Oh, Yeah!" the line belongs to Timmie Rogers, who supports Damita Jo in the swingin'est, fastest paced, most exciting stint seen here in some time. It fits the whole show.

Damita Jo herself is the epitome of what a nightclub performer really should be. Singer wails and swings with a frenetic jazz belt that has her sounding something like a rhythmic Dinah Washington at times, then whips into a gyrating sound and delivery as strong as a big band jam session.

Everything is solid, from a gutsy "Heart in San Francisco" to wildly scatty "Love is Here to Stay" or a personalized ballad style on "If You Are But a Dream" that shows amazing vocal control and musicianship. Singer has facile, flexible voice and a punchy delivery that just won't stop. And there's a lot of help from Charles Dungey, bass; Kirk Lightsey, piano, and Jim Duncan, drums, who back with strength and style.

Rogers, who bills himself "Mr. Oh Yeah!," ranges from clever monologs on racial situation and politics to special material songs and instrumentals on a electric uke. He's funny in comedy and capable in other departments, a solid talent who works hard and well.

Show is in three weeks, should be a winner. Dale.

Palmer House, Chi.

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Louis Prima, Gia Maione, Sam Butera & the Witnesses, Four Kovacs, Ben Arden Orch; $2.50-$3 cover.

The spacious Empire Room just can't seem to find a losing combination these days. After a string of winning shows all through last year (many of them unexpected smashes), this poshery now has one that promises to top even the most sucessful of the presentations in the previous twelvemonth.

Based on Louis Prima's opening night shows, the room is going to be jumping during his 11-day stay. Both preem night performances were packed and ended with standing ovations.

Jumping is the word for the frenetic 75-minute act that Prima, Sam Butera and their entourage put forth. Certainly a lot of the fun in this outing is the built-in humor in the contrast between Prima's high calibre lowbrow act in this somewhat staid supper club setting. It's a rowdy, raucous turn that slows for a breather occasionally to parlay some first class musicianship by the combo and by its individual members.

Aside from being an associate clown to Prima, Butera's solo work on "Thinking Man's Sax" is just that—thoughtful, and a little playful. Butera may honk his horn like a party toy during the general glee, but when he blows for serious it makes sax sense.

Tall trombonist Lou Sarno also is great in the gang buffoonery, but his solos know where they're going every minute. Drummer Jimmy Vincent is a topnotch drummer in ensemble, but unlike the others his turn as a single is more of a comedy drum routine and a display of sheer speed and power on the skins.

Thrush Gia Maione wisely stays out of the tumult until it's her time to sing. She has a pleasant voice and works well with the band in such numbers as "Unforgettable" and "Funny Valentine". She's at her best in a couple of swinging duets with Prima—"Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen" and "Best Is Yet To Come."

Opening the show are the Four Kovacs, an acro-trampoline team composed of three femmes and a male. Their fast-paced turn combines standard trampoline somersaults and twists combined with stunts off of stacked tables. It's a polished turn of its sort and sets the stage well for what's to come. Mor.

Rendezvous Room, L. A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 23.

Monika Henreid, Mike Minor, Jimmy Sheldon Trio; no cover—no minimum.

Monika Henreid brings a bright smile, big beautiful eyes, an effervescent personality and a free spirit feeling to her six-song selection in a repeat engagement here. But the singer, who actually is an actress, just doesn't have sufficient vocal equipment to concentrate her work in this field.

Miss Henreid gets by with audiences through selection of material, the tunes light and breezy as in "Cock-Eyed Optimist" and "I Feel Merely Marvelous" or in the always amusing "Good Little Girls Go to Heaven."

But she has a weak, tiny voice that's tight and sometimes raspy and lacks sustaining power. Apparent nerves at Tuesday (21) opening possibly accounted for some non-support, but if she wants to sing Miss Henreid will have to work hard for rounder, bigger tones and richer vowels.

Holdover Mike Minor has improved remarkably in a week of work. There's more virility in his delivery and strength and authority in his vocal tone. "Lulu's Back in Town," for instance, swings with ease and a nice flavor, while he has smooth, mellow sound on "This Is All I Ask" and a nice feeling for "Woman Goes From Man to Man."

Jimmy Sheldon Trio continues to back ably. Dale.

Blackstone Hotel, Chi

Chicago, Jan. 20.

Caroline Richter, Frank York Orch; $1.50-$2 cover.

Caroline Richter is a diligent comedienne who has become a favorite at the swank Cafe Bonaparte and will no doubt be around for many repeat bookings. The statuesque Texas blond has an extensive background in cafes, films and tv, and a sharp ear for broad satire. She unveiled a battery of fresh and usually on-target material for this engagement.

Among song titles she suggests are "I'm Glad I Kept His Letters Cause Now They're Keeping Me" and such mock folk tunes as "I Gave My Love A Kidney That Had No Stones" and "Black Is The Color of My True Hair Roots."

Her longer numbers include a spoof of the Old South called "This Old Train Is Taking Me To Dixie," a clever song takeoff on tv commercials, and a song rib directed at maestro-fiddler Frank York titled "He Plays Fiddle Chicago Style." Her callback number is her familiar wild caricature of a throaty chanteuse in mock-French.

Frank York's house orch follows Miss Richter's unpredictable act without missing a trick, plays firstrate terp music between shows and soothes the diners with strolling violins. Mor.

International, N. Y.

London Lee, Judy Preston, Line (13), Mike Durso Orch; $6.50 minimum.

Jack Silverman's International Theatre Restaurant shows the influence of several schools of booking thought. Following the run of George White's "Scandals," a similar type production prevails with a larger than usual line plus nudes prancing around stage. Superimposed on this bevy is a pair of turns which makes it all a worthwhile endeavor.

Making his fourth local cafe appearance within a year, London Lee is a much improved performer. Some of the rough edges have been ironed out, and he appears to work the cafe scenes with more confidence.

His characterization of a chap trying to overcome the stigma of being a rich man's son is still one of the shrewder comedy concepts. He is working more within that vein and is throwing out some of the extraneous matter that detracts from this basic depiction.

Lee is still in need of longer stretches of material that would conform to the character. But there are still some very funny bits. One of them is the gimmick of showing off his father's line of dresses. He still gives the impression of being a nice kid unfortunate enough to be born to rich parents when all he wanted to be was one of the gang. As a gag, the three added musicians used in the forepart of the act didn't work out.

Completing the lineup is Judy Preston (New Acts). Per usual, Mike Durso is a superior showbacker and dansapator. Jose.

Playboy, Phoenix

Phoenix, Jan. 24.

Curtiss & Tracy, Judy Curtis, Sam Scafidi Orch (4); $2.50 cover.

Pity the plight of Tom Sodaro, g.m. of the Phoenix Playboy. This boite, the most attractive in town, with zanies Jackie Curtiss & Bill Tracy toplining, fetching Judy Curtis in support and the fine backstopping of the Sam Scafidi combo totes up as the best entertainment buy in town.

Sodaro's problem? Not enough customers and it's a shame. A means must be devised of telling local keyholders who's appearing at this plush keyery or it's an empty house over and over. As things stand now the PC card is one of this town's best kept secrets.

Curtiss (formerly Antoine & Curtiss) and Tracy (ne Tracy & Hutten) are a refreshing departure from the stereotype fat-boy idiot vs. smooth-slicker tandems cruising the nitery beat today. For they're a pair of handsome, articulate young gents who obviously know what the tablers want.

Both have trained, potent pipes able to showcase pop, show tunes and even a mild aria on demand. They hoof well and have a catalog of topical yocks, fresh, original and brash but never offensive. In short, the duo, essaying a 56-minute tour-de-force is ready for the important clubs.

Young Miss Curtis, a striking raven-tressed warbler sells such numbers as "Gonna Build A Mountain" and "In Other Words" with verve. Sam Scafidi's combo cuts a difficult show with its usual ease. O'Haf.

Sahara, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Jan 21.

Connie Francis, Davis & Reese, Moro-Landis Dancers (16), Louis Basil Orch (17); produced by Stan Irwin, presented by Milton Prell; $5 minimum.

Producer Stan Irwin has a winning balance of music and comedy at the Congo Room, and both attractions are blue chip in Vegas—Connie Francis and team of Pepper Davis & Tony Reese.

While her conductor, Joe Mazzu, guides the solid Louis Basil orch (17), Miss Francis offers such as "With A Song In My Heart," "Swanee," "You're Nobody," "Yes Indeed," and "Sweet Chariot." Best audience reaction hits her disclicks, "Alde La" and "Mama," and the stirring finale combination of "Exodus" "Hava Nagila." The pretty, shapely star is a charmer, also clicking with some yockable patter about her attack on the slot machines.

Davis & Reese have long been top faves in Vegas, and on this trip they supplement their surefire laugh routines with some very funny new material including a spoof on the Personna razor "boop beep" commercials. Cheers from firstnighters indicated that the powerhouse team could have stayed on much longer than the alloted time.

Elaborate Moro-Landis salute to "My Fair Lady" is held over, featuring the 16 "Most American Girls In The World."

Jerry Lewis, L.A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Michele Triola, Sid Horwitz, Chris Clark; no cover, no minimum.

Opening a two-week date that will probably go to four, pert songstress Michele Triola, peering from beneath an unbelievable hairdo by "Cleopatra" out of "My Fair Lady," got a very warm for January reception from Monday's (20) unusually large firstnight audience.

Still substituting personality for vocal ability, this small canary swings with nonchalance. There's enough pleasure provided for the gourmets to give them cause to pause (albeit momentarily) in their gastronomic exercises.

Keeping her program short, Miss Triola gets her best response with an outer-limited "Out of This World," its offbeat rhythm disguising her limited range. Tunes with straight melodies and emphasis on lyrics are her Waterloo.

Sid Horwitz on piano and Chris Clark on bass provide solid support and make with pleasant between-shows dinner music. Robe.

Second City, Chi

Chicago, Jan. 21.

"New York City Is Missing" with John Brent, Jack Burns, Ann Elder, Sally Hart, Gene Kadish, Omar Shapli and David Steinberg; directed by Sheldon Patinkin; music composed and played by William Mathieu; $2-$2 50 admission charge.

It's fortunate that the bottom of the tab revue barrel at the Second City is superior to anything in a similar format in this area. "New York City Is Missing," the current show, confirms a suspicion that seven capable players are not necessarily seven times funnier than one accomplished comic.

This is particularly true when the show essays only comedy and when that material is at best clever, a tag that would have given earlier Second City practitioners the shakes. It wasn't too long ago that this troupe had something to say about people and the times.

The solo comic reference has more than just passing meaning in this show, since four of the members of the cast (John Brent, Jack Burns, Gene Kadish and David Steinberg) are all former cafe funnymen. They are still sharp gagsters and are responsible for most of the laughs, but what's missing in "Missing" is the ensemble interplay that has long separated the Second City from Brand "X" revues.

While comparisons with previous shows are invidious, they do tend to point up where this one misses. For instance, the centrepiece is a mock opera improvised on a Grimm

House Reviews

Music Hall, N.Y.

Russell Markert presentation of "Musicana" with The Rassos (2), Ista, Rockettes, Ballet Co., Les Girls, Warren Galjour, Anita Boschen, Symphony Orch conducted by Ramond Paige; costumes, Frank Spencer; lighting, Eugene Braun; "The Prize" (MGM), reviewed in VARIETY Dec. 4, '63.

Radio City Music Hall has cut down on its stage proceedings to accommodate the rather lengthy film, but it seems that little is lost in the abbreviation since each component comes off well. The bulk of the entertainment is left to the Music Hall regulars. The Hall's ballet and the Rockettes provide the major moments in this session.

The Rocks have a colorful terp sequence. It's a more complex routine than normal, but the girls tap it out excellently with accustomed precision. As always, the returns are big.

The ballet has been devised into a series of episodes tied together excellently by choreographer Marc Platt. Anita Boschen is a lithe soloist who skillfully covers the stage with well executed spins and leaps.

The singing on this session is by a group billed as Les Girls, fronted by Warren Galjour, who baritones the tunes well. The femmes behind him show the United Nations' influence. The unit is racially mixed, but harmonically balanced. Their texture is smooth and the songs capably delivered.

The outside talent is headed by The Rassos, a man-and-woman bicycle and balancing act. One of the twain's better tricks is the male's use of one of the wheels as a rolla-bolla while the girl balances on his shouders. Other act is Ista, who does a butterfly bit with long poles on which voluminous silk drapes are furled. Both turns entertain well in their spot.

The Raymond Paige conducted Symphony does a collection of turn of the century tunes. Its showbacking chores are impeccable. Jose.

Apollo, N.Y.

Drifters (5), Tommy Hunt, Wiltshire & Taylor, Doris Troy, Orlons (4), Major Lance, Miller Sisters (5), Reuben Phillips Orch (13); "The Tartans" (MGM).

A couple of items are standout in this otherwise routine runoff of r&r disk faves.

Tommy Hunt, a tall, slender wailer in the gospel-to-rock style, comes on like a one-man Isley Bros. He has the teens and subteens, who dominate the front rows (and from time to time the stage) squealing with ecstacy over his revved-up, sensual belting and wild terping. Voice and projection have solid values, and with a little taming, Hunt should broaden his audience.

Latest Harlem dance craze, apparently, is the Heat Wave, and Hunt invites the kids up on stage to give their version. Eight young chicks made it in the mad rush to form an impromptu chorus line whose gyrations made up in enthusiasm what they lacked in artistry.

Before the invitation, a couple of young girls leaped on the stage and stripped Hunt of his tie in the middle of a soulful ballad before ushers chased them back to their seats.

The other standout performance comes from the lead singer of the Orlons, (three chicks and a boy). The lead, Rosetta, struts with great style and belts with lusty, leathery pipes that are in rich contrast to the slender frame. She thoroughly dominates the act, which, en toto, has real class for the genre. Foursome is young, but polished and costumed in good taste right up to the jet-set wigs.

Drifters, top of the bill, are not up to their former pace, nor are the Miller Sisters, who have plenty shake, no sound. Doris Troy and Major Lance are routine shouters strictly for this trade. Wiltshire & Taylor do an old fashion burlesque routine that's sock here. Reuben Phillips house band backs expertly and blows a couple of fine warmup instrumentals. Bill.

Olympia, Paris

Paris, Jan. 20.

Beatles (4), Trini Lopez, Sylvie Vartan, Gil Miller & Arnold Archer, Hoganas (3), Viniclo, Roger Comte, Larry Griswold, Pierre Vassiliu, Daniel Janin Orch (21); $3.90 top.

Vaudeville is very much alive here these days and each Olympia opening night has its share of black ties, show biz and political bigwigs and pushing crowds. This bill outdid most of them and looks to be in for three weeks of solid biz. The Twist, rock and surf motifs are naturals here.

Show is generally of high calibre around the solid draw names of Yank surf exponent Trini Lopez, the phenomenally popular British Beatles and a local Twister, Sylvie Vartan. Except that it is unfair to put Miss Vartan between such superior headliners, the layout went over solidly.

Beatles finished the show in the keystone spot. These four youths with the Buster Brown hairdos, except that the ears show, have a pulsating rhythm, catching personalities and musicianship that win immediate audience acceptance. They can ad lib and also have self-written perky songs to make them one of the most personalized and engaging of the rock groups.

They easily span countries and their lingo is no barrier here. Ditto for Trini Lopez whose big pipes and jumpy surf rhythms also show solid aplomb, controlled rhythms and high grade pro musicality. He is also personable, and can handle his body and mike as well as the Beatles.

Local starter Miss Vartan is pert and fetching but still amateurish in bearing and gauche in presence. She has an okay, husky little voice. However, a true flair for Twist type melodies is not apparent. With a French rock group, she would be all right but not sandwiched between such top-notch pros.

It is a tribute to Miss Vartan, or to French nationalism, that she manages to go over at all. The French do not quite have the temperament or musical background for this type act. They have some good facsimiles but are rarely exportable as are the more dynamic U.S. and British varieties.

Pierre Vassiliu has a raucous voice and belts out bawdy songs. But he's more suitable for intime boites than vaude houses. Roger Comte, a staple at the Olympia, gives out some nice patter gag interludes as well as introing the acts. Daniel Janin house orchestra again does fine medley work and performer backing.

There also are four fine filler acts. Larry Griswold does harrowingly funny falls on a diving board approach to a trampoline that combine timing, comic savvy and acrobatic elan to make this a classic boff act. Viniclo is a fast and frenetic juggler who keeps things flying for big mitts.

Hoganas are a classy trio with a shapely girl walking or spinning on a slack wire held around the necks or in the mouths of her two male partners. Later, she holds one end of the rope around her neck for both men to do acrobatics on. Their's is a brilliant act.

Gil Miller & Arnold Archer imitate instruments orally. They have a general infectious bombast and wit to make this U.S. act another fine addition to the show.

Vaude, which had its troubles the last few years, has another shot in the arm with the rise of an affluent younger set and the popularity of rock and Twist, etc. Latter has made records a big business and diskeries now get their names into the Olympia whenever they can. All benefit.

It is true that the Alhambra Music Hall is on and off in respect to house shows and the ABC has gone over to musicals. But there is still the Bobino and the Concert Pacra, with more nabe pull. And the Olympia is the flagship spot. Mosk.

Fair's 2d Class Rank?

Fair management on their outstanding progress report just presented and then made it clear that he was not proposing that Fair passes be issued, it being understood that all corporate members, including the directors not on the Fair payroll or receiving special service fees, would be expected to pay the regular admission charge.

Kirschenbaum later complained that "although properly presented and seconded, in accordance with recognized parliamentary procedure, the Chairman declined to put the motion to a vote but did state it would be referred to the Executive Committee for consideration at its next meeting . . . I was informed by some members of the Fair public relations staff that car shields and personal identity cards already were being prepared for the corporate members who are directors, but that the other corporate members were being excluded. While the great majority of corporate members are directors, the exclusion of the small minority who are not seems most undiplomatic and inconsiderate, particularly since many of this small minority have been actively supporting and promoting the Fair since 1958-59 when it was originally conceived."

performers working in this area. He cited that while AGVA has jurisdiction over American acts working anyplace in the world, either through tieups with foreign unions or indirectly through the threat of blacklisting, the guild has little control over situations involving acts that fail to register their contracts before going overseas.

Under present circumstances, Adams said, American acts working at U.S. military bases here have no protection against gouging by promoters, loss of earnings through sickness or injury, substandard dressing rooms, inferior accommodations and transportation, impossible schedules, altered billing, etc.

Adams said conditions at the military bases could be controlled through regulations imposed by the American government that would place the responsibility on the local promoters of the talent.

Concerning off-base conditions, Adams urged the organization of a strong Japanese counterpart of AGVA which American artists working here could join. "Japanese acts in the U.S. are protected by joining AGVA and it should work the other way too," Adams said.

Celebrity Lounge

corporated into the revived big bands.

What's even more curious about the sudden success of the policy in the Celebrity Lounge is that the room is not laid out for such a presentation. The stage is too small for Zentner's 16 musicians to sit down during their entire hour-long set, and the stage is located in the center of the room so that half of the band plays directly at the other half.

Despite these seeming handicaps, the orch is purveying a sound that is apparently more than satisfactory to those nostalgic for the traditional section sound of the '40s and also to a younger generation looking for hard jazz.

Zentner has a generally youthful band that travels by bus and uses no local pickup players. A big part of the band's strength is its apparent familiarity with its firstrate charts, a fluency that couldn't be obtained by a few days' rehearsal with even the many good local sidemen available.

Unlike many of the older name bands, Zentner's group has none of the renowned sidemen to use as marquee lures. It's consistent with Zentner's thesis that "the band is the star," and it appears to be working.

The Zentner contingent comprises four trumpets, four trombones, five saxophones, bass, piano and drums, plus singer John Curtis, who was featured on "I Left My Heart In San Francisco" and "Just In Time," both nicely handled on the night caught. Catalog runs from a moody version of "Stella By Starlight" to such specially-written numbers as "Sack of Woe," "Tain't Much" and "Be Bop Bus Drivers Blues.'

During this current gig Zentner is cutting two albums on his regular label, Liberty, at the Universal Recording Studios, across the street from the club. Mor.

Blue Angel

for intimeries. Acts like Harry Belafonte, Eartha Kitt, the Kingston Trio, The Weavers and others ended that fiction. The supper club was then regarded as a stepping stone to big cafes and big money, more than Gordon could pay because of his small capacity.

Another disadvantage was the rise of the television showcases which caused managers to bypass dates at the Blue Angel. The old Jack Paar show was a slot on which a favorable appearance caused an act to get offers throughout the country—a Blue Angel was no longer necessary.

It was in this context that Gordon had to devise another format. He found that suitable attractions in the Angel's lounge paid their way, but they were competitive to the main room. There is also an abundance of drop-in trade traversing the east side.

To make it easier on potential customers, Gordon felt that a new policy could lure many of his old customers plus some of the drop-ins of the area. This means the elimination of covers and substitution of low minimums, so that one or two drinks would cover the bottom tab. Volume and turnover within a class content is his immediate aim.

Stewart Cheyney has been called in to study the situation and will redesign. The final bill under the old format will be headed by Woody Woodbury. After that, the spot will be closed for a few days for alterations to bring the stage into the middle of the room along one of the walls.

turned to the Manor House for the recent season, delivering sock performances and proving that Canadian talent can make the grade in U.S. competition.

Laing also uses much local talent, folk singers, the odd French-Canadian singer, and the like. But his basic pitch is to provide the best in taste and talent on a limited budget, which will certainly expand in the years immediately ahead.

Reasons for this optimism are twofold:

1. The recent opening of the Laurentian Autoroute's extension, the expressway planned to go up to Ste. Adele, 45 miles from Montreal, by next summer, and all the way to Ste. Agathe within the next two or three years.

2. The Montreal World's Fair in 1967, which will turn the vast Laurentian area into a "bedroom" for fair visitors.

of eventually blending the two into one, should two separate pix not make the grade. In so far as possible in keys, outside Paris, the pix are being sold to separate theatres for day-date engagements.

The pix, which star Marie-Jose Nat and Jacques Charrier, are, in any case, starting out with a strong hypo from all the publicity being gleaned by the production, release and unusual first night.

Second City, Chi.

fairy tale allegedly selected by the audience.

In the opening night show, the takeoff on "Snow White" was a far cry from earlier spoofs of high art that they have done, the best of which was probably their "Marina City Ballet." "Snow White" had all of the uneasy hesitancy inherent in improvisation, but very little of the onstage discovery that makes for excitement.

The Second City also appears to be having difficulty in finding and/or developing performers to replace such recent heavyweight departees as Dick Schaal, Avery Schreiber and Del Close. Everyone in the current cast shows promise, including those in the last show who have as yet failed to deliver.

Newcomer David Steinberg does a nice job as a school dropout who converts a social worker (Jack Burns) to his way of thinking. Burns is fine as a shy painter who gets his model to seduce him, then has her arrested for prostitution, and Ann Elder is good as the understanding model. (This is a local "in" joke referring to a similar arrest in a now-closed nitery.) The rest of the material is mostly brief sketches and blackouts building to gag tag lines. Mor.

Houston, Jan. 22.

Arthur Ellen, Freddie Noble Orch (5); $1 entertainment charge.

Arthur Ellen is an accomplished hypnotist. He exploits a timely gimmick this time around in that he tells patrons he can prepare them mentally so they won't want another cigaret.

Otherwise, aside from a memory exhibition he uses for warmup, it's a routine hypnotist show, with volunteers—some pushed on stage by friends—playing imaginary drum or piano, unable to remove finger from noses, holding arms rigidly in air.

On night caught, Ellen focused on a 9-year-old girl in club, who proved to be best subject, then in mass hypnotizing attempt, brought her mother onstage for usual routines.

In memory gymnastic exhibition, Ellen uses blackboard with object written in each of 16 squares which he repeats, then taking a large number called from auidence he has, assistant quickly write numbers in squares which—up, down and diagonally—equal the number called out by the patron. Show is effective and well-received by patrons. But nobody will probably ever know if the volunteers really stop smoking.

Tasks for Freddie Noble Orch are light for engagement, with band concentrating on dancing sessions.

Show in for two weeks. Skip.

skull "don't go, I'll get better." And he did.

Johnny Carson directed most of his lines at Jessel. He described the made-in-Israel watch that the toastmaster gave him. It was now 10 minutes before two. In another hour it would be 10 minutes to one. He saw Jessel's bar mitzvah pictures taken by Matthew Brady.

Al Kelly's doubletalk scored strongly. He had comic Emil Cohen (no relation to Myron) reciting the Gettysburg Address which Kelly translated into Yiddish. It was a funny highlight.

However, the newer comics on the dais rose to the occasion. Jackie Wakefield scored heavily. Much of his humor was unprintable and the same applied to Eddie Schaffer, current at the Copacabana. Alan Gale did provide some sapolioed remarks, but much of his saltiness would be lost in the translation from the original.

Jessel was always able to cap a speaker. To Tony Bennett, he said, "It's a good thing you can sing." Speaking of his own amours, "Man cannot live by bed alone." About Barry Goldwater: Jessel announced that he would campaign in all 13 states. A guy with a pencil was kept busy with the goodies that were flying around.

Cole was gifted with a set of golf clubs which included a gold putter with the Friars' insignia and a set of gold tees. Jose.

OBITUARIES

JOSEPH SCHILDKRAUT

Joseph Schildkraut, 68, whose stage and screen career spanned 50 years and who was the winner of two film Oscars, died Jan. 21 in New York. He was to begin rehearsals next month for his first legit musical, "Cafe Crown," which is Broadway-bound later this season.

He won his Academy Awards as best supporting actor for his role of Capt. Alfred Dreyfus in "The Life of Emile Zola" in 1938 and for his characterization of a weaver in "The Tell-Tale Heart" in 1942. His most recent principal role was that of Anne Frank's father, which he played in the stage and film productions of "Diary of Anne Frank." The play opened on Broadway in 1955.

He was the son of the internationally known actor, Rudolph Schildkraut. Young Schildkraut attended the Imperial Academy of Music in Berlin where he studied piano and violin. But his love for the theatre led him to Albert Basserman, a leading character actor of the day who coached him in the theatre. Schildkraut came to the U. S. with his parents in 1910, and studied at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, graduating in 1913. Returning to Berlin, he made his debut in "The Prodigal Son" under the direction of Max Reinhardt. On his next trip to the U. S. he was engaged to play the lead opposite Eva Le Gallienne in Molnar's "Lilliom," which opened in 1921.

He next appeared in the title role of "Peer Gynt" in 1923, for which he received critical praise. This was followed by "The Firebrands." His first film was D. W. Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm" in 1922. In 1927, he went to Hollywood to play Judas in "The King of Kings," and remained until 1931. While on the coast he managed the Hollywood Playhouse and starred in 25 films, including "Show Boat."

His Broadway plays include "Clash by Night," "Uncle Harry," "The Green Bay Tree," and "Love Labor's Lost," for which he won the New York Shakespeare Society Award in 1953. He also appeared as a host and star on his own dramatic tv series in 1953. During his career, he appeared in more than 60 films, 24 plays and scores of tv shows.

His wife survives.

MARC BLITZSTEIN

Marc Blitzstein, 58, long associated with Broadway as a composer, died Jan. 22 after he was beaten and robbed on the French island of Martinique in the West Indies, where he had been living and working since November. He came to attention in the depression period with his pro-labor operetta, "The Cradle Will Rock," followed soon thereafter by "No For An Answer."

He turned Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes" stage play into an opera, "Regina." Another theatrical achievement of Blitzstein was his translation from the German of "Threepenny Opera" which Bertold Brecht had, in turn, borrowed from John Gay's "Beggar's Opera" and to which the score of Kurt Weill was added.

Blitzstein, born of well-to-do Philadelphians, was rated a child prodigy on the piano. Among his extensive works are a number of symphonies. For some time he had been at work on an opera, "Sacco and Vanzetti," which is believed unfinished. It has been considered a tentative possibility for Met Opera production.

Blitzstein married Eva Goldbeck, a writer, in 1933. She died three years later. Blitzstein remained very close to his mother-in-law, the former opera singer, Lina Arabanell. His own mother, now 81, survives in Philadelphia as does a sister, Mrs. Edward Davis.

NORMAN Z. McLEOD

Norman Z. McLeod, 68, for years one of the top comedy film directors who launched his career with Christie Comedies as a gagman, died Jan. 27 in Hollywood after a long illness. While with Christie he also wrote scripts and drew line characters on title cards.

McLeod suffered a stroke more than a year ago and since then had been convalescing. Born in Michigan, he enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Corps in World War I as combat pilot, and went to Hollywood afterwards. He directed many of the early Marx Bros. and Bob Hope comedies.

Either as a writer or director he had been associated with many of the top motion picture comedies down through the years. After his stint with Christie, he joined Fox in 1928. At that studio his first directorial chore was "Taking a Chance" in 1929.

Many of McLeod's best known films were at Paramount, where he was a pactee for years. While working there, with Joe Mankiewicz he adapted "Skippy" and "Sooky," and directed Hope and Bing Crosby in "Road to Rio," among other pictures.

With Crosby, he did "Pennies from Heaven;" with Hope, "The Paleface," "My Favorite Spy" and "Casanova's Big Night." He also was active at Metro and with Samuel Goldwyn. In television, he helmed some episodes of "My Little Margie" and "Twilight Zone."

His wife survives.

STEPHEN E. GARUTSO

Stephen E. Garutso, former lieutenant colonel in the Imperial and White Russia armies who traded in his cavalry saber for a newsreel camera and ultimately became a specialist in photographic optics, died Jan. 17 in Hollywood.

Garutso was best known for his Garutso Balanced Lenses, used on such films as "Cyrano de Bergerac" and "Member of the Wedding." At the time of his death he completed, after 40 years of research, his photographic stereo Rainbow Lens, which conceivably could put a new complexion on film projection.

This process, attached to a conventional camera lens, reportedly will produce a three-dimensional stereo image directly on film which may be projected by standard equipment and viewed without glasses. His widow, Dr. Sonia Garutso, who has worked closely with her husband in all his developments, declares she intends to carry out her husband's plans for the scientific and commercial uses of these lenses.

Garutso, who launched his newsreel career in China in 1922 with Pathe Oriente and accompanied Chinese warlords to record spectacular newsreel films, also developed the Garutso Multi-Source Lens System, known in Europe as Garutso Plastorama. He was founder-prexy of Balanscope Inc., and of Garutso Realife Corp., which now will be headed by his widow.

In 1924, when he developed film taken of a rainbow after a storm, he discovered a few feet of three-dimensional stereo, and to recapture this phenomenon scientifically was a challenge which launched him on his long carreer in photographic optics.

Besides his widow, a son also survives.

STUART LAKE

Stuart Lake, 74, regarded as an authority upon Wyatt Earp and Geronimo, died Jan. 27 in San Diego, Calif. He was frequently consulted by film companies making Earp pix. He also was associated with a tv program, "Life and Legends of Wyatt Earp."

Lake, who was a New York newspaperman prior to Army service in World War I which crippled him, later turned to magazine and book writing.

Surviving are his wife, daughter and a brother.

SAM NATHANSON

Sam Nathanson, 65, longtime distribution executive, died of cancer Jan. 27 in Hollywood. His industry career spanned 39 years. At the time of his death he was sales manager with Alexander-Ford-Dupont Pictures.

Nathanson for years was with Columbia Pictures in its Los Angeles exchange. He also had been an indie film distrib in L. A., one of his companies being Gibraltar Pictures.

Surviving are his wife, son and a daughter.

VERONICA BRADY

Veronica Brady, 75, actress, died Jan. 19 in Twickenham, England. She made her stage debut as a fairy dancer with the Frank Benson Company at Londen's Lyceum when she was 10.

Miss Brady had roles in such productions as "The Last Waltz," "Hit The Deck," "The Crest of the Wave," Henry V," "The Dancing Years," and "Perchance To Dream." She was also a notable music hall and panto performer.

MAYNARD MORRIS

Maynard Morris, 65, theatrical agent, died Jan. 26 in New York. Morris devoted his life to discovering and aiding new talent. Some of the now big stars whose career he helped to launch were Gregory Peck, Charlton Heston, Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Warren Beatty, John Payne, Tyrone Power, Caesar Romero, Gene Tierney, Barbara Bel Geddes, Robert Goulet, John Forsythe, Constance Cummings, and Wendell Corey.

He began his career as apprentice to Chamberlain and Lyman Brown. Later he joined Leland Hayward's staff before the latter became a theatrical producer. In 1944, together with Edith Van Cleve, Morris headed the theatrical department of Music Corp. of America, an association that lasted until 1960 when he retired for reasons of health. For the last few years, he has been working as a personal manager for a number of young performers. He was reputed to have owned a large collection of theatrical and opera memorabilia. He was a devotee of all the arts including ballet, symphony, and opera and travelled extensively in search of talent.

He is survived by his sister.

MARIAN DISTLER

Marian H. Distler, 45, a founder of Folksways Records, died in New York, Jan. 25, of pneumonia. Folkways Music, of which Miss Distler was president, carried the folk message on disks long before its emergence on the major record company level.

In this age of tell-all literature, Arthur Miller might have called his new play, "I Cry Tonight." This Initial presentation of the Repertory Theatre of the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, opening officially last Thursday night (23) at the temporary home, the Anta Washington Square Theatre, is actually titled "After the Fall." It is almost exactly three hours of guilt confession and self-justification.

As a repertory item, "After the Fall" is an appropriate starter for the repertory group which will ultimately occupy the Vivian Beaumont Theatre uptown in Lincoln Center. It's an eminent author's first stage work in approximately nine years, and is a big play—big in intention and potential interest as well as in length and size of cast. It also has the advantage of having several powerful scenes, and being the sort of show that stirs sharp reaction and strong differences of opinion.

"After the Fall" will inspire fervent admiration in some quarters, and also raise questions of taste, as well as cause embarassment at an author's seeming lack of self-consciousness, not to mention humorlessness, in such public preoccupation, continuously and interminably, with his own self-analysis. It's interesting but exhausting. In short, "After the Fall" is a play of contrasts and despite its faults, not to be dismissed.

Under Elia Kazan's brilliantly conceived, resourceful and propulsive direction, the play is a stream-of-consciousness monolog laced with dramatized episodes, presented on the handsome new theatre's three-quarter stage, with Jo Mielziner's ingenious and playable arrangement of platforms and elequent lighting. Jason Robards Jr., in the role of a lawyer named Quentin but obviously representing Miller himself, is onstage throughout, droning on and on about his evidently obsessive sense of guilt and his indomitable self-forgiveness.

As the author makes abundantly clear, he disliked and blames his mother, had a negligible sort of contempt for his father, hated his first wife, and is angry and resentful at and apparently still emotionally involved with his second wife, who despite his published disclaimers, is inescapably identifiable as the late Marilyn Monroe.

Miller also expresses contempt for one former associate who, for pure expediency, named names before a Congressional investigating committee. He has an impersonal respect for another probe victim who committed suicide rather than face exposure, and indicates at least a sort of affection for the understanding, undemanding but vaguely defined woman who presumably represents his third and present wife.

Assuming that "After the Fall" is accurately autobiographical, the author depicts himself as having the ruthless ego drive typical of many, if not most, great artists. He portrays himself as expecting and requiring the admiration, devotion and utter selflessness of women, and regarding any demands on their part as disloyal and unforgiveable. It's perhaps significant that practically every woman in the play is infatuated with him (the Monroe character gets on her knees and hugs him around the legs to coax him to have an affair with her), and almost all ultimately betray him by making demands on him.

Especially in his portrait of the Monroe character, whom he represents as a pop singing star, Miller is anything but generous. An artist is under no compulsion to be a gentleman, of course, if only his work is good enough. So perhaps what matters in this case is not so much the question of taste of the author, but that this ignorant, simple-minded, neurotic, self-destructive, egocentric, but pathetic and likable sensualist is the most theatrical and arresting character in the play, and perhaps in the author's life.

Compared to her, the excessively garrulous protagonist, who forgets and forgives nothing anyone else has ever done, but confesses so much and excuses everything about himself, seems progressively self-centered, intense and monotonous. It's one of those familiar cases of an author being enthralled with something that others may find self-evident and increasingly tiresome.

Probably no one could succeed too well in the interminable, unvarying vehement, self-dramatizing role of the hero, and it's a credit to Robards, as well as to Kazan's mobile staging, that the audience doesn't yawn in the actor's face. The part must be one of the longest in theatrical history, comprising perhaps 90% of the script. Under the circumstances, it's a minor miracle that Robards could learn it at all, and a wonder that his voice survives the evening.

In the large permanent company, Barbara Loden, a newcomer, is a standout in the complex, vital, showy role of the beautiful, sexy, promiscuous (not to say arrantly trampy) star-wife who looks not unlike Marilyn Monroe, wears a fluffy blond wig to accentuate the resemblance, uses similar speech tones and patterns and even tells of a comparable childhood.

There are also plausible performances by Salome Jens in the idealistic, sketchily-drawn part of the willowy, compliant third wife, as well as by Virginia Kaye as the termagant mother, David J. Stewart as the martyr to Congressional witch-hunting (which the author likens to Nazi concentration camp techniques), Patricia Roe as his wife, and Ralph Meeker as the renegade who turns in his friends to the investigating committee.

Others who contend creditably with the one-note roles include Paul Mann as the whimpering father, Mariclare Costello as the coldly accusing first wife who had the effrontery to want an identity of her own, Michael Strong as the docile and therefore approved younger brother, Zohra Lampert as a legal client absurdly eager to make it a romantic relationship, and Broadway names David Wayne and Hal Holbrook temporarily playing bit roles but due for leads in the group's upcoming productions.

In general, "After the Fall" should do well as a repertory item, certainly until the scheduled openings Feb. 20 of the revival of Eugene O'Neill's "Marco Millioans" and March 12 of the new S. N. Behrman play, "But for Whom Charlie." This new Miller drama is a dubious bet for pictures, however, and an uncertain bet for stock or the road. It might be doubtful for Broadway.

Come to think of it, there's some question how much interest there might be in "After the Fall" if it didn't involve a sort of Confidential magazine game of identifying real-life counterparts of the characters, particularly the bitterly lurid portrait of Miss Monroe. Maybe that's the late star's final, ironic revenge on Arthur Miller—she steals his play.

Show Out of Town

Any Wednesday

New Haven, Jan. 22.

George W. George & Frank Granat, with Howard Erskine, Edward Specter Productions, Peter Katz presentation of comedy in three acts (four scenes) by Muriel Resnik. Staged by Henry Kaplan; scenery, Robert Randolph; lighting, Tharon Musser; costumes, Theoni V. Aldredge. Stars Michael Rennie, Sandy Dennis; features Rosemary Murphy. Gene Hackman. Opened at Shubert Theatre, New Haven, Jan. 21, '64; $4.80 top.

John Cleves ..... Michael Rennie
Ellen Gordon ..... Sandy Dennis
Cass Henderson ..... Gene Hackman
Dorothy Cleves ..... Rosemary Murphy

Sometimes a bright feather in an old hat makes the millinery acceptable for contemporary wear. That just about tells the story on "Any Wednesday."

From a vintage standpoint, following close on the heels of the world's oldest profession, and somewhat allied to it, is society's other situation of the aging philanderer who turns to a young mistress as he might to a sort of fountain of youth. That is the theme of this new comedy by Muriel Resnik, and in view of its creaky premise, its major hope lies in the funny lines and four clever players who know what to do with them.

The script is a merry-go-round of sex chatter and insight. Candid dialog on the subject is so frank it leaves an impression that the author's mother must have been frightened by a Kinsey report. Despite its indigo hue, however, it manages to avoid offensiveness and is handled in the many-a-thruth-spoken-in-jest method.

An unusual succession of stagers makes it difficult to gauge who is responsible for what. Stanley Prager was one of several in line to direct, and then George Morrison handled rehearsals at first, reportedly in disagreement as to treatment of the script. Co-producer Howard Erskine, an ex-actor, assumed the reins just prior to and through the play's premiere, following which Henry Kaplan was brought in.

The early status of the production reflects optimism on the basis of its comedy values rather than theme originality, and with proper nursing, it could become sturdy escapist fare. A major problem is downhill trend of the third act and an ineffectual finale.

Michael Rennie, as the waning romancer, has a tailor-made role, and he gives a typical smooth performance. Sandy Dennis features an unorthodox delivery that has an audience constantly wondering whether she is groping for a line or piece of business or whether that's the role, but whatever it is it carries considerable personal appeal. She also repeats the crying bit she did so effectively two seasons ago on Broadway in "A Thousand Clowns."

The other half of the quartet has Rosemary Murphy doing a capital version of the understanding wife who holds the wandering spouse with a loose rein and Gene Hackman brings a pleasing personality and a good sense of comedy to the talented cast.

An attractive Manhattan garden apartment seems to be in character. It's designed by Robert Randolph and lighted by Tharon Musser. A steady procession of becoming feminine apparel emphasizes the visual assets of the production and completes a general impression of overall quality. The fact that play's biggest gaffaws are also its saltiest might be a stumbling block in any possible film adaptation.

No Strings

London, Dec. 31.

Williamson Music Ltd. presentation of a musical in two acts (14 numbers), with music and lyrics by Richard Rodgers, book by Samuel Taylor. Original staging and choreography by Joe Layton, reproduced by Wakefield Poole; decor and lighting, David Hays; costumes, Fred Voelpel and Donald Brooks; orchestrations, Ralph Burns; dance arrangements, Peter Matz; musical director, Johnnie Spence; production supervised by Jerome Whyte. Stars Art Lund, Beverley Todd, Hy Hazell; features Ferdy Mayne, David Holliday, Erica Rogers, Geoffrey Hutchings, Marti Stevens. Opened Dec. 30, '63, at Her Majesty's Theatre, London; $4.30 top.

Barbara Woodruff ..... Beverley Todd

Jeanette Valmy ..... Erica Rogers
Luc Delbert ..... Geoffrey Hutchings
Mollie Plummer ..... Hy Hazell
Mike Robinson ..... David Holliday
Louis de Pourtal ..... Ferdy Mayne
Comfort O'Connell ..... Marti Stevens
Gabrielle Bertin ..... Meg Walter
Marcello Agnolotti ..... Elwyn Hughes
Principal Dancer ..... Tommy Merrifield
Dancers ..... Paula Bell, Sonia Brindle, Patricia Cassie, Sylvia Ellis, Christine Harrington, Patricia Hawks, Wynne Jarman, Valerie Lloyd, Patricia Lovette, Sarah Martin, Janet Matthews, Merle Maxim, Patsy Porter, Vicky Udall, Maureen Willsher, Neil Fitzwilliam, Jan Garry, Louis Godfrey, David Moffat, Harry Naughton, Ross Parkes, Bryan Payne.
Musicians on stage ..... Ronnie Hughes, trumpet; Harry Roche, trombone; Bill Jackman, clarinet; Les Baldwin, oboe; Bunny Gould, bassoon, baritone sax; Johnny Martine, flute; Roy East, alto sax; Paul Brodie, drums.
Musical numbers ..... "The Sweetest Sounds," "How Sad," "Loads of Love," "The Man Who Has Everything," "Be My Host," "La La La," "You Don't Tell Me," "Love Makes the World Go," "Nobody Told Me," "Look No Further," "Maine," "An Orthodox Fool," "Eager Beaver," "No Strings."

With the opening of "No Strings," Richard Rodgers has three musicals current in the West End, all hits. "Sound of Music" is now in its third year at the Palace, "The Boys From Syracuse," after an uneasy start, has settled down comfortably at the Drury Lane, and this newcomer looks set for a long stay at Her Majesty's.

There are enough plus factors in "No Strings" to compensate for the deficiencies in Samuel Taylor's book. The Rodgers score and lyrics, with a succession of hit numbers, notably the opening song, "The Sweetest Sounds," "The Man Who Has Everything," "Be My Host," "Maine," and the title song. Another asset is the unusual placing of the orchestra in the wings, with some of the musicians playing an integral part in the production. Also, there is effective use of moveable and reversible screens to provide the principal decor, with colored arc lamps on the side, adding an effective, intriguing touch.

The original Joe Layton staging has been vigorously reproduced and choreographed by Wakefield Poole, under the watchful supervision of Jerome Whyte. The brisk and lively staging and the colorful ballet routines provide the visual gloss traditional of the best Broadway musical imports.

Though attempting to break new and courageous ground with the story of a white man's love for a colored girl, the book is somewhat cliche-ridden and the dialog mainly dull and uneven. But accepting the fact that it is meant to be little more than a peg for colorful backgrounds, switching from Paris to Deauville to the Riviera, the book serves its purpose more than adequately.

Beverley Todd, a newcomer to these shores, makes a striking impression as the colored model, the role created on Broadway by Diahann Carroll. She has striking looks, a warm personality and a pleasant voice. She is also a competent actress and has the flair for showing off her model gowns to best effect.

Art Lund, as the one-time Pulitzer Prize winner who has lost the will to write, makes an acceptable hero. He sings admirably, though his interpretation of the role is occasionally stodgy and unimaginative. Hy Hazell, who shares star billing, makes the most of her limited chances as editor of a fashion magazine.

One of the liveliest performances comes from Marti Stevens, as the American heiress who is always looking for the action. Her vivacity breaks through into every scene, and in an inspired way, she reveals a cute sense of comedy. Other solid performances come from Geoffrey Hutchings as the fashion photographer, Ferdy Mayne as the colored model's suitor and protector, and Erica Rogers and David Holliday, with fine support from the remainder of the cast.

Fred Voelpel and Donald Brooks have designed standout costumes, with particularly unusual creations for the dancers, while the decor and lighting by David Hays are top drawer. Orchestrations by Ralph Burns and dance arrangements by Peter Matz are other plus credits.

The Roses are Real

London, Jan. 23.

Jack Hylton & Alexander H. Cohen presentation of a drama in three acts by Patrick Paterson. Staged by Hilton Edwards; decor, Robert Heade. Stars Michael Mac Liammoir, Mary Kerridge, Thorley Walters; features Rachel Herbert, Hilton Edwards. Opened Jan. 22, '64, at the Vaudeville Theatre, London; $3.55 top.

Karl Schultz ..... Hilton Edwards
Gretel ..... Rachel Herbert
Hilda Schultz ..... Mary Kerridge
Johann Schneider ..... Thorley Walters
Konrad Apfelbaum ..... Michael Mac Liammoir

The theory that Adolf Hitler may still be alive could be the basis for an intriguing drama, but Patrick Paterson seems to have missed his target with "The Roses Are Real," and hefty reworking is called for if the Anglo-American partnership of Jack Hylton and Alexander H. Cohen intend it for eventual Broadway presentation. The London production is scheduled for a six-weeks engagement, but may have a tough time in view of the drubbing it received from the daily reviewers.

The author has an interesting approach to the is-Hitler-alive question. He suggests that the Fuhrer is in a mental home under an assumed name, pretending to have delusions of grandeur and claiming to be the Nazi dictator. But his real identity comes to light when he comes face to face with the superintendent's wife (herself a former mental patient) and recognizes her as one of the Hitler maidens, who once presented him with a bouquet.

Disturbingly, the author suggests there is still considerable sympathy for the Nazis, even though the sympathizers are in a mental institution. But otherwise, Paterson flounders, using mental patients for uneasy comedy contrast.

In spite of its many basic weaknesses, the play offers several good acting opportunities. Michael Mac Liammoir, resembling an aging Hitler (though he has been allowed to dye his hair and mustache), provides a neat contrast in moods, ranting when the occasion demands, but equally restrained when required.

Thorley Walters as a former adman, has a pushover part for easy laughs, and romps through it, while Mary Kerridge seems overtense as the wife. Hilton Edwards registers effectively as the institution superintendent, and Rachel Herbert makes a lively impression as a girl who lives in the past.

Edwards has staged the three acter fluently, and Robert Heade has designed a colorful set of the superintendent's private apartment in the mental institution.

The Brontes

London, Jan. 22.

Michael Codron presentation of solo reading of writing by and about Charlotte, Emily and Ann Bronte, arranged and adapted by Margaret Webster. Decor, G. E. Calthrop. Stars Margaret Webster. Opened Jan. 21, '64, at the Arts Theatre Club, London; $2.50 top.

Margaret Webster's one-woman show, recently seen off-Broadway, is more distinguished for literary quality than dramatic impact. The earnest and fascinating portrait of the three Bronte sisters is delivered in straightforward, matter-of-fact tone, with little variation of style or emphasis.

Miss Webster's adaptation, which she accurately bills as a scrap-book, has been done with obvious care and affection, but the actress relies too heavily on personality in performance rather than her dramatic skill in endeavoring to project her own enthusiasm to the audience. As a result, the show resembles a literary reading rather than the "dramatic portrait" promised in the program.

The program includes excerpts from Mrs. Gaskell's biography, as well as extracts from "Agnes Grey" and, of course, "Jane Eyre" and "Wuthering Heights." It all adds up to a feast for the afficionados, but with limited appeal to wider audiences.

Habimah, Back on B'way Next Week, Had Its Origin in Moscow in 1917

By JACOB BAAL-TESHUVA

Hebrew, the language of the Bible and modern Israel, will be heard on Broadway next week when Habimah, the National Theatre of Israel, opens a U. S. tour Feb. 3 at the Little Theatre on West 44th St. It will be Habimah's third U. S. tour. The first, in the late '20s, and the second in 1948, the year of the inception of the State of Israel. As in its earlier visits, it will be sponsored by the America-Israel Culture Foundation.

Habimah, meaning "The Stage," was born in Russia in 1917 during the chaotic and turbulent days of the Russian Revolution. It started as an offshot of the Stanislavsky Studio, which took it under its wings, and coached it to help further the struggling group's creation of a Hebrew Theatre at a time when Hebrew was not yet a spoken language. It required great sacrifice, self-discipline, zeal, and ardor.

David Vardi, one of the 11 original members of the Moscow troupe, wrote in his diary about the early days: "It was decided to send two actors to the provinces to try to obtain wheat and potatoes, otherwise we would die of hunger."

During 1926-31 Habimah took Europe and the United States by storm, leaving a strong impact not only on Jewish circles, but on the world of art and drama as a whole. Habimah impressed Albert Einstein "more than any other performance I have ever seen before." Max Reinhardt praised Habimah's discipline, "the will of the producer and the will of the actors uniting into one symphony."

By 1931 Habimah's home base became Israel where it flourishes, still faithful to its original purpose. From an audience of 10 curious spectators in Moscow it now has over 600,000 subscribers a season, a permanent theatre with a continuous and consistent theatrical policy.

Habimah scorns the star system as a product of publicity which does not make for better actors only a confused public, which chases after stars. Its repertoire includes plays by Shakespeare, O'Neill, Moliere, Ibsen, Euripides, Sophocles, together with the best in modern American, and European drama, as well as contemporary Israeli plays.

The list of directors who worked with Habimah starts with Stanislavsky, Vachtangov, and goes on to Sir Tyrone Guthrie, Julius Gellner, Harold Clurman, Lee Strasberg, and many others.

Habimah's repertoire for its United States tour will include the classic "The Dybbuk" by S. Ansky, with some original members of the Moscow cast, and two

Cut Pitt CLO Rent 22G; It May Not Be Enough; See Bigger Ticket Sale

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.

Pitt's Civic Light Opera got a $22,000 rent slash from the Civic Arena last Friday (24), but will be back looking for direct cash support from the city and county if the next summer season is as costly as the 1963 season. In acknowledgement of the cut, CLO president Milton Hulme said the concession is merely a partial answer to the financial problems faced by his organization.

Under the new agreement, the CLO will pay a basic rental of $108,000, against 10% over $450,000, plus $28,000 for staffing. Last year the group paid $130,000 rent, with staffing the same.

Philip Baskin, city councilman and vice chairman of the Public Auditorium authority which operates the Arena, said the reduction is "as far as we can go, consistent with our policy of operating the Arena in the black." Baskin also said that the new sound system and marked improvement in seating arrangements should enable the CLO to greatly increase its ticket sales.

The sound system is being renovated at a cost of $32,000 and the authority is taking bids for the installation of a shell for the stage. Both should be ready by April.

1-Niter in Red Bank, N.J. As Pilot Test for Legit

Dick Weaver, in an expansion of his activities in the presentation field, is handling a pilot play series to be launched tomorrow night (Thurs.) in Red Bank, N.J., by the Monmouth Arts Foundation. The opener, booked for a one-nite stand at the 1,615-seat Carlton Theatre, a film house, will be the bus-and-truck company of "A Thousand Clowns," starring John Ireland.

A second entry, scheduled for mid-March, will be the motorized edition of "A Man for All Seasons" with Robert Harris in the leading role. The response to the two plays will determine whether another series of possibly four legit presentations will be undertaken for next season. Contrary to its regular policy in connection with musical events, the foundation is offering the plays on a reserved seat basis.

Weaver has been involved in similar activities in Kingston and Poughkeepsie, N.Y., as well as Northampton, Mass.

Indict the Becks In Off-B'way Tax Delinquency Case

Julian Beck and his wife, Judith Malina, directors of the Living Theatre, N.Y., which was closed last Oct. 17 by the Internal Revenue Service, were indicted last week in Manhattan by a Federal grand jury for impeding IRS agents in their padlocking of the theatre. The Becks were also charged with "rescuing" theatre property that had been seized by the IRS in lieu of $28.435 in unpaid Federal tax.

Beck was president-treasurer of Living Theatre Productions Inc., and his wife was vice-president-secretary. Their firm was presenting "The Brig" when the Living Theatre was padlocked by the IRS agents. (The production has since been moved to the Midway Theatre, N.Y.) It was explained by assistant U.S. Attorney Peter K. Leisure that the $28,435 rap against the theatre did not include Federal income taxes, since the corporation qualified in 1960 as a tax-exempt educational organization.

The figure, he says, involves unpaid admission excise taxes collected by the corporation from persons attending the performances and unpaid employment withholding and unemployment insurance taxes totaling more than $20,000. U.S. Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau said that prior to the seizure of the corporation's property the IRS, during the period from Jan. 1, 1962, to last Oct. 17, made numerous attempts to settle the matter by conducting 22 conferences and 55 telephone conversations with Beck.

Leisure declared that after the IRS agents seized the theatre, Beck and others refused to vacate the premises peaceably, and sit-in demonstrations inside the building and picketing demonstrations

Reconstructed 'Wall' Due For Washington Showing

A revised version of Millard Lampell's adaptation of John Hersey's novel, "The Wall," opens tonight (Wed.) at the Arena Stage, Washington. The original version of play was produced unsuccessfully on Broadway a few seasons ago.

The presentation, slated to continue through Feb. 23, has been directed by Edwin Sherin. The cast is headed by Anthony Zerbe, Joanna Merlin and Lou Gilbert. Also featured in the production are George Ebelling, Ray Reinhardt, Jeanne Paynter, Rene Auberjonois, Joan Van Ark and Jonathan Farwell.

Sets, lighting and costumes were designed, respectively, by Vincent Piacentini Jr., Leo Gallenstein and Marianna Elliott.

Gordon Craig—Prez

London, Jan. 28.

Edward Gordon Craig, the son of Ellen Terry, has been named president of the Mermaid Theatre Trust at a party Jan. 16 celebrating his 92d birthday.

Announcing that Craig had agreed to become the Trust's first prexy, the Mermaid founder, Bernard Miles, said they had now reached the point where it was felt they could ask, without being impertinent, "that this great old man of the theatre—actor producer, designer, writer — should allow us to put his name at the head of our role of honor."

B'way Turning To Sunday Schedule

The list of Broadway productions giving Sunday performances is growing. The longrunning "Mary, Mary" is the latest to announce a switch to Sabbath showings, starting March 1. The planned "Mary" move will follow a somewhat similar step by "Here's Love," which will play matinees only on Sundays starting Feb. 9. In the case of "Mary," both afternoon and evening performances will be given Sundays.

There were four Main Stem presentations giving regular showings last Sunday (26), including "Beyond the Fringe," "Enter Laughing," "Oliver" and "Stop the World—I Want to Get Off." "Enter" and "Oliver" give matinee performances only on Sundays, but "World," which exits Broadway next Saturday (1) for a road trek, has been playing Sunday afternoon and evening performances recently. "Fringe" also adheres to a two-a-day Sabbath schedule.

Although Sunday performances are routine off-Broadway, the employment of that same practice on the Main Stem is generally regarded as evidence of waning business for the shows involved. It's standard for a presentation to drop Monday evening performances when a switch to Sunday matinees is made, and when Sunday evening performances are also involved they're usually given in lieu of Wednesday matinees.

Certain shows, such as "Oliver" and "Here's Love," have a kiddie appeal and the substitution of Sunday matinees for Monday evening performances is one way to broaden the opportunity for youngsters to attend.

ENGLISH STAGE GROUP GETS QUEEN'S, LONDON

London, Jan. 28.

When the Royal Court Theatre closes in mid-March for reconstruction, the English Stage Co. will move to the Queen's Theatre. It plans to be back in its own home in Sloane Square in September, however.

The company will open March 12 at the Queen's, with Ann Jellicoe's translation of Anton Chekhov's "The Seagull," presented in partnership with Tennant Productions and Lewenstein Delfont Productions. The cast will be headed by Peggy Ashcroft, with Ann Beach, George Devine, Mark Dignam, Peter Finch, Vanessa Redgrave and Paul Rogers.

That will be followed by Bertolt Brecht's "Saint Joan of the Stockyards," in a version of A. R. and Charlotte Llyod, with Miss Redgrave in the title role. Both productions will be staged by Tony Richardson. There will also be a third play by an English Stage Co. dramatist, starring Miss Redgrave.

The English Stage Co. slate for the next 18 months also includes two new full-length plays by John Osborne.

Prepare Musical 'Kitty' For West End in April

London, Jan. 28.

Donald Albery is readying a new musical, "Kitty," to reach the West End in April. The show's book and lyrics are by Bob Grant and the music is by Laurie Holloway.

The 17 numbers from the show are being published by Mediant Music, the new pubbery set up by Eddie Rogers.

National Repertory Tour Getting Good Audience Reaction, So-So B.O.; Cancel Bookings for 4 Locations

By HAROLD M. BONE

New Haven, Jan. 28.

At approximately the halfway mark of the National Repertory Theatre's 1963-64 Coast-to-Coast tour, the inventory is sound, both on an attendance basis and from an appreciation standopint. Grosses have been moderate, but the routine reaction has been a consistent build from the opening to closing of each engagement. The critical reaction has been favorable, ranging from the enthusiastic to the ecstatic.

The tour is pointing up the fact that to be topnotch, a rep troupe must be good not only in actually presenting productions but also in educating the public to accept this form of live entertainment. The latter feat is being accomplished through after-performance discussions, backstage visits, direct contacts with the players, etc. This educational program is especially effective with younger audiences, many of whom are having their first exposure to legit.

The tour opened Oct. 5 in Greensboro, N. C., after a two-week period of rehearsals as artists in residence at Univ. of North Carolina. The preliminary period included seminars, observation opportunities and lectures on all branches of legit production, with drama students and faculty in on all proceedings.

This inside disclosure pattern was followed in other cities enroute, particularly where school groups were accommodated. The latter, comprising a fair representation of the new generation of

Jane Powell Tours Show As Break-in for B'way

Chicago, Jan. 28.

Jane Powell this week started a tour of one-niters to break in her revue, "Just Twenty—Plus Me," which supposedly has Broadway aspirations. Featured with the singer is comic Bob Melvin and the Top Twenty, a singing and dancing group that had had regular exposure on the Tennessee Ernie Ford tv show.

The presentation is understood to be built around the act Miss Powell recently presented in Las Vegas, with the emphasis of production numbers. It's being presented by James Fitzgerald, who was initiated as a producer with "The Wonderful World of Music" at the Seattle World's Fair two years ago. Miss Powell co-starred in that show with Vic Damone and the Stan Kenton orch.

Fitzgerald is also packaging a tv special in which Miss Powell will star.

Princeton Drew Record 114G For McCarter Season

The McCarter Theatre, Princeton, N. J., grossed a record $114,000 for its 12-week fall season ending last Dec. 31. According to Arthur Lithgow, executive director of the theatre, the gross represents a gain of 11% over the 1962 fall take.

The 88 separate events and an overall attendance for those of 51,000 were also both records for the McCarter, Lithgow reports. The theatre is now in its fourth season of year-round operation under the guidance of Princeton Univ. The gross income represents receipts from 21 regular performances by the resident professional repertory company, plus school matinees, assorted special bookings, and rentals to various university, civic and community groups.

McCarter officials emphasize, however, that the McCarter project, officially dubbed a "Regional Center for the Performing Arts," still operates at a sizable annual deficit met each year by the university itself.

Name Rise Stevens Exec For Met Touring Troupe

Rise Stevens and Michael Manuel will be joint general managers of the Metropolitan Opera National Co. This unit will travel 34 weeks in the autumn of 1965, with a tie to main Met in New York and the John F. Kennedy Center of Washington.

Miss Stevens joined the Metropolitan as a leading mezzo-soprano the season of 1938-39. She will also continue recitals.

Manuel, for eight years on the staff of Covent Garden, joined the Metropolitan as executive stage manager in the season 1957-'58 after having toured the United States extensively with the Royal Ballet.

Japanese Reps Studying American Theatre Setup

Washington, Jan. 28.

Five Japanese legit representatives have begun a two-month study tour of U.S. theatre. The group, under State Dept. sponsorship, saw the performance by Helen Hayes in "Good Morning Miss Dove" at Catholic Univ. before heading for New York yesterday (Mon.). They will spend a month in Gotham.

Members of the group are actor Koshiro Matsumota, Kumo troupe players Shigeru Koyama and his wife Tomoko Fumino, Shiki troupe actor Hiroshi Mizushima and drama lecturer Tadishi Matsubara.

Performing Arts Setup Jumps During 1963-64 Under N.Y. State Council

The N. Y. State Council on the Arts issued a report last week on its four years of operation. Summarized were the group's activities relating to theatre, opera, dance, concert, exhibitions and architecture.

In the area of the performing arts, it was disclosed that the number of attractions made available to communities throughout the state with council support has grown from 92 performances by four companies in 46 communities at the start to 224 performances by 57 professional companies in 88 communities during the current semester.

The performing arts touring program cost the council $330,000 in direct support for its initial season, as compared to $166,800 for the '63-'64 session under a new setup of partial council support whereby the major portion of the financial burden and all the organizational talent comes from the local sponsors in the communities in which the touring entries play. For the 1963-64 season, the legit schedule comprised 30 performances in 22 cities by nine different theatrical companies at a cost to the council of $20,700.

In the area of children's theatre for the current semester ending next March 31, a council allotment of $5,400 covers 31 performances in 18 communities by three performing groups. Opera activity for the 1963-64 period takes in 25 performances in 18 communities by four companies at a cost to the council of $49,700. During the same time span, the dance concert sked covers 47 performances by 20 dance companies in 34 communities at a cost to the Council of $32,800.

The council's support of concerts this season totals $58,200 for 91 performances in 60 communities. The '63-'64 budget for all aspects of the council's operation including staff, $49,885; technical assistance, $20,000; and maintenance and operation, $51,680, totals $534,219. The total budget in 1961 was $450,000. That includes $50,000 for salaries, printing, travel, as well as maintenance and operation.

The council established in 1960 by an act of the State Legislature, will be represented by an art exhibition at the State Pavilion of the World's Fair.

Off-Broadway Reviews

A Lovely Light

Jeff Britton presentation, by arrangement with Norma Millay, of a dramatization of the poems and letters of Edna St. Vincent Millay, adapted by Dorothy Stickney. Staged by Howard Lindsay; set and lighting, Anders Meyer; gown, Helene Pons. Stars Dorothy Stickney. Opened Jan. 20, '64, at the Mayfair Theatre, N. Y.; $4.50 top weeknights, $5.50 weekends.

Dorothy Stickney's tribute to Edna St. Vincent Millay is low-key theatre, but it makes a pleasant, engrossing evening. Reading from the letters and poems of Miss Millay, Miss Stickney conveys the charm, warmth, and wonderful sense of humor of the poetess, and makes her seem, indeed, to have shed "A Lovely Light."

The program, staged by Howard Lindsay, was presented at the Hudson Theatre, on Broadway for two weeks in 1960. The chances of an extended run this year at the Midway Theatre seem doubtful, but Miss Stickney's performance is skillful and gracious, and her obvious affection for Miss Millay as a poet and as a person is infectious. Kenn.

Funnyhouse of a Negro

Theatre 1964 (Richard Barr, Clinton Wilder, Edward Albee) presentation of a drama by Adrienne Kennedy. Staged by Michael Kahn; sets and lighting, William Ritman; costumes, Wilia Kim. Opened Jan. '64, at the East End Theatre, N.Y.C.; $3.00 top.

Cast: Billie Allen, Cynthia Belgrave, Norman Bush, Leonard Frey, Ellen Holly, Leslie Rivers, Ruth Volner, Gus Williams.

The nightmares and fantasies of a tormented young woman are vividly, fascinatingly depicted in "Funnyhouse of a Negro," a first effort by a talented new playwright, Adrienne Kennedy.

The central character in this macabre but meaningful piece is a colored girl who is unable to cope with the fact of her race. Rejected by her light-skinned mother, she in turn rejects her dark-skinned father, and is wracked by guilt because of it.

The girl, effectively portrayed by Billie Allen, is surrounded in the play by actors embodying her fears, dreams, and guilts. Miss Kennedy makes good use of symbolism, and her device of repetition heightens the tension. The play builds to a powerful climax, and conveys the anguish of the heroine.

Capable performances are delivered by Ellen Holly, Cynthia Belgrave, Gus Williams, Leonard Frey, Ruth Volner and the others, under the fine direction of Michael Kahn. The William Ritman sets and the costumes by Willa Kim seem ideal.

"Funnyhouse of a Negro" is only 45 minutes long, but it ranks as one of the most interesting off-Broadway shows of the season. Kenn.

Cabin in the Sky

Arthur Whitelaw & Leo Friedman revival of a musical comedy in two acts, with book by Lynn Root, music by Vernon Duke, and lyrics by John Latouche. Staged by Brian Shaw; musical staging and choreography by Pepe DeChazza; sets and costumes, Alan Kimmel; musical direction, arrangements and orchestrations, Eric W. Knight; vocal direction and additional dance arrangements, Bobby Banks; lighting, Daniel Forer. Opened Jan. 21, '64, at the Greenwich Mews, N. Y.; $4.50 top weeknights, $5.90 weekends.

Cast: Rosetta Le Noire, Ketty Lester, Tony Middleton, Sam Laws, Bernard Johnson, Harold Pierson, Morton Winston, D'urville Martin, Helen Ferguson, Joseph Attles, Albert Popwell, Vernon Washington, Jeannet Rollins de Ramos, Cleo Quitman.

"Cabin in the Sky" shows its age, but there's enough entertainment in the revival of the 1940 musical to provide an enjoyable evening.

The fantasy plot about a battle between agents of the Lord and the Devil for the soul of an ingratiating but easily-tempted "Little Joe," isn't exactly enthralling. But the Vernon Duke score, highlighted by the always beguiling "Taking a Chance on Love," is delightful, and the leading players are fine.

As Petunia, the long-suffering but hopeful wife, Rosetta Le Noire is warm and appealing, and she does a good job with the above tune. Her switch in the second act to a gowned, bejewelled temptress is a pleasure to behold. Tony Middleton is ideal as the hero, giving a sympathetic, amusing portrayal. He and Miss Le Noire are excellent in their duets, "Cabin in the Sky" and "Not a Care in the World."

The sensuous temptress is played by Ketty Lester, who has the figure, voice and zest for the role. She dances "Do What You Want to Do" torridly, and socks across "Love Me Tomorrow" with Middleton.

Okay support is offered by Sam Laws, as the Lord's General, but Bernard Johnson is excessively lively as Lucifer Jr. The sets and costumes by Alan Kimmel are attractive.

Brian Shaw's direction is uneven, but for the most part effective, and the musical numbers staged by Pene De Chazza are energetic.

This revival of "Cabin in the Sky" isn't subtle, and sometimes it's too loud. The lyrics often have very little to do with the subject at hand, and the unabashedly sentimental plot lacks suspense. But the musical numbers and the good cast make the show diverting. Kenn.

Jerico-Jim Crow

Greenwich Players Inc., in coordination with the Congress of Racial Equality, the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People and Students Non-Violence Coordinating Committee, presentation of Stella Holt's production of a program of songs and vignettes by Langston Hughes. Staged by Alvin Ailey and William Hairston; music director, Hugh Porter; lighting and costumes, Ves Harper; associate producer, Frances Drucker; percussionist, Sheep Sheperd; organist, Marion Franklin. Opened Jan. 12, '64, at The Sanctuary of the Village Presbyterian Church and Brotherhood Synagogue, N. Y.; $3 top.

Cast: Gilbert Price, Hilda Harris, Joseph Attles, Rosalie King, William ain, Dorothy Drake, Virginia Davis, Eleanor Howell, Dorothy Brazzle, Sylvia Terry, Vivian Moore, William Coleman, Marquette Miller, Bob Broadway, Brock Williams, Johnny Riddley, Moses Brown, Lamont Washington.

Rousing renditions of some 20 gospel and folk songs make "Jericho-Jim Crow" happy entertainment. A talented group of singers, headed by the uninhibited Dorothy Drake, make the rafters of the Village Presbyterian Church resound with their irresistible music.

Alternating with the songs are dramatic segments retelling the history of segregation in America, from the days of slavery to the lunch-counter sit-ins of today. The acting of these episodes is just fair, and many of the attempts at humor fall flat. But there are some touching moments, and whenever the proceedings lag, the singers take over.

Standout numbers are the vibrant "Ezekial Saw the Wheel," and Langston Hughes' "Freedom Land," beautifully sung by young Gilbert Price. The staging of the production, by Alvin Ailey and William Hairston, is highly effective.

Fair Game For Lovers

Miami, Jan. 24.

Zev Bufman & Stan Seiden, in association with Herbert Swope Jr., by arrangement with Charles Rappaport, presentation of a comedy in two acts (nine scenes) by Richard Dougherty. Staged by Paul Shyre; scenery, lighting and costumes, Ralph Alswang; associate producer, Teresa Calabrese. Stars Leo Genn, Forrest Tucker, Maggi Hayes; features John Alda, Jane Hoffman, Ralph Bell, Sylvia Gassel, Pegeen Lawrence. Opened Jan. 14, '64, at the Coconut Grove Playhouse, Miami.

Audience and local critics were equally enthusiastic over this, the second of Bufman & Seiden's 1964 tryouts at the Grove. "Fair Game" shows considerable promise of reasonable Broadway tenure. It is already a fairly tight show, although author and director are still making minor changes.

Richard Dougherty's bright lines follow, one after the other, in such rapid succession that no one notices an all but total absence of plot. Suspense is sustained as the audience wonders just how Leo Genn is going to clap the lid on the Pandora's box of inverted cliches which have been escaping from it during all nine scenes.

What tracery of story line is discernible deals with the unconventional plans of two young lovers to trap the girl's wealthy dad into helping them financially while the boy is still in college. With a lesser cast, this bit of fluff might not alight, but Genn's handling of the sophisticated father, veteran of a number of love affairs and divorces, is a masterpiece of deft underplaying. He is not to be stampeded into sympathy with what he regards as puppy love.

Maggi Hayes makes the most of her small role as papa's current femme interest. Forrest Tucker is a hearty, somewhat Western, man of the world. John Alda scores heavily as the reluctant co-plotter. (Miss Hayes is the wife of coproducer Herb Swope Jr.)

Pegeen Lawrence, a native of Palm Beach, makes her American pro debut, showing the training she had both here and abroad. She has youthful charm and beauty and handles her lines with unexpected expertise in a role which might have been tailored for her.

Also on hand to complete the competent cast are Jane Hoffman and Ralph Bell, who convincingly play the boy's father and mother, and Sylvia Gassel who contributes her bit as the very hep maid.

Paul Shyre's direction is well paced and sure, and Ralph Alswang's window dressing provides the right background for the comedy. Culm.

Need Open Door Policy

On the evidence of one of last week's previews of "After the Fall," it's a tossup whether the N.Y. Fire Commissioner or the Surgeon General would be more disturbed during intermission at the Lincoln Center's new Anta Washington Square Theatre. Four interior exits into the narrow lobby, and only one exit to the street, combine to bring smoking traffic to a jampacked standstill. Ushers' pleas for "smoking outside, please" are completely useless.

The curiously limited facilities for entering and leaving the theatre work fairly well going in, as the funnel-like entrance is in reverse and opens into the auditorium. But all audience has to leave by the narrow spout. Use of the side fire exit doors would seem to be the solution, as at most Broadway theatres. At the SRO preview, however, these exits weren't made available, so that par from seat to sidewalk after the show was a standstill 20 minutes.

This is a twist on the usual criticism of new theatres. In the trade, at least, it's said that the tendency is toward plush auditorium and lobby facilities, with little consideration for backstage needs. That's been corrected at Anta Washington Square, but there's still something to be said for making it easy for the audience to get in and out.

Unless this situation is changed, repeat customers (there will be many because of successful subscription sales) may contemplate heading for the door before the final curtain. How the actors will love THAT!

Opera Review

The Last Savage

Opera in three acts. Music, score & staging by Gian Carlo Menotti. English translation, George Meade; sets & costumes, Beni Montresor; conductor, Thomas Schippers. U. S. premiere Jan. 23, '64 at Metropolitan Opera, N. Y.

The Maharaja ..... Ezio Flagello
The Maharani ..... Lili Chookasian
Kodanda ..... Nicolai Gedda
Mr. Scattergood ..... Morley Meredith
Kitty ..... Roberta Peters
Abdul ..... George London
Sardulla ..... Teresa Stratas

Originally commissioned and presented by the state opera officials of Paris, "The Last Savage" may be the last gasp in hybrid entertainment called by the great name of opera. There is a fashionable cocktail party scene in the second act which is right out of Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman in the 1940s. It musters high style absurdities, fake Bohemians, mad press photographers and—rather offensively—Roman Catholic, Greek Orthodox, Protestant and Jewish clerics, apparently very much at home, as Menotti sees them, among the phonies of the age.

The satire is broad. Or spell it hokum. It could easily fall on its face. Almost any opera company would be well advised to shun this work unless Menotti stages it and the sets and costumes are by Beni Montresor.

It is the sheer showmanship of the multi-talented Menotti which makes the final verdict this: "Last Savage" is a good deal of fun despite some of the lyrical gags rhyming over-clover, Kitty-pretty, well-hell, daddy-laddie, despite those Minsky swish tailors, despite the Bert Lahr-like love scene. Yes, all this at the stately Met!

The action opens in a remote principality of India, beautifully imagined scenically. The staging is daring indeed for opera, involving tongue-in-cheek playacting of Hindu servants who set and strike scenes. A series of spotlights enhances the suggestion of a film studio in which the accoutrements of illusion are arranged before the beholder's eyes. All of this stagecraft, the richness of the costumes and the fact that the work was meticulously rehearsed, unlike so many operatic productions, help account for the fast pace.

Menotti uses many sly touches of spoofing, stagey moans by the harassed "wild man" who becomes the American girl anthropologist's pet display back in Chicago, double-talk by Hindu wisemen, double-entendre when the primitive is introduced to .merican whiskey and necking. To get away with what he does get away with, Menotti has got to be a man of the theatre. He is. Where he stands as a composer after this score of well-orchestrated borrowings from his betters raises a question about which the town's dinner tables will be cackling this spring. Call him an updated Sigmund Romberg.

There is not much to remark as to the singing. There is little in the way of exciting set pieces, though there are a few half-serious uptop runs for Roberta Peters as the girl, a vocal job or two for George London whose real achievement is in handling the could-be-fatuous role of the "wild man" with impressive stage presence. He came within an inch of taking a nasty fall when his bamboo prison cage almost fell off the raised platform.

Teresa Stratas is sprightly and very helpful as the second love interest. Ditto Nicolai Gedda, the Swedish tenor whose fine English diction has won him a number of roles in that language at the Met. Morley Meredith handles effectively a spoof on modern living. It could be lifted bodily and transferred to a number of Broadway musicals of the moment.

Menotti is replete in this libretto, though written in his native Italian and translated by George Meade, with topical allusions to inflation, taxation, sanitation a la Americaine. The plot swings on the efforts of an American magnate and a Hindu maharaja to arrange a wedding of their heirs to help preserve their fortunes against the tax siphoning of their respective governments.

Menotti changes pace and milieu, both, between the opening in India, with its tastier subtleties and charm, and the shift to rambunctious "smart" Chicago with the outlandish mixture of chi-chi types. Happily it moves along briskly, disarming the harsher criticisms which less adroit staging and conducting (Thomas Schippers) might well have invited.

There are 26 "parts" programmed. But some of them don't sing or speak, just pose as symbols of something Menotti doesn't like in modern society. Suffice that Menotti himself is reaching the point where he could be spoofed. Meanwhile, he retains great joie de vivre. Nothing like this fascinatingly varied fare has ever been seen, it may be guessed, in an opera house. Land.

Met Opera Touts a 'Hit'

Believed first time for an opera company to take display space to tout a single work, the Met hit the N.Y. Times and Herald-Trib with 400-line ads yesterday (Tues.) will repeat in Sunday editions.

Purpose: to offset N.Y. Times' sour review of Gian Carlo Menotti's "The Last Savage" by spotlighting all other notices, notably the Trib's Allan Rich.

N.Y.: 'Dolly,' 'Dylan,' 'Park,' 'Fall' SRO; 'Girl' 68G, 'Shade' 53G, 'Chinese' 25G, 'Virginia' $19,807, 'Marathon' $17,079

Business improved last week for most Broadway shows. An expanding sellout list comprised "Barefoot in the Park," "Dylan," "Hello Dolly" and the Lincoln Center Repertory Theatre production of "After the Fall" on its opening week of four regular performances and three previews.

"Dolly" has been drawing lengthy lines of ticket-buyers, who have been under surveillance by state investigators. They're on the staff of N.Y. Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz whose office has been studying legit business practices. The agents, supplied with miniature cameras and subpoena forms, are seeking those who might be purchasing blocks of seats for blackmarket resale. Several individuals have thus far been subpoenaed.

Among the shows registering jumps of at least $6,000 last week were "Beyond the Fringe," "Luther" and "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." The latter closed Saturday (25). "Fringe" has been making a strong comeback since the recent unveiling to critical approval of a partially new edition of the revue. The annual motorboat show at the Coliseum, N.Y., is figured to have contributed to an overall upbeat in business around town not only for the theatre, but also for restaurants and other enterprises.

Estimates for Last Week

Keys: C (Comedy), D (Drama), CD (Comedy-Drama), R (Revue), MC (Musical-Comedy), MD (Musical-Drama), O (Opera), OP (Operetta), Rep. (Repertory), DR (Dramatic Reading).

1964 Prospects For Anzac Legit

By HARALD H. BOWDEN
(J. C. Williamson Theatres)

Sydney, Jan. 28.

The year 1963, over-all, was quite good here despite the failure of several New York successes, which failed to attract in Australia. Most notable of these was "Carnival." Another Broadway success to flounder in Australia was "Shot in the Dark." Also two Australian plays "The Season at Sarsaparilla" and "Who'll Come A-Waltzing".

Solo artists proved highly successful. Marcel Marceau hit the jackpot in every State of the Commonwealth and New Zealand, while Victor Borge on a return season proved a big draw. English spoof, Joyce Grenfell, filled theatres to capacity and late in the year Sir John Gielgud in his "Shakespearean Readings" repeated here his success achieved in other parts of the World.

English Star, Googie Withers, was a hit in "Woman in a Dressing Gown" and later proceeded to London to join Sir Alec Guinness in "Exit the King." She is married to John McCallum, one of the Managing Directors of the Williamson Firm and is settled in Australia, their three children being educated in Melbourne.

Clicks of 1963 season being carried over are "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" and "Mary, Mary." We finally parted with "My Fair Lady" after a run of three-and-a-half years. Next we view the Moss Hart Lerner & Loewe "Camelot" which is costing Williamson the equivalent of over $200,000.

Prospective contender for capacity business everywhere in Australia in 1964, following on a run of six months in Melbourne is "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" with the American Principals Len Gochman ('Finc'), Edwin Steffe ('Biggley'), Jay Gerber ('Frump') and Betty McGuire ('Hedy').

Shakespearean Anniversary Year will see the innovation of the Trust's production of "Henry V" in a large canvas theatre and played in the round, and later in the year Googie Withers and her Company will present "Shakespeare and Womankind," feminine roles derived from Works of the Bard.

Garnet Carroll has a busy year with "Carousel" and "No Strings" as his big musicals for 1964. With the Tivoli Theatres continuing their successful "Black and White Revue," they have "Stop the World" as their highlight for the coming year.

Editor, VARIETY:

For the record, be sure to add to Edwin Bronner's "Great Curtain Lines" (cf VARIETY's 58th Anni Edition) William Saroyan's unparalleled tribute to the theatre at the final dim-out of "The Cave Dwellers":

Dennis King (placing working light): "Farewell then womb, cave, hiding place. Home, church, forum, Congress, world, theatre, A long and loving farewell . . Farewell—and Welcome."

Road: 'Sound,' 'Funny' Set Records; 'Rugantino' $57,846, 'Sammy' $55,983, 'Man' 47G, 'Foxy' 41G, 'Fringe' $37,132

House records were established on the road last week by "Funny Girl" in Boston and "Sound of Music" in Portland. "Girl," which broke the record it set at the Hub's Shubert Theatre the previous frame, has added two new songs, one a comedy production number. The Broadway-bound musical, co-starring Barbra Streisand and Sydney Chaplin, has also inserted new scenes in the second act.

In the doctoring area, "Rugantino," warming up for New York in Toronto, has clipped 30 minutes off its running time without the elimination of any scenes. Improvements have also been made in the overhead English titles for the Italian import. Other shows playing break-in dates last week were "Any Wednesday," which got off to an okay start in New Haven; "Foxy," which registered improvement in the second week of a Detroit stand, and "What Makes Sammy Run," which did well in its fifth week in Philadelphia.

Estimates for Last Week

Parentheic designations for out-of-town shows are the same as for Broadway, except that hyphenated T with show classification indicates tryout, RS indicates road show and BT indicates bus-and-truck production. Also, prices on touring shows include 10% Federal tax and local tax, if any, but as or Broadway grosses are net; i.e., exclusive of taxes. Engagements are for single week unless otherwise noted.

Where subscription is mentioned, the gross is the net after the deductions of commissions. Grosses for split weeks are projected when shows play guaranteed dates

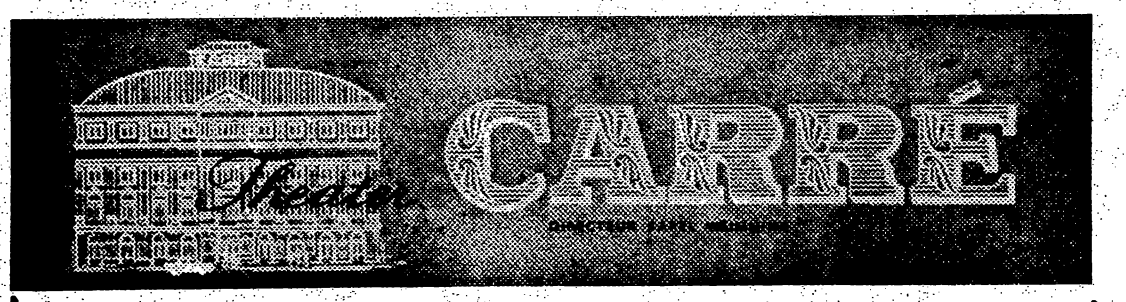
TOON HERMANS' ONE MAN SHOW

'till 2nd of February in the CARRE THEATRE, Amsterdam



AMSTERDAM C., the 3rd of January '64
AMSTEL 115-125

If the history of the Carre, the oldest and largest theatre in Amsterdam, were to be written, Toon Hermans' name would stand out in gold letters.
All of Amsterdam has fought to obtain tickets in the 2050 seat theatre during his run there.
Night after night -- Sold out! A hundred guilders offered for a pair of 10 guilder seats!
Unfortunately Toon Hermans and his fabulous One Man Show- 3½ hours of original comedy monologues and songs - can only be at the Carré for 2 months. We wish his run could be extended for another 6 months, but, as usual, he is in demand elsewhere.
However, no matter where he travels in the world, we, the directors of the Carré, still retain memories of his unforgettable performances.

Come back to Carré soon, Toon!

U.S. Court Rules Ice & Kickbacks Not Deductible

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

The payers of ice and kickbacks have sad tax news awaiting them. The Tax Court of the United States has just ruled that payments of that sort are not deductible.

The point came up in the case of United Draperies Inc. It made payments to certain employees of customers on an agreed percentage basis. The company argued that these payments were necessary to get business, and compensated the individuals for their services.

The court held that whatever services were rendered by the individuals were due their employer, not the supplier. Furthermore, there is a long-standing policy of the Federal Trade Commission prohibiting secret payments to a customer's employees.

At the hearings conducted by State Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz, there was testimony about payments of kickbacks or rebates to a producer and to some members of the staff of producers. The payments of "ice" to theatre owners and their people were likewise mentioned. Under this decision the payments would not be tax deductible. On the other hand, the recipients do have to report the amounts as taxable income.

The citation of the United Draperies case is 41 T.C. No. 45, decided Jan. 6, 1964.

MIDWEST MGR. GROUP PLANS BOOKING SETUP

Columbus, O., Jan. 28.

The formation of the Midwest Performing Arts Conference was announced following a meeting of two-score theatre and auditorium managers here to better coordinate bookings in the midwest area and to receive a greater share of top live entertainment. The motion for adoption of the name was made by Donald Horton, manager of Mershon Auditorium on the Ohio State Univ. campus. Herb Segal, manager of the Brown, Louisville, Ky., was presiding officer.

The chief question voiced at the meeting was, "How can we keep our theatres lighted more constantly?" Others included, "How can we obtain better entertainment at prices we can afford?" and "How can we better co-ordinate bookings for companies that would normally play our cities anyway?"

Scheduling was granted to be a key problem. Split-week bookings currently have touring companies obliged to jump helter-skelter about the midwest. Some managements cast a jaundiced eye on a road trip, primarily for this reason. It simply costs too much money.

We hope to create the market, rather than be victims of it," said Segal. "Better communication between producers and managers and between managers themselves and some sort of master schedule blanketing a number of midwest cities will help solve our problems," he added.

Mutual savings to producer and manager might serve as an inducement for more touring companies, it was pointed out. Spilt weeks booked more solidly at lesser distances between stops would be of great advantage to everyone, it was also agreed.

It was hoped that some producers, if advised far enough in advance of MPAC policies, might work up special productions designed to play a guaranteed circuit.

Most of those attending were managers of college and university auditoriums. The next meeting, to be devoted to cementing plans, is scheduled for Feb. 26 at the Brown Theatre, Louisville.

National Repertory Theatre Tour

playgoers, was markedly in attendance at matinees, the majority of which were SRO or close to it.

Other stands included Louisville, Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, Washington, Boston, and the Jan. 13-18 New Haven stopover. The stays varied from three days in Louisville to four weeks in Boston.

The plays being presented are "The Seagull," "Ring Round the Moon" and "The Crucible." Audience enthusiasm has fluctuated in different localities, with "Seagull" being the top draw in Boston and Philly, and "Crucible" getting the heavy nod in Cleveland and Detroit. Among the school set, most ducats went for "Crucible." "Ring" seemed to enjoy a fairly consistent pull all around.

An indication of the substantial number of playgoers who bought the full package came in Philadelphia on the fateful Nov. 22, when the final performance of "Seagull" was cancelled. The box-office offered to switch tickets to Saturday's closing performances of "Ring" and "Crucible," but 70% of stubholders asked for refunds, saying they had already seen the other two plays.

The roster of the 1963-64 company includes costars Eva Le Gallienne, Farley Granger, Denholm Elliott and Anne Meacham, and supporting players Thayer David, Kelly Jean Peters, Jerome Raphel, Betty Sinclair, Barbara Stanton, George Turner, G. Wood, Ben Yaffee, Fred Ainsworth, Clinton Anderson, Osceola Archer, Richard Bowler, Helen Page Camp, Susan Carr, Pamela Gruen and Mary Hara.

The directors are Eva Le Gallienne, Jack Sydow; producers, Michael Dewell, Frances Ann Dougherty; set designer, Peter Larkin; costume designer, Alvin Colt; lighting designer, Tharon Musser; musical director, Dean Fuller.

As a critical aside on the local engagement, the performances and presentation were all excellent, hitting a high standard from every aspect. There was no stinting on physical appurtenances and the well-balanced troupe had its talents neatly distributed over the three plays.

The choice of scripts is a happy decision. The stark drama of the Arthur Miller "Crucible," the light - hearted romanticism of Christopher Fry's version of Jean Anouilh's "Ring Round the Moon," and the stylized presentation of Eva Le Gallienne's new translation of the Chekhov "Seagull" constitute a memorable trio.

An interesting sidelight on the versatility of the cast came in discussion with the young generation playgoers, who had difficulty in reconciling a single player handling three different roles. In commenting on this subject, Miss Le Gallienne observed, "I think we finally convinced them that acting is an art, not merely the exploiting of one's own personality."

To quote the actress-translator-director again regarding the youthful playgoers, "When we started out, the actors were a bit irritated by the spontaneous 'ohs' and 'ahs' of these youngsters but now they love it. And incidentally, we learned that we had to give a true performance every time for them—they can spot a phony a lot faster than their elders can."

In keeping with its aim of higher standards and lower prices, the scale was cut locally to a $4 top, with top-shelf seats as low as $1.

The tour is operating in the red, but it claimed there's no question of its continuance. A program note customarily invites financial assistance to this non-profit organization, and in Philadelphia alone, several hundred contributions ranging from $5 to $500 were received.

The balance of the tour includes Cincinnati, this week, Indianapolis, Feb. 3-5; Bloomington, Feb. 6-8; Chicago, Feb. 10-29; St. Louis, March 2-21, and Dallas, March 27-29. A limited New York engagement is being considered.

Group Cancels Dates

The National Repertory Theatre, currently at the Shubert Theatre, Cincinnati, is cutting short its tour by seven and a half weeks. Dates in Denver, Los Angeles and San Francisco, originally scheduled for the period from March 31 to May 16, have been cancelled.

The road trek is now slated to end with a March 27-29 engagement at the Auditorium, Dallas. The company, which has also cancelled a March 23-25 booking at the Music Hall, Kansas City, will lay off then, instead.

in the street ensued for the next several days. Disturbances during this period, he said, necessitated the presence of some 20 policemen in the street to maintain order and 31 members of the Collection Division and 20 members of the Intelligence Division of the IRS to safeguard the seized property and personnel in the building.

Morgenthau claims that Beck and the others assembled in the building were repeatedly advised that they were violating the law by their actions. On Oct. 19, a performance of "Brig" was given in the theatre, using costumes and props that had been previously seized. However, no arrests were made until Oct. 20, when those still in the theatre were given a final opportunity to vacate the premises or be arrested. A total of 25 who remained were arrested, including Beck and his wife.

Leisure said that the maximum penalty on each of nine counts charging the Becks with impeding agents is three years and $5,000, and on two counts of "rescuing" seized property, two years and $500. Included in the indictment is the charge that the defendants encouraged unauthorized persons to enter the theatre building by shouting from a window, "Storm the barricades," and by lowering a ladder from a window to allow unauthorized persons admission into the building.

Beck has been quoted as arguing that the seizure of the theatre reflects Government interference with art. Other observers assert that actions as employed by the Becks give art, and particularly the theatre, a bad name. The defendants, Leisure said, are to plead the indictment at the U.S. Courthouse in Manhattan tomorrow (Thurs.).

The N.Y. Daily News editorialized, under the above caption, last week:

"To the surprise of many, the Senate Finance Committee voted for abolition of the 10% Federal tax on tickets to legitimate theatres, opera ,concerts and burlesque shows. The entertainment tax has long been complained of as a drag on show business in general.

"We're heartily in favor of Congress' writing this tax abolition into the final tax-cut bill—if the entertainment units to be benefitted will promise to pass the cut along to the public in the shape of ticket prices modestly reduced.

"This seems no more than fair."

2 More Show Biz Novels

Two novels of the theatre, both selling for $5.95, have appeared almost simultaneously. Of the two, Russell O'Neil's "The Devil's Profession" (Simon & Schuster) is better written, and contains the germ of a film play or a tv epic."

Basil Burwell's "A Fool in the Forest" (Macmillan), is purple prose, remembering summer theatre when Surrey and Mt. Kisco were strawhats most likely to gain attention from agents like Chamberlain Brown and Jane Broder. Burwell, according to the jacket on his tome, is writing a book on acting with Uta Hagen, and teaches drama at Cherry Lawn School, Darien, Conn. These achievements have not brought about a sound theatre novel, but rather, a narrative that seems to stem from the author's personal journals of nostalgic summers on the silo circuit.

O'Neill, also a footlight pro, writes more soundly. His characters, unlike Burwell's, are dimensional, valid. His disillusion with theatre belongs to a young man who will learn better. Burwell pastes his impressions on tattered valentines. The truth is that neither writer has achieved what Fitzroy K. Davis accomplished in the 1940s with his novel, "Quicksilver" (Macmillan), still the best fiction of the American theatre in our time. Rodo.

in line with the Bryant recommendation, FCC said.

Reviewing last year's action, FCC letters from listeners and viewers almost doubled and the readings were mixed.

FCC said it received 20,000 missives about industry fare and FCC regulation last year compared to 12,000 previously.

Averring "a large volume" of mail was laudatory to stations and programs, Commission said the gripes were directed first against programming and second against commercials.

Of the unfavorable pennings, 42% were critical of programs while 29% were perturbed by overcommercialization, loud commercials and false and misleading advertising.

FCC pointed to "the public's growing awareness of the obligations of broadcasting licensees" as a reason for the heavier mail volume.

The letters "in turn brought about a substantial increase" in investigations and disciplinary action against stations, FCC said.

Commission described its past year's activity as an "effort to make broadcasters more conscious of their responsibilities and to enforce their compliance with its rules and regulations."

Mardi Gras

blowoff with general masking and numerous street pageants.

City fathers and the Chamber of Commerce estimate that visitor volume this year is expected to exceed 1963 by over 50%, and that the Mardi Gras will be a better than $5,500,000 binge. By Mardi Gras day more than two dozen parades will have rolled down Canal Street, the main stem. Not to mention 65 balls, each of which costs from $10,000 to $25,000 to stage.

'Every Man A King'

Some 30 years ago, the late Huey P. Long, the Louisiana Kingfish, proclaimed his political doctrine of "Every Man A King." The decades have passed and Long is only a memory, but any man can become a king day or night merely by forming or joining a Carnival krewe.

More and more monarchs seem to appear every year. The reason for this proliferation of royalty is the vast increase in the number of balls over the past five years, each with its own ruler and royal court of lovely ladies.

As for the queens, they are picked from the waves of debutantes and daughters of prominent Orleanians that roll forth seeking recognition at Carnival time.

To be sure, there's still only one Rex, King of Carnival and Lord of Misrule. He is the sovereign of all, and something special. His papier-mache floats meander among awesome thousands of subjects who swarm into Canal street costumed and masked begging for trinkest that are tossed by the float riders: beads, plastic and rubber toys, and gilded aluminum doubloons—altogether worth about $500,000.

Principal beneficiaries of the Carnival and Mardi Gras hoopla are the hotels, restaurants, night spots, souvenir and antique shops along Royal Street, shopping centres and theatres. Reservations are hard to make in such niteries as Seymour Weiss' plush Blue Room, where marquee names are on tap.

Stripperies Lure Crowds

The strip joints on garish, neon-lighted Bourbon Street are the mecca of crowds after sundown. All of the spots have embellished their bare flesh shows, with the strip expecting to do the biggest business since the Yuletide holiday season. Dixieland band spots, presided over by such names as Pete Fountain and Al Hirt, also are a magnet for French Quarter visitors.

Carnival is big business here. The bill is footed by the krewes, all private clubs with memberships of 100 or more. These social groups are formed specifically to stage a Carnival ball and some parade as well. The balls are colorful, spectacular and highly formal. A person may belong to as many krewes or organizations as his pocketbook can stand. Dues range from $50 to $250, but favors and incidentals run the cost much higher. Krewe members are voted on much the same as any lodge or fraternity.

Street parades, with from 15 to 20 floats, for example, cost as much as $50,000 for a single outing. The floats of the major krewes, like Rex, Comus, Proteus, Hermes, Babylon and Hermes, are spectacular affairs with animated figures and neon lights, and cost much more.

New Orleans is probably the only city in the U.S. whose Carnival groups will not accept commercial tieups for the street parades or balls. The only expense of the big Mardi Gras bash to the city government is the cost of decorating the business area and for the erection of viewing stands in front of city hall, where the parades pause long enough for the one-day monarchs to toast their queens, Mayor Victor H. Schiro and other city officials.

Schiro, incidentally, frequently joins the tv and radio commentators in describing the parades for stay-at-homes. He is a onetime radio spieler for WJBO.

"The Satan Bug" filming here, with John Sturges megging and producing for the Bros. Mirisch, expects to leave $200,000 in the area. Largest chunk, $60,000, went on construction of a science laboratory, complete with new roads and helicopter launching pad, used four days by the company. Site chosen was almost directly behind the Bing Crosby house. Production was slowed down last week when Joan Hackett developed sun poisoning and had to be replaced by Anne Francis. Scenes had to be shot over at Desert Air Hotel, in Palm Canyon, and at Pete Petitto place next to Crosbys.

Television In 1964-65

wrapped up and ready for delivery to the Madison Ave. agencies (details to be found elsewhere in tv section). Ditto NBC, with the eventuality of a "one third of a prime time network" status on its acquisition of MCA product (see separate story).

ABC: Front & Center

But for sheer fascination and almost cliffhanger suspense, it's the drastically revised ABC schedule and the promulgation of yet another round in the continuing saga of the hopes & frustrations of Leonard Goldenson & Co. that occupies front stage center in the evaluation of the '64-'65 story. For the ABC-TV struggle for reemergence and to bask once again in the program limelight; the "hope springs eternal" that keynotes the enthusiasms and determination of Goldenson, prexy Tom Moore and his program colleagues in their stubborn refusal to settle for cellar status, has invited some respect and admiration.

How wisely they have chosen and slotted is for the future to determine. For the moment it's the plotting and the counter-plotting that excites and intrigues.

At the moment the best known and most aggressively promoted schedule on Madison Ave. is that which has been all but finalized by Goldenson & Co. (though obviously subject to change depending on what CBS and NBC do). Of the 29 prime time programs in the '64-'65 selection, only five of the '63 fall premieres (out of 14) remain, whereas nine of the programs are inherited from the "old" ABC schedule of two or more years ago. Thus while "Outer Limits," "Fugitive," "Patty Duke," "Burke's Law" and "Arrest and Trial" are the only "new" ABC programs to meet the renewal test, ABC's formidable strength on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday derives from the older crop of "Combat," "McHale's Navy," "Ozzie & Harriet," "Flintstones," Donna Reed, "My Three Sons," "Wagon Train," "Ben Casey" and Lawrence Welk.

But while '64-'65 will thus have some carryover from previous seasons, it's expected that 60% of its prime time next season will carry programming other than what is scheduled in them today. While some of the changes trace to the switching of existing programming (such as "Wagon Train" to Friday at 7:30 and "Arrest and Trial" to Friday 9:30), practically all other changes represent new programming.

'Voyage' as Sun. Leadoff

Here's how schedule #1 is being exposed to the agencies:

On Sunday night 7:30 to 8:30 ABC offers "Voyage," a re-do of 20th's "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea" feature. At 8:30 the network plans to come "above water" but remain in the nautical vein with "Broadside," a distaff "McHale's Navy" starring Kathy Nolan and featuring World War II Waves. Consolidated Cigar has purchased an alternate half-hour.

At 9 Sundays ABC will probably follow the CBS example of last year by putting Walter Brennan opposite NBC's "Bonanza." But in his new entry Brennan sheds the overalls he wore in "Real McCoys" for the hand-tailored suits of "Tycoon," a situation comedy in which the character actor plays the chairman of the board of a giant corporation. Alcoa wants to buy it but wants to go Thursdays 9:30 (see separate story).

At 9:30-10:30 Sundays ABC is offering another movie remake out of 20th-Fox, "Twelve O'Clock High," dealing with a B-17 bomber group of the World War II 8th Air Force stationed in England. The 10:30 period, as at present, will be programmed by the local affiliates.

On Monday ABC will stay with "Outer Limits" 7:30 to 8:30. Despite its 24% share of audience, J. Walter Thompson is recommending that Liggett & Myers renew its minute per week because "Outer Limits" is a click with the teenagers.

Mickey Rooney Show

At 8:30 ABC plans to schedule "Mickey," starring Mickey Rooney and his son, Tim, a situation comedy (in the "Gestward Ho" motif) about a family which inherits a luxury resort hotel on the California Coast. "Mickey" is one of the new pilots from the ABC Selig Seligman-helmed production stables.

Monday at 9 to 10 ABC will slot "McCaffrey," the hourlong series of a James Bond variety CIA agent, one of the many of this year's pilots which combine "love-'em-and-leave-'em" romance with international espionage. "McCaffrey" stars Darren MaGavin and is produced by Bing Crosby Productions. Collier Young, who produced the pilot, however, will not stay with the series as Young has agreed to fulltime duties as exec producer of "The Rogues," the Four Star entry starring Gig Young, David Niven and Charles Boyer which is being slotted Sundays 10 to 11 on NBC.

At 10 Monday, as well as 10 on Thursdays, ABC hopes to sell "Peyton Place," based on the book and 20th-Fox movie, as a two-a-week half-hour serial. P&G, which was given first opportunity to buy, withdrew for fear of "risky" association with the Grace Metallious story whose small town motif was based on a plethora of sex. While Benton & Bowles' Lee Rich assured client P&G that ABC would naturally present a "tamer" version of the well-known story, P&G felt that the public image of "Peyton Place" would override its most zealous continuity acceptance efforts. Rich is now pitching the show to client S. C. Johnson.

Since "Peyton Place" has been screened—on a selective basis—to prospective advertisers for a full month and has apparently failed to obtain an order only because of the title association, ABC has just concluded some fast consumer research which, according to its salesmen who present it to agencies, shows none of the negative sex overtones which P&G felt implicit in the title.

The 10:30 time reverts to the stations. With ABC programming to 11 p.m. only on Tuesdays (and possibly Friday if "Arrest" is cut to 60 minutes), the ABC affils are looking forward to hypoed national spot business next season. Ditto the film syndicators who are already hard at work to license off-network reruns on a market-to-market basis.

On Tuesday ABC remains stet with its highly successful World War II "Combat" and "McHale's" until 9 p.m. At 9 ABC will slot "Wendy and Me" with George Burns narrating a situation comedy about an ex-airline stewardess played by Connie Stevens. The 9:30-10 period is expected to go to Warner Bros. "No Time For Sergeants," again based on a movie, with Sammy Jackson playing the w.k. Andy Griffith role of the farm boy turned soldier. "Fugitive," a solid hit, naturally remains in the Tuesday 10 to 11 period.

On Wednesday ABC will continue with the early evening sequence of "Ozzie & Harriet" and Patty Duke. "Ben Casey" moves down to 8:30-9:30 to make room for an expected Ford order for "Royal Bay," produced by Four Star, which Danny Seymour of J. Walter Thompson wants slotted at 9:30 to 10:30. Joan Crawford and Charles Bickford make intermittent appearances in this dramatic series which is set in a coastal community. Wednesday 10:30 goes back to the stations.

$6,000,000 Donna Reed Deal

On Thursday ABC will ride with its present 7:30 to 9 "Flintstones," Donna Reed and "My Three Sons." Donna Reed, ABC's highest rated show, which ABC has reacquired from Screen Gems for next year in a more than $6,000,000 deal involving reruns and a still to be selected hourlong SG series for the '65-'66 season, returns at 8 Thursdays for its seventh season. At 9 Thursday it'll probably be "Bewitched" (see box), at 9:30 "Three On An Island" and at 10 "Peyton Place."

On Friday, ABC has revised its earlier plans to schedule "Johnny Quest," the Hanna-Barbera live action-cartoon treatment, at 7:30 p.m. "Quest" is now slotted for 7 to 7:30 Sundays. With General Mills, which was offered first opportunity to sponsor the series, having turned it down, ABC is looking for other prospects. Friday 7:30 to 8:30 will be occupied by "Wagon Train," which is reverting to the hour form. "Burke's Law" remains 8:30 to 9:30. ABC will reschedule "Arrest and Trial," probably in a cutdown 60-minute version, in a Sunday to Friday 9:30 to 10:30 switch which was suggested to the web by JWT's Danny Seymour in an effort to get "Arrest" clients — Libby, McNeill & Libby, Liggett & Myers — and Seven-Up — away from the high-rated "Bonanza." If "Arrest" is cut to an hour, as planned, then 10:30 to 11 will revert back to the affils.

On Saturday, "Alexander the Great," a Selig Seligman-helmed wholly-owned ABC production, will be telecast 7:30 to 8:30. Through the depiction of Alexander's conquests from 332 to 328 B.C., ABC hopes to compress the epic spectacles of Alexander's palace retinue and Cecil B. DeMilledize exploits on the small tv tube. "Alexander" will run in lieu of MGM's "Great Bible Adventure" whose $500,000 pilot, in which Hugh O'Brien plays Joseph, is better regarded as the prototype of specials as opposed to a every-week exposure.

At 8:30 Saturdays Welk continues another season. Ditto the "Hollywood Palace" 9:30 to 10:30 (which has been building its share-of-audience), thus giving ABC an additional year to amortize its investment in the theatre originally acquired for the now-cancelled Jerry Lewis telethon.

As they say, "next year is a new ball game."

Dailies

lookout for capable reporters. The costs of publishing are so high today that we can't afford to train men. The cubs go to weeklies and suburban sheets. When they prove themselves, they can always find on opening on a metropolitan city desk. But the competition is heavy and it's hard to locate a well-trained newshound before some other paper tags him."

"There are plenty of so-called newspaper men around town," Bud Lewis, publisher of the Herald Examiner noted, "but as in every other business top hands are always short."

"Good newspaper men are very hard to find," Aggie Underwood, City Editor Herex, added, "I am looking like mad, right now, for a rewrite man and a good beat man and I can't find them. Do you know what happened when the Examiner folded? We offered most of these people jobs on the Herald-Examiner and they turned us down in favor of severance pay. They wanted to take their chances on finding other jobs in order to get that hunk of money. And — they found jobs, with the exception of a few who don't fit my needs today. Do you know anyone to suggest?"

Ben Rettick, publisher of Valley Times Today, stated, "A qualified reporter who can do a job is really hard to find. When I can take a man off the desk of a downtown paper, I probably pay more than Guild salary, although we are not a Newspaper Guild paper. And I just finished talking with a man who is just the man we need, but he makes so much money with a multiple operation (a la Gene Sherman) that I should be working for him."

Since last August, Rettick has snatched Charles Grimes from the copy desk of the L.A. Times, and managing editor Jean Cowles from another paper.

"The journalism schools have not been turning ouf competent, well-trained cub reporters for 20 years," Rettick added. "The only place to find a good man is on the staff of another paper."

This complaint against journalism schools, authentic or not, was repeated time and again. One publisher, however, noted that these schools don't appeal to the best writers today.

Part of the problem, everyone admits, concerns the difference between Guild scale of Publictsts and Newspaper employees. Senior publicists collect $258.82. Senior reporters approximately $160 give and take a few dollars. Rewrite—$7.50 additional, night reporters $5.

Literati

Liz and Lucy Tell All?

Ruth Waterbury's biography, "Elizabeth Taylor; Her Life, Her Loves, Her Future," will be published in March by Meredith Press.

It will be the first hardcover biography of the star, and is based on Miss Waterbury's personal acquaintanceship with Miss Taylor from her teenaged years on, as well as years of research.

Lucille Ball will tell all to Betty Hoffman, mag writer (Ladies Home Journal, McCall's, etc.), who collabed on the Arthur Murray, Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. and other memoirs. Prentice-Hall's Stu Daniels set the deal on the Coast last week. Comedienne's autobiog will be called "Lucy."

Playboy's Fleming Buy

Playboy has acquired a new "James Bond" novel by British mystery writer Ian Fleming to be published in three installments in the April, May and June issues, entitled "You Only Live Twice," purchase price $35,000.

The new book, an adventure story set in Japan at the present time, will be issued later this year in both hard and softcover editions by the New American Library.

Last spring, Playboy printed Fleming's "On Her Majesty's Secret Service," which since has become a national best-seller, in a prepublication serialization.

Musical Editorships

Bill Targ, long editor-in-chief at World, joins Putnam's as senior editor next week under Peter Israel, ed-in-chief, who had succeeded Howard Cady. Latter resigned to rejoin Holt, Rinehart & Winston, from whence he joined Putnam's but in turn resigned last week at HR&W.

Arthur Cohn, religious book editor, is succeeding Cady as top editor at Holt.

A. L. Hart, long ditto at Macmillan, has resigned. Gerald Gross is overall v.p. of the trade book division.

Since the L.A. Times Mirror Co. takeover of World Pub., on a stock swap (as ditto with New American Library), exec editor Aaron Asher has taken over Targ's duties.

Koeberlein Vice Free

Leo Koeberlein, present city editor of the Pittsburgh Press, has been named managing editor of the Scripps-Howard paper in Pittsburgh to succeed Victor Free who will retire on March 8. Thomas Wheatley, Koeberlein's assistant, will move up to city editor and his job will be taken by Ronald Hart.

Free racks 40 years in newsprint, of which Scripps-Howard got 29. He came to the Press eight years ago from the Indianapolis Times where he served as news editor and managing editor. He was magazine editor of the Press until 1956 when he became managing editor.

Koeberlein joined the Press in 1937 after graduating from the U. of Pittsburgh.

Literary Treasure Trove

Priceless books and manuscripts have been found in the Royal High School, Edinburgh. Among the finds are hand-written letters by Sir Walter Scott, the novelist, who attended the school, and Thomas Carlyle, the philosopher and writer.

Last cataloging at the school was done in 1907, but over a period of years many gifts have been received. No record was kept of every book in the library. There were 9,000 volumes in the library when the new catalog was started.

Underhill's Appointment

Jacob B. Underhill, 37, a former associate editor of Newsweek and onetime correspondent in the Albany Bureau of Gannett News Service, appointed an assistant press secetary to Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, at an annual salary of $20,000. He is expected to work chiefly in the Governor's N.Y. City office. The other assistant press secretary, Daniel F. Barr (ex-Albany Times-Union), is stationed in the capital city.

Gov. Rockefeller's press secretary is Robert L. Manus, erstwhile Binghamton newsman and subsequently an aide of Averell Harriman when the latter was chief executive.

Max Wilk's Wow

"Help! Help! Help!" by Max Wilk (a commuter from Hollywood to Ridgefield, Conn.) (Macmillan; $4.95) is a wondrous collection of atrocity stories concerning the American domestic. Anyone who has attempted to engage and sustain a servant in any category will salute Wilk for puncturing the "aristocracy" of the do-nothings who currently control the lives of a formidable segment of the nation's population.

Here is a handbook for the long-suffering employer who pays and pays and pays, only to be cut down in the face of friends and family by the incumbent hireling. Here is jovial evidence, compounded with sufficient strength and venom to restore the usefulness of Liberia. Possibly the only person who may patently resent this all-too-documentary volume may be Shirley Booth. Her tv "Hazel" belongs to Wilk's rejects. Rodo.

Reynolds' Hula Sheet

Donald W. Reynolds, owner of the Donrey Media Group, which owns 13 daily newspapers and five tv stations, among other interests, has bought the Hilo, Hawaii, Tribune-Herald for a reported $1,000,000 from the Honolulu Star-Bulletin.

The daily, which serves Hawaii island, has a circulation of about 10,500.

CHATTER

ord business just before World War II as a secretary at Asch Records, a pioneer folk music diskery founded by Moses Asch. During the war, Asch Records was merged with Disc Records and in 1947 the company went bankrupt. Miss Distler bought the assets for $6,000 and, with Asch, founded Folkways Records and Service Corp. She became president of the firm and Asch was the director.

The new diskery provided recording outlets for such singers as Woody Guthrie, Cisco Houston and Huddie Ledbetter (Lead Belly).

In addition to its folk pitch, Folkways released a series of records for children, an ethnic series and various spoken word, sound effects and science records.

She is survived by three brothers.

CLAUDE HULBERT

Claude Hulbert, 63, comedian, died Jan. 22 in Sydney, Australia, on arrival there following a cruise which he hoped would improve a bronchial ailment.

Hulbert, a polished exponent of the downtrodden, "silly ass," dude school of comedy, was the younger brother of Jack Hulbert. After success with the Cambridge U. Footlights Club, he turned professional and made his first West End hit in "Primrose" in 1924.

Hulbert later scored in a string of musicals such as "Kid Boots," "Sunny," Oh, Kay!", "Coo-ee," "Dear Love," "Follow A Star," "The Hulbert Follies," "Panama Hattie, "The Wizard of Oz" and "Sauce Tartare."

For much of his career he devoted himself to broadcasting with his wife, Enid Trevor, his brother Jack and with "Those Four Chaps." He also recorded and made many films. Between bouts of ill health he ran some launderettes and guest-starred in stock.

Survived by wife and two children.

MADLAINE TRAVERSE

Madlaine Traverse, 88, who portrayed lead roles in silent films, died Jan. 7 in Cleveland. She retired in the early 1930s when klieg lights seriously injured her eyesight, threatening blindness.

During her film career she appeared in silent edition of "Ben Hur," "Beyond the Horizon," "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and "Gambling for Souls."

Cleveland-born actress, whose real name was Madlaine Businsky, started in British stock companies. Moving from London to New York, she married Max Traverse, a stage manager, who died in 1906.

After going to Hollywood to fulfill a William Fox contract, she made a series of hotel dance appearances with Rudolph Valentino, then just an unknown dancer.

Survived by two sisters and two brothers.

PUSSY DeCARMO

Pussy DeCarmo (Passidonio DeCarmo), 63, who billed himself as "The World's Strongest Little Man," died Jan. 19 in Pittsburgh after a long illness. He was a legend in Pitt and it is difficult to separate fact from the many stories he told about his career. He was four feet, two inches tall and weighed 80 pounds.

In his time, DeCarmo was a midget wrestler, circus comedian, a comic cop at Conneaut (O.) Lake Park and a nightclub act. He said that he modeled for the cartoon character, "Sneezy", in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." He was a powerful man and often lifted a 300 pound man for fun.

Born in Portugal, he came to the U. S. in 1915. He was married twice to normal sized women and is believed to have a son and daughter. He has a brother in Portugal.

GERALD JAMES

Gerald James, 77, actor, died Jan. 5 in Southend, England. He was the grandson of David James, who built the Vaudeville, London, and ran "Our Boys" there for over 1,000 performances in the '90s.

After working for years with George Edwardes' Daly's productions and then at the Royal, Huddersfield, James became a resident manager of the Northern Theatre Circuit.

Early in the 1930s he switched to pix, as resident manager in various cinemas. Later, he was secretary to Folkestone Entertainments Committee.

forward to him assurances there was no segregation, he and the other two vidpix stars would fulfill their commitment. Jimmy Kelly, AGVA's coast rep, had said that AGVA in N.Y. was sending Landon such assurances, and it was expected that the three stars would honor their contracts.

Landon had commented, "if we get a guarantee with the proper language—not Mickey Mouse style—that there won't be segregation, we will appear," adding, "if they will put all seats on sale for anybody, we will keep our date.'

However, it was apparent in a subsequent conversation with Heibroner that this would not be done.

Heibroner said as far as he was concerned, the main point involved was that the contracts were broken and the stars and their agents had the same facts and knowledge regarding the Jackson arena at the time the pacts were inked. Michael North, who booked two of the performers, and Clyde Baldschun, Landon's former agent, had produced shows in the same arena and were aware there was no change in policy, he charged.

Consequently, the radio station promoting the event is preparing legal action against each of the actors on grounds they breached the pact.

Booking was for $19,258 of which the actors' agent in their behalf accepted $9,000 "of our money, which they still have," he added.

At this point, however, as a result of the publicity ensuing from the NAACP press conference, "the entire south is up in arms," he said. Letters have been received from throughout the south protesting the action of the stars and the entire incident, mail coming from as far as Virginia, he said.

"We have no hope of salvaging the show. Nobody would come to watch them after all this," the promoter declared. "When Blocker told the NAACP it was "repugnant, it was like waving a red flag to the people down here," he said. "There is no possibility of them drawing a crowd now, he added.

"AN ABSOLUTE DELIGHT"

"Well, the Americana's Royal Box has certainly started the New Year with a solid bang. In booking PEARL BAILEY, it has itself the swingin'est show in town. Pearlie Mae is an absolute delight, a 'pro' who comes on with a wild sense of humor, beautifully relaxed manner and a keen sense of showmanship.

"From her most appropriate opening number, 'Breezin' Along With The Breeze', to her signoff 'Bill Bailey,' PEARL uncorks every trick in the book. She throws dozens of ad lib lines into her jump tunes, makes small talk with the femme ringsiders ('Strega or Strego, honey, long as it does the job, that's what counts'), and constantly kids with the boys in the band (the brass bit, which has her sitting in the arc of the bass as the bass plays, is wild.)

"In those strange, wailing tones that recall New Orleans jazz laments. Pearl grows serious with some effective warbling on 'Birth Of The Blues,' 'Melanchooly Baby,' 'That Old Gang Of Mine,' and the plaintive 'Poor Butterfly.' A PEARL OF A SHOW BY A JEWEL OF AN ENTERTAINER."

SEVENTH AVE. AND THE LOUIS BELLSONS

"Seventh Avenue north of Times Square is the special province of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bellson these nights. At Seventh Avenue and 48th Street, Mr. Bellson, a celebrated jazz drummer who has been featured with Tommy Dorsey and Duke Ellington, is leading his 16-man band at the Metropole Cafe. Four blocks north, at Seventh Avenue and 52d Street, Pearl Bailey, who is Mrs. Bellson, is displaying her offhand charm in the Royal Box of the Americana Hotel.

"It is no coincidence that the Bellsons happen to be in town at the same time. Since their marriage 11 years ago, they have successfully defied the seemingly inescapable show business tradition that a marriage between people with separate careers consists largely of separations.

"For Miss Bailey, this means giving up the best drummer she ever had.

"As a result, Louis Bellson is once again free to show off his remarkable skill at propelling a big jazz band. He is an unusually sound and orderly drummer who gives his band an extremely resilient rhythmic foundation and, in his solos, manages to display his trip-hammer virtuosity within a carefully and deliberately constructed framework that disdains any irrelevant byplay.

"The band he is leading at the Metropole has a crisp attack.

"Meanwhile, in the Royal Box at the Americana, Miss Bailey continues to exhibit her mastery of casual throwaway comedy as she sings, talks and dances her way through an act that changes only in minor details from year to year.

"She digs into her bag of 'Pearlie Mae's Risque Songs' for such gems of philosophy as 'From Mouton to Muskrat to Mink' and she rouses memories with 'Takes Two to Tango,' 'Legalize My Name,' and that most characteristic of all her songs, 'Tired.' Through it all flow her inimitable offhand conversations, which seem just as spontaneous today as they did 5, 10 or even 15 years ago, when she first thought them up."

PEARL BAILEY NAILS DOWN HER STAY IN THE ROYAL BOX

"As Pearl Bailey lazily explains it, she's just gotta make good in this current singing engagement in the Americana Hotel's Royal Box, because she has no place else to go for the next few weeks.

". . . Obviously she won't have to shop around for another place, because last evening's dinner audience for her premiere braved a bomb threat to be with her . . . Seems that some gent who knew Mayor Wagner was upstairs in the Americana trying to untangle the transit strike threat courteously phoned to advise that the hostel was about to explode . . . Actually the only explosion anybody experienced was Pearl Bailey blasting her musical director, Nick DiMalo, for 'pronouncing' instead of announcing her return to the Royal Box.

"Thereafter Pearlie Mae settled down to a complete devastation of her audience with a ribald recollection of '35 Years Ago.' . . . Some of her other recollections were even more ribald, but nicely spaced between comedy routines like 'New Shoes' and authoritative deliveries of 'Poor Butterfly.' . . . Although she obliged with 'Tired' and 'Won't You Come Home Bill Bailey,' her opening night audience was still hoping for some selections from 'House of Flowers' when she took leave. But she left her audience laughing and wishing, which is a great trick . . . Better call well in advance for table reservations in the Royal Box for the next few weeks."

"WONDERFUL"

"Hot, blue, hip, happy or smootchy—you name your musical mood, and there it is these nights at the Americana Hotel's Royal Box, all made wonderful by the voice of the great Pearl Bailey. This is Pearlie Mae's first club date hereabouts in more than two years and ought not to be missed except for dire emergency.

One caution. She bowed in Mon. and is staying only five weeks so better reserve like quick. There's a $4 cover weeknights and $5 on Fris. and Sats."

"EXUBERANT"

". . . a rewarding evening at the Americana's Royal Box where the ever exuberant PEARL BAILEY whooped it up for all of us in song and merrie chatter and kept the big room in an uproar. We dropped into three or four other places to find them fairly deserted."

PEARL OF ENTERTAINERS

"You may think that by now you know every trick in Pearl Bailey's trade and then you discover you were wrong. For right now, at the Royal Box, she has reached the peak of her profession.

"All the skills she has revealed in the past have somehow merged to produce a complete and perfect entertainer. And although her fine talents as a comedienne and her uncanny sense of timing have long distinguished her work, she has developed an added poignance that gives depth to her performance.

"All the fine old rousing songs are dusted off, as usual (how many remember 'Aggravatin' Papa'?), but she also does a 'Birth of the Blues,' beautifully orchestrated by her husband, Louis Bellson, that makes it sound like something completely new. And when she gets to 'Poor Butterfly,' she is remarkably transformed into the 14-year-old Philadelphia girl who won her first amateur contest singing it.

". . . PEARL BAILEY'S got a crowd at the Royal Box. So's her husband, Louis Belson at the Metropole. 'Them two cats got 7th Avenue locked up.'"

Earl Wilson.

New York
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
(Jan. 1, 1964)

"AT THE ROYAL BOX PEARL BAILEY . . . WOW!

"So, who needs anything else now that PEARL BAILEY'S come back home?

"The hip chick with the slick beat opened an engagement before a crowded house last night at the Royal Box of the Americana and made the scene so big that New Years Eve is just going to be the evening after the night before.

"Pearlie Mae was on for more than an hour in her first time here in several years and every minute of that lengthy interval was jam-packed with fun and music.

"She sang her very special songs with that emphasis that her fans appreciate so much. She shared jokes with the ringside patrons, she kidded the band, she radiated so much gaiety that the Royal Box had what was probably the HAPPIEST OPENING OF ITS ENTIRE HISTORY.

"MISS BAILEY'S songs are on the special sude. She began with a conventional version of 'Breezing Along With The Breeze' but that was merely for openers. '35 Years Ago' and 'Aggravating Papa' were unique and delightful.

"Of course, PEARL has a fine voice when she wishes to use it in a straightfoward manner. She sang 'Birth Of The Blues' in a fashion that kept the entire audience soundless — the SUPREME TRIBUTE TO AN ARTIST, especially at the dinner show.

"'Poor Butterfly,' the first number that MISS BAILEY ever sang on a New York stage, was given its just rewards. It's ageless—the delighted patrons applauded as if it was a tune written just for last night.

"Other numbers that exceeded the norm were 'Since I Became A Hussy For My Husband,' 'Legalize My Name' and 'Tired.'

"Pearl sang 22 songs last night, — there wasn't one that didn't elicit great applause. In all truth, every bit of the applause was earned. She was SUPERB."

Nick Lapole.

WHERE MAGAZINE
(January 11, 1964)

"SUPERB TIMING AND WARMTH"

"They're swinging to the Bailey Blues at the Royal Box—Pearlie Mae is weaving her special brand of magic, and before the show is over, the Americana's big blue room is her little oyster.

"Wearing a fur-trimmed black and white gown, Miss BAILEY breezes on stage with her own arrangement of 'Breezing Along' chickles right into an explanation of why 'You Can't Do The Things You Did Thirty-Five Years Ago' and dips down for those throaty BAILEY notes in 'Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone.' She cavorts with the flute player turned straightman in 'Indian Love Call,' and brings sympathetic nods from the distaff side of the audience and laughs from their escorts with 'New Shoes.' Then she settles down to singing the blues as only PEARL BAILEY can sing them.

"Free and easy is the BAILEY paced show, she pokes fun at the orchestra, the audience and herself. She philosophizes about wandering husbands with 'Since I Became A Hussy For My Husband,' and of course there is the perennial plea for Bill Bailey to come home.

"The BAILEY signature is a relaxed manner, superb timing and warmth. As always, PEARL BAILEY, leaves an underlying impression of good humor with her audience."
